CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y. eowtjan89

BOYS GAMBLING FOR PENNIES.

The Fascination of Such Games as "Liner," "Crack" and "Crap."

The luxuriance and magnificence of the gambling establishments of Monte Carlo, Baden and Aix have given the idea that they are the most costly gambling houses in the world. This may in one sense be true, but there is a building in this city which cost more than any of the gaming establishments of continental Europe and which is daily used by gamblers. Players are daily cheated there by chance out of their last penny literally and are forced to leave the place without enough money to buy a meal.

Where is this great building and who are the gamblers? you ask. It is the Federal building, the United States postoffice in this city, and the gamblers are the newsboys all around it. Who has not seen them?

From early in the morning until it is too dark to distinguish heads from tails, between the buttresses of the postoffice, along Mail street and all over the sidewalk, can be seen knots of these little street gamblers anxiously trying their fortune. They have become one of the institutions of the city. It is just as natural that a newsboy should pitch pennies as that he should sell papers, and no one thinks of disturbing him. He has taken possession of the federal building presumably with the knowledge of the officials, and he considers it a trespass on his rights when a pedestrian pushes his way through and interrupts his game. He puts his entire capital into the venture, and many an enthusiastic little gambler, who never dreamed of systems and who never broke a bank, has been compelled to sleep at night in some uncomfortable doorway because he lost his little all at pitching pennies.

To be able to tell those who are interested and who do not know all about this game a reporter hunted up a little chap the other day who had "gone broke on der pavement" and who was anxious to sell all his knowledge of the game for a small consideration. There are, according to this boy's story, two ways of pitching pennies. The first game is called "liner," and it may be played by from two to eight boys. In this game a line is chosen and the players stand a certain distance off and pitch their coppers as near as possible to the line, but not over it. If five are playing they all pitch. Suppose three of them put their coppers across the line and two this side. The pennies beyond the line are lost and must be divided between the other two. The one whose penny lies nearest the line takes all of the pennies, shakes them in his hand and drops them to the pavement. The heads belong to him and the tails to his opponent.

Another and more difficult game is played and is called "crack." It is played just the same as the "liner" game, except that the penny must first be thrown against the wall and made to rebound to that part of the pavement where the chosen crack is situated. This requires more skill than the other game, and only those who are expert ever attempt it.

Another favorite game of these little chaps is called "crap." It is played with a single die and is shaken in the hand, and the opposite player calls "odd" or "even" for the number of spots on the face of the die.

As superstition is to be found among all classes of gamblers, it is also to be found among the penny pitching newsboys, and it takes some queer shapes. Not a lad of them who sells papers will pitch a penny until he has made at least one sale, and the little fellow with the box is just as determined and will not try his fortune until he has had one "shine." Again, nearly all of the boys have their favorite pennies, in which they believe, and they cherish it just as fondly as the late John T. Raymond did his pretentious 1804 dollar, and these pennies are often the one thing about the boys that are kept scrupulously clean. Another, and probably the most peculiar superstition, is that they believe a woman brings them bad luck. If, in playing on the street, a woman passes before a boy who is about to pitch, and between him and the crack at which he throws, he can, if he likes, refuse to throw, and the game is given up and another crack chosen. Why a woman and not a man should be chosen as the omen of ill luck does not appear, but "Dey allus bring de rocky wid 'em."—New York World.

Mystery of Horsehair Snakes.

Have any of our readers ever thrown a horsehair into a basin of water and waited patiently for it to turn into a snake? This seeming absurdity is thus explained by a writer in The Hartwell Sun:

"Our friend asked us if we didn't want to see a horsehair that had turned to a snake. We did, and he drew a bottle from his pocket filled with water, in which was what appeared to be a diminutive snake, five or six inches long, writhing and twisting as if anxious to escape from the bottle. When put in the bottle it was nothing more than a hair from a horse's tail.

"It was then explained that the hair does not undergo change, but that invisible animalcules that generate in the water collect on the hair and make it twist and squirm after the manner of a snake or worm. It is held by good authority that many of these called animalcules have been shown to be plants, having locomotive powers something like animals; the motion, however, is not supposed to be voluntary. But the horsehair makes a first class snake all the same."—Golden Argosy.

Magnetism Found in Deep Wells.

I read in a paper a short time ago an account of a magnetic well, which the writer evidently thought was something wonderful. In reality it is a very common occurrence to find magnetism in drilling deep wells. I have been engaged in the business in this city for eight years, and it is seldom that I penetrate the earth to any great depth without coming in contact with magnetic influences. On withdrawing the auger when it is highly magnetized spikes or other iron substances adhere to it with great tenacity. These veins or streaks of magnetism occur at various depths, and sometimes but a few feet of the stratum is impregnated with it, and on going below its influence is not noticed on the auger. We sometimes encounter magnetism two or three times in the same well.—A. H. Botsford in Globe-Democrat.

TRAINING IN CITY SCHOOLS.

Mechanics Taught to Boys—Sewing and Cooking for Girls—Lectures.

Manual training in the public schools has gained a foothold and aroused an interest that seems almost incredible in the short space of time that has elapsed since it was introduced in New York. The first trial was made in February, and in four months fourteen different schools—the primary, girls' or boys' departments, in the same building or same district, counted as separate schools—were working out the principles established for this industrial work. The idea originated in Russia, and some of the features of it came from the kindergarten methods of Germany. The committee who first took up this new feature of education studied well the work as it was carried on in technical schools in this and other cities. They have striven to leave out all the weak points as they were discovered and produce a system that was superior if possible to any other in existence.

Whether they have accomplished this remains to be seen. They are free to admit that they are still far from having a complete knowledge themselves, and experience is teaching them important things every day. The schools are nearly all private where manual training is taught outside of New York, but as the benefits derived are felt it will undoubtedly come into the common possession of all the institutions of learning. One great fear entertained has been that in establishing it, time would have to be taken from other studies. Anything so unsatisfactory has not been the result. Instead of impeding progress in other studies, it helps them by changing the order of training for the better in every department. Drawing is the fundamental study in industrial training; it is the corner stone of the entire structure of manual work as taught in the common schools. It enters largely into the boys' department of carpentry, and the girls' classes of sewing and cooking.

The girls, if they do not know how to draw straight lines, will hardly be able to sew straight seams, or make proper hems, and in cooking will not be able to know the value of measurement. Drawing has already been taught for some years, so the three new features added in the schools are the workshop for boys and sewing and cooking departments for girls, and there is promotion in these just as in all the other studies.

Naturally a great variety of tools and materials are needed, and even now the supplies are not all furnished. The list for the cooking class is as complete as for a family setting up housekeeping. The great difficulty is in finding the proper teachers for this sort of training. Of course, it is easy enough to procure a good carpenter, or a good cook, or a good seamstress to show how to work in these departments, but the thing is to find some one who can teach these different branches—a carpenter, for instance, who not only knows how to saw a board, but can explain the reason for sawing it, tell what kind of wood he is using, and where it comes from, besides many other practical points connected with it.

And so in each of the other departments. But means will undoubtedly be found to meet each want as time goes on. The children take a great interest in manual training, and this is a great incentive to teachers. The girls are allowed to have a small repast made of the things that they have cooked or helped to cook, and this increases their interest in the performance to a vast degree. Then, too, they are inspired to try experiments at home, which is, of course, exactly what is desired by the founders of the work.

The principal of one of the best public schools for girls has made reading aloud a feature of her school—not elocution, but reading in a simple and intelligent manner. She herself as a reward of merit reads to the girls once a week on Friday afternoons—not Sunday school stories or set pieces from school books, but standard works. In that way she hopes to interest the scholars in literature, a study to which little time is given in the public schools.

It has been felt for some time that the teachers where this new manual has been adopted ought to have some training, too. They were assembled by the board of education in the hall of the building belonging to this body to hear a lecture on the subject. A second meeting was presided over by Dr. Paul Hoffman, the assistant superintendent, who has the manual training in charge. That gentleman has been a physician, an Arctic explorer, and is pronounced a man of genius—the right man in the right place. He gained the confidence of the teachers at once by his earnestness in stating that he knew something more about the subject than they did, but not much. He was thoroughly interested in it, and would work day and night if need be, in order to gain knowledge on the subject.

On them as well as himself depended the success of the work. He thought the way to teach manual training was to begin in the most primitive manner and demonstrate everything in the most practical way. He wished a child to "know" that a cube was a cube, not "believe" that it was because he was told so. In teaching, the sense of feeling could be called largely into play, and the child must be taught how to see, not what to see. He must feel of a cube, its edges and its points, and find out why it was a cube.

"Children," he said, "are great imitators and believe what you tell them. If you take a block of wood in your hand and say, 'Do you see this lump of iron?' each child will answer 'Yes,' when it is as plain as possible that the lump of iron is a block of wood."

We would have the children taught to draw with a free hand, not painfully and carefully by measurement. The method of teaching, writing and shading the letters has caused the children to use the middle finger in such a strained way that in many instances it has been found to be longer than the middle finger on the left hand. The eyes of school children are also being injured by the way they hold their books or their slates. His desire was that the scholars should become men and women, strong bodily and physically, before anything else, and he believed that this teaching would aid them in that.—New York Press.

CURE OF

CANCER and ULCERS.

Judge T. C. McLendon writes to the Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga., under date of February 14, 1888: "About three years ago, Jerry Bradley, a colored man, had a cancerous sore on his face, near the right eye. It caused him a great deal of pain, and he lost the sight of the eye, but was finally cured of the cancer by the use of Swift's Specific. This case is well known in Wilkes Co., Ga, where he lived (near Danbury), and of this case, I, myself, had personal knowledge."

Mr. L. Cox, of Arkabutla, Tate Co., Miss. writes, February 24, 1888: "I suffered a great deal from old ulcers for six years. Your medicine was recommended to me, and after using six bottles, I was completely cured. I never saw its equal as a Blood Purifier. My neighbors will use no other. Your medicine does even more than you claim for it. I have known it to cure cases which were thought to be hopeless. It is the best medicine made."

Mrs. A. M. Goldsmith, No. 674 Warren St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes, February 22, 1888: "I commenced using S. S. S. about three years ago. I had suffered with a sore throat for over a year, when I commenced using your remedy. I used a great many other remedies with no good results. My little girl, also, had sore fingers; it commenced from the quick, and then the nails would come off. We doctored for over two years, and when I commenced using S. S. S. I thought I would see what it would do for her. I am thankful to say that it entirely cured her. It is the best remedy I know of for the blood. I really believe it was the means of saving my life. The doctor told me I had a throat disease similar to General Grant's. I cheerfully recommend it to all suffering from disordered blood. I use it now as a tonic whenever I think I need it."

Mr. B. F. George, Milford P. O., Ellis Co., Texas, writes: "I had a cancerous wart or mole on my eyelid, as large as the end of my thumb, which had the appearance of cancer, causing me much pain and inflammation, from which I suffered a long time. Seeing the S. S. S. advertised I commenced using it, and after the use of a few bottles the sore dropped out, my cancer was gone, and I was entirely relieved."

Mr. G. W. Pettis, of Aiken, S. C., writes: "I was a sufferer from cancer of the breast, and had been under the treatment of three physicians, but it did me no good. It was so bad that I had to stop work. After taking a course of S. S. S. I was entirely cured."

A Specimen of "Reform."

The democrats engaged in building the Croton Aqueduct for New York city have succeeded in stealing more to the square foot than the boldest thieves ever before accomplished, excepting of course the democrats of New York city. Civil Engineer Craven has testi fiedas to the utterly imperfect work, the character of which was winked at by bribed inspectors. These men are all for Cleveland and reform, and are especially anxious that the tariff bill of Mr. Mills should pass. The whole business of this aqueduct construction is a burning shame, and yet these people ask to be continued in power in a national administration. It will be remembered that when they overhauled the books they learned that the administration under the republicans had been honestly administered. The people wanted a change, said they. The people want it now. They wish to change back to honest men in public places. If public office is a public trust, the experience of four years will convince the people of this country that that is long enough to trust the democrats in public office. The New York aqueduct is a splendid specimen of democratic reform.

Mistake somewhere.

The Argus says that it is a notable fact that of all the presidents, since the adoption of the federal constitution, who received a re-nomination by their respective parties, including Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Lincoln and Grant, not one of them was defeated. And thus it will be by Grover Cleveland, whose re-election is inevitable.—Times.

How about John Quincy Adams? and Martin Van Buren? John Quincy Adams was elected president for four years from March 4th 1825. He was renominated, but was defeated by Andrew Jackson, who had 178 electoral votes to eighty-three for Adams. Martin Van Buren was elected president for four years from March 4th, 1837; he was unanimously renominated by acclamation for the succeeding term, but was snowed under by William Henry Harrison, who had 234 electoral votes to sixty for Van Buren. Grover Cleveland will hardly secure a re-election on the ground that every renominated president before him has secured one.

Gen. Sheridan.

It was stated at his residence on the afternoon of the 12th that he had passed a good night the previous night, and had been sleeping quietly most of the forenoon; also that his appetite seemed to be improving.

Gen. Sheridan's mother died at Somerset, Ohio, June 12th.

Maine Republican Convention.

The Republican State Convention of Maine met in Portland on the 12th inst. It was the largest convention ever held in that city, fully 3,000 persons being in the hall, including 1442 delegates of 1448 entitled to seats.

Hon. A. P. Wiswell of Ellsworth was appointed chairman. A strong protection platform was adopted, and on a ballot for a candidate for governor Hon. Edward C. Burleigh was nominated, receiving 775 votes.

Tourist and Pleasure Travel.

Renewed Assurances of Speed, Comfort, Safety and Luxury to all Going West Via Chicago.

Parties planning a summer trip, should "remember not to forget" that the Great Rock Island Route is the only line that runs fast limited vestibule express trains of palace cars (daily each way) between Chicago and Council Bluffs, Omaha—on the direct highway of transcontinental travel. Round-trip tourist tickets at greatly reduced rates, include the paramount advantages of this Vestibule Train (the finest in the world) to and from points in Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Montana and Wyoming. Sales every day during the season of 1888. Round-trip tickets also (at similar low rates) to and from Colfax Springs, Spirit Lake, Lake Minnetonka, and other popular resorts less remote, as well as hundreds of localities of interest to artist, sportsman, tourist and invalid.

The Great Rock Island assures to all holding its round-trip tourist tickets the safest, speediest and pleasantest journey imaginable in its magnificent vestibule trains between Chicago and Rock Island, Davenport, Des Moines and Council Bluffs, either going west or coming east. Avoid, therefore, the discomforts of lines having inferior accommodations. See that your ticket (which costs no more) reads via the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway, and enjoy the luxuries of first-class travel.

AFFAIRS IN KITTERY.

KITTERY POINT, ME., June 11th.

Yesterday was "White Sunday" with us. The Point is now a beautiful garden, and as fragrant as nothing but lilacs and apple blooms can make it. The grove called "The Oaks" is a delightful walk at sunset. The wild flowers are more numerous than ever, and a great variety may be found there.

The Pepperrell opened last Tuesday. Mr. Starr and wife of Litchfield, Conn., are the first arrivals. Mr. Starr has his steam yacht with him again this season.

Many of the rooms at the Park Field are engaged, and the prospect is fair for a full house early in the season. Miss Bertha Paul will be in the dining room at the Park Field hotel this summer.

The Ordione place on the Bartlett road, formerly the Weeks place, has been sold to parties in Gloucester, Mass.

The Williams place at the Corner is to be sold soon, we hear.

Rev. Edwin Phillips will move his household effects into the Christian parsonage this week, and preach his first sermon as pastor of that parish next Sunday.

Children's day was observed at the Free Will Baptist church yesterday. The church was decorated with ferns and flowers, and among the leaves and plants were cages of singing birds. The choir was of children, and the sermon by Elder Wakely was particularly adapted to the little ones who occupied the front pews. The concert last evening was very entertaining; the children did well, and looked very pretty in their white dresses among the leaves and flowers. Miss Millie Williams sang a solo, and Miss Gracie Williams and Mrs. Fannie Mitchell a solo and duet. Miss Rose Wakely sang a very pretty duet with Miss Williams. We wish all Sundays might be Children's Days.

Mrs. M. J. Willams and daughter are in town before going to the Oceanic for the season.

Mrs. Sarah F. Eaton is visiting her daughter in Malden, Mass.

Mr. William Mugridge died yesterday morning after a brief illness. He was cared for by his daughter, Mrs. Paul. AUNT MOLLY.

KITTERY POINT, June 12th.

We have much missed in the Gazette for several weeks "Aunt Molly's" bright letters from the Point, and on enquiring why she did not favor us with her usual choice and quaint sayings, the reply was, "O, she has gone to North Kittery on a 'whaling' expedition, to be gone nine weeks," from which it was inferred that she was teaching a term of school.

Mr. Lorenzo Fletcher, on Molly Miles' avenue, has repainted his house; it is looking quite nice and cozy in its spring suit.

Mrs. R. Bowman has given her house a spring suit also; it is looking very fine.

Mrs. Carrie Tobey has returned home from a pleasant visit in Boston.

Capt. Richard H. Seaward left home this morning to join his vessel in Newburyport; his wife accompanied him, and will make the voyage with him to Washington, D. C.

The former residence of the late Capt. Samuel Amee is being extensively repaired.

Mrs. H. Call has recovered her usual health, so far as to take a morning stroll in her garden. It is good to see our neighbors enjoying this delightful spring weather, when everything around us speaks so plainly of Our Father's tender care.

The Freewill Baptist cemetery is being made beautiful by loving hands decking, with flowers and garlands, the graves of their dear ones.

Mr. Watson of Medford, Mass., has purchased the house and land of the late John Fernald, and will build thereon.

Mr. Lafayette Frisbee has put up a new stable, painted his house outside and in, and has had a general putting in order of his extensive buildings. He is very pleasantly situated, and we hope will enjoy living in them, as his neighbors do in looking at them and at the thrift everywhere apparent, denoting the industry and energy of our young townsman.

Mrs. Mary J. Williams has sold a house and land to Mrs. Katie Frisbee for $550. A. O. S.

YORK VILLAGE, ME., June 11th.

The Sabbath school of the First Congregational church of York held Children's day exercises on Sunday evening last. Mrs. C. C. Barrell, a superintendent, led the responsive readings, and managed the affair in a admirable manner. The singing was of the best, as also were the recitations, etc. A large number of persons were present.

The Methodist Sabbath school it is thought will soon have a concert.

Old York Lodge, I. O. G. T., gave a strawberry festival on the evening of June 6th, strawberries, ice cream and cake were in demand, and were plentifully served. This being the first festival of the season at York, it was well attended.

Mr. W. M. Walker and several others of York Village are having street lights put up before their residences or places of business, which is a great improvement. J. E.

Don't Wait

Until your hair becomes dry, thin, and gray before giving the attention needed to preserve its beauty and vitality. Keep on your toilet-table a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor—the only dressing you require for the hair—and use a little, daily, to preserve the natural color and prevent baldness.

Thomas Munday, Sharon Grove, Ky., writes: "Several months ago my hair commenced falling out, and in a few weeks my head was almost bald. Tried many remedies, but they did no good. I finally bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and, after using only a part of the contents, my head was covered with a heavy growth of hair. I recommend your preparation as the best hair-restorer in the world."

"My hair was faded and dry," writes Mabel C. Hardy, of Delavan, Ill.; "but after using a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor it became black and glossy."

OFFICIAL NOTICE!

— OF —

The Atkinson House Furnishing Co.

— FROM THE —

HEADQUARTERS AT PORTLAND, MAINE,

To those who are contemplating the purchase of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

GREETING:

On and after June 1st we shall STOP PREPAYING the FREIGHT on GOODS SOLD by us, and we respectfully request that those who have dealt with us, and who have been BENEFITED by the PAYMENT OF THIS FREIGHT which in itself in the past three years has amounted to some

30,000 DOLLARS,

Will order what GOODS they require for this SPRING, from us this month, and please order as early as possible. And to those who intend buying

Silver-ware, Window Shades, Drapery, Dinner Set,s Toilet Sets, Stoves and Ranges, Feathers, Feather Pillows, Spreads, Blankers, Chamber Sets, Parlor Suits, Carpets, Lounges, Easy Chairs, Mattresses, Springs,

And anything else in HOUSE FURNISHING, can be BENEFITED to the extent of the freight to their depot, by buying from us this month. We have always PREPAID THIS FREIGHT FROM OUR OWN PROFITS, as we have invariably made the price on the

Furniture, Carpets,

Etc., lower than could be bought for elsewhere. There has always been a great advantage derived by our prepayment of the freight because we in every instance GUARANTEE the SAFE DELIVERY of the goods, and if there has ever been a fight to make with the railroad, we have done it, or in other words if you have received a

CHAMBER SET, PARLOR SUIT, Chair, or Range,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

That was damaged by the railroad, we have replaced it with another piece, and taken our chances to get the breakage from the road. There are items worthy of our close consideration, and especially at this time of year, be wise and order during this month,

And Save Yourself the Freight from Portland to your Depot, no matter where it is located in the State of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

We believe we are the only HOUSE FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT IN NEW ENGLAND WHO HAVE ADHERED STRICTLY TO THIS PLAN OF PREPAYING THE FREIGHT ON EVERYTHING SHIPPED BY US. We mean by this that while some other houses have shipped the goods, and allowed you to pay freight and afterwards send them a bill and then dicker on it for some time, We have invariably paid out the cash before the article left our freight sheds at Portland. And now notwithstanding the fact that we expect to lose a great deal of business by this this year there seems to be no other way to convince some people of the difference between OUR PAYING THE FREIGHT before the articles leave here, AND OUR CUSTOMERS PAYING THE FREIGHT after the articles get to the depot, and then having to write backwards and forwards over the matter. We wish to deal with perfect fairness and frankness in this matter, consequently we give you another month to make your selection, and to fill orders that are already placed. Now if you want a

KITCHEN RANGE, or a CHAMBER SET, or PARLOR SUIT, or CARPETS, WINDOW SHADES, DRAPERY CURTAINS,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

Kindly come and see us at once, or if you can not come, please write us for Catalogues and Descriptions of these Goods, and we will do our very best to please you in every one. Remember we carry COMPLETE HOUSE FURNISHINGS. There is scarcely a thing that you require for your homes that we do not keep, and we sell the same and shall continue to sell the same for cash, or a quarter cash, and the balance by the week or month. This notice applies TO ALL OUR STORES, and we have written to each of our MANAGERS to this effect, consequently there will be no more freight prepaid from our Bangor Store, Rockland Store, Auburn Store, Bar Harbor Store, Biddeford Store, nor from the Headquarters at Portland, after the 31st day of May, 1888.

Kindly get your orders in before June 1st, if you wish to save this freight.

Respectfully, the Public's Ob't Servants,

THE ATKINSON HOUSE FURNISHING CO.,

Headquarters Cor. Pearl and Middle Streets, Portland, and Branches at Auburn, Rockland, Bangor and Biddeford, also Bar Harbor for a short time.

THE WEATHER.

For New England to-day:—

Warmer, fair weather, winds light and variable.

BASE BALL.

The Portsmouth club went to Nashua on the 12th, and defeated the reconstructed Nashuas by a score of fifteen to ten.

Do not forget the great base ball game on the South street grounds this afternoon at half-past three o'clock, between the home club and the Salems, of the New England League. The visiting club is close to the head of the list in the New England contest, and the Portsmouth nine will have to do big work to win. There should be a large attendance, as the game will certainly be a fine one.

THE RAILROAD HEARING.

The hearing upon the petition of the board of directors of the Portsmouth Horse Railroad was held at the court house on Tuesday forenoon at ten o'clock, as appointed; Samuel Emery, Esq., city socicitor, appeared for the railroad, and Hon. Calvin Page for the opponents. On motion of Mr. Emery the hearing was adjourned for one week, to convene at the same place; he stated that he was not expecting any opposition to the proposed location of the rails, and was not prepared to go on under the circumstances.

"ZOZO" TO-NIGHT.

This evening one of the most pleasing and amusing spectacular extravaganzas ever put on the stage will be presented in Music hall—"Zozo, the Magic Queen." It has been here several times, and always gave the utmost satisfaction. The stage pictures are beautiful, the dresses gorgeous, and George H. Adams alone makes fun enough for one show. There are a large number of people in the company, and much of the scenery, many of the fairies' costumes, and other accessories, are new this season. See advertisement.

THE CAR MURDER.

The mystery surrounding the death of Jere. Sinclair in the mail car was solved at Bangor on the 11th, when Hayes, one of the three clerks, testified before the coroner's jury that deceased and Sellon were not on good terms; that Sellon called Sinclair hard names, at which the latter went to Sellon's end of the car, clinched him and threw him back on the sorting table, whereupon Sellon caught up a knife and struck the fatal blow. The jury found that Sinclair died from being stabbed by A. G. Sellon.

In the municipal court at Bangor, on the 12th, Albert G. Sellon was arraigned for manslaughter, waived examination, and was held in $50,000 for trial. Hayes was held in $500 as a witness.

CIRCUS AND "WILD WEST."

King & Franklin's Circus and Wild West Show will give two entertainments in this city on Thursday, the 14th inst., in the afternoon at one o'clock, and in the evening at seven. Performing ponies and stallions, gymnasts, clowns, Indians, cowboys, rope walkers, etc. Admission twenty-five cents. Street parade in the forenoon.

POLICE COURT—BATCHELDER J.

TUESDAY, June 12th.

Thomas R. Gannon, charged with breaking and entering, (continued case,) waived examination, and was held in $700 for the grand jury. In default of sureties he was committed to jail.

PERSONAL.

Superintendent and Mrs. Morss, of Richards avenue, are entertaining as guests friends of Mrs. Morss from Hull, England.

Mr. William Sullivan, who has been at home in this city for a few days from Manchester, where he has been employed for the past four months as night clerk at the Elm house, will leave Portsmouth the last of this week for Williamstown, Mass., to occupy a position in the Mansion house of that place during the summer. Mr. Sullivan was employed at the same hotel last season.

Mr. Harrie W. W. Jackson and family have taken rooms at the Park Field hotel, Kittery Point, for the summer, and will leave the Rockingham for that place on the 20th inst.

Capt. I. H. Washburne, U. S. M. C., and family, will leave this city in July for Scarborough beach, Me., to pass the season.

Mr. E. Herbert Banks of York Village, who has been employed as clerk in Flynn Bros.' store on Market street, this city, has resigned, to take charge of Putnam's passenger barge, running between York harbor and the station. Many of his old friends will be pleased to see him back at his former business.

Mr. George B. Wilson, formerly hospital steward at the navy yard, now studying medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, arrived at his home in Kittery on the evening of the 12th inst.

Miss Lucy Salter, who removed with her mother's family to Los Angeles last year, finds the climate injurious to her health, and with her friend, Miss Littlejohn, has returned to New York, intending to remain permanently in the east. Miss Salter while in California suffered a serious attack of nervous prostration.—Penny Post.

The officers of the Department of New Hampshire, G. A. R., have accepted the invitation to dedicate the soldiers' monument in this city on the 4th of July.

Col. Simon R. Marston has accepted the position of marshal of the G. A. R. division of the July 4th parade.

Capt. J. Albert Sanborn has been appointed chief of staff for the 4th of July, and has accepted.

It is reported that a large school of mackerel was seen off the mouth of this harbor on Tuesday. Some of the schooners that are vainly hunting for mackerel off Cape Cod would like to see them.

The aldermen are considering the propriety of calling a public meeting to discuss the horse railroad question.

Mrs. Celia Thaxter has leased for three years the former Akerman building, corner of State and Penhallow streets, and it is being fitted up for a winter residence.

It is said that when the Mayor read that part of his inaugural address last August which related to streets and said, "It is not anticipated that any extraordinary expenditure will be required in this department during the coming year," the Major smiled and remarked sotto voce, "Perhaps not; but that's all he knows about it."

A gentleman representing the "Royal Conclave of Knights and Ladies," a new secret benevolent order, or co-operative insurance organization, will on Thursday evening of this week, in Franklin hall, give a public explanation of the aims and working of the order. It is chartered by the state of Massachusetts; pays sick benefits to members, proportioned to the amount of insurance, which cannot exceed $3,000; and is claimed to possess some features more favorable than are offered by any similar organization.

KITTERY, ME., June 12th.

After a long abstinence from writing, enforced by pain, we again take up the pen, though it is still with difficulty that we wield it.

Messrs. Jesse Lewis and Herman Spinney, two enterprising young men of North Kittery, will open a fruit and confectionery store this week in the building opposite Trefethen's block at the Foreside. They will also keep bread and pastry, cigars, tobacco, and small beer. The store has been neatly fitted up inside, and we see no reason why they cannot do some business there.

The X. L. C. R. dramatic club gave a first-class entertainment and strawberry festival in the 2d Methodist vestry on Monday evening last; there was a good attendance, and the receipts were liberal.

The death of Oliver Traipe on Monday morning last removes another of our old-time residents from our midst; and where are the young men and women of to-day who expect to reach the ripe age of some of these old settlers?

No bandannas in ours; it savors too much of anarchism; the stars and stripes are good enough for us.

Mr. James D. Plaisted is having a fine new barn built on the site of the old one which he recently had taken down. Some of the old frame and boards will be used, otherwise the building will be entirely new; and it will stand in the opposite position from the other. When completed and connected with the house by a long shed and carriage house, the buildings will be one of the finest sets in that section of the town. SUB ROSA.

ELIOT ITEMS.

ELIOT, ME., June 12th.

The summer-like weather of the past week has been just what vegetation wanted, although it makes a great impression on us, we having had no warm weather to speak of before. The grass is giving promise of an extra crop of hay, should the season continue favorable. The gardens of early vegetables are looking finely, especially in the upper part of the town, among the large farmers. Leander Plaisted will have green peas by the 28th of June, and new potatoes by the 1st of July. Augustus P. Shapleigh and Henry C. Hammond expect a great crop of nice strawberries; their vines are loaded with green berries, which will soon be ready for the market.

Winfield E. Tripp arrived in town on Friday last from the west, where he has been living for six years past. Mrs. Tripp arrived about six weeks ago. They will remain until the last of August, with Mrs. Tripp's parents, Mr. Timothy Dame and wife.

The Methodist Sunday school of South Eliot will observe next Sunday as "Children's day." Rev. W. F. Marshall will preach a sermon to the children, which will also be beneficial to the elders, at two in the afternoon; the church will be decorated with birds and flowers. In the evening the school will give a concert at 7:30 o'clock, to consist of readings, declamations, singing, etc.; a cordial invitation is extended to all, to attend both services, and a large attendance is hoped for.

Miss Isa B. Remick returned home on the 9th inst. from Brookfield, Mass., where she has been teaching in a primary school. Miss Remick is very much liked as a teacher, by children and parents.

Mrs. Howard E. Spinney and daughter arrived home on Monday, the 4th, from Chelsea, Mass., where they have been visiting Mrs. Spinney's sister, Mrs. M. S. Spinney. HARRY.

Mr. Editor: I see by the Chronicle that the Kearsarge engine has been sent to Manchester to be repainted. Good. Now if the engineers would only expend a little money on the Col. Sise engine, it would be appreciated; and it looks as if a new suction hose would not be any detriment to the engine. FIREMAN.

The Hotel Atlantic at York beach, C. B. Hildreth & Son proprietors, opens for the season on Thursday, the 14th inst., the day of the Boston & Maine railroad excursion complimentary to the press of New England. A large number of the press-gang will dine at the Atlantic.

Forty teams are now at work on the grading of Goodwin park. It is hoped to have the work completed this week.

Rather a singular position for our City Solicitor to appear in, as counsel for a coroporation of foreign capitalists against the petition of the tax payers of the city, in regard to the location of the rails of the horse railroad.

There is no fool like an old fool! Yes there is! It is the young fool who knows every thing and persists in suffering with a severe cold rather than take that wonderful remedy. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

Assistant Pastor Halliday, of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, has resigned.

All is quiet in Hayti, contrary to previous reports.

The popular blood purifier, Hood's Sarsaparilla, is having a tremendous sale at this season. Nearly everybody takes it. Try it yourself.

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and we ask you to try Hood's Peculiar Sarsaparilla. It strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. The peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation of the vegetable remedies used give to Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar curative powers. No other medicine has such a record of wonderful cures. If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other instead. It is a Peculiar Medicine, and is worthy your confidence. To Itself

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS. The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture of these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.

Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogues free.

PIANOS. Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos, that they are superior to all others. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN PIANO STRINGER," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.

A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and tuners, sent, together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant.

Pianos and Organs sold for cash or easy payments; also rented. tm7

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often disuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

Price 25 cents per bottle.

What a High Official Has to Say About the Condition of the People—Some Serious Facts and Figures.

[Herald.]

"It is wonderful what figures will show." Such was the remark of a high official in the State Department to a representative of this paper. "How many really rich men do you suppose there are in New England? Very few. But how many do you think there would be if people were physically and mentally sound and vigorous? New England people are active, restless and ambitious, and therefore neglect themselves. Not one man or woman in ten is in perfect health."

"Official figures show this, do they?"

"Precisely. There seems to be a New England disease. People do not seem to think that headaches, or tired feeling, or 'blues,' or loss of appetite, or nervousness mean anything. Then, the first thing they know they are in bed and on the road to death.

"Do many die of this disease?"

"Thousands. Henry Wilson, Charles Sumner, Wendell Phillips and Governor Bodwell are among the number. James G. Blaine is also on the road, and his trip abroad is in the hope of recovering health."

"But what do you find to counteract it?"

"Very little. The only reliable medicine so far discovered is Hunt's Remedy. The faculty of one of our leading medical colleges, knowing the composition of this medicine, have been recommending it for some time, and the results have been wonderful. I know three ladies and one gentleman (one of the latter a state officer), who have been entirely cured by its use. I wish everybody might know more about it and use it."

Such facts and figures, and from so high a source, should prove invaluable to thousands whose success in life would be much greater were they physically and metally sound and vigorous.

CITY OF PORTSMOUTH, MAYOR'S OFFICE, April 16th, 1888.

GEORGE E. HOUGDON, Mayor.

Mr. W. M. Williams finds the beneficence of snow fully manifested in such a climate as that of Siberia, where a temperature of 70 or 80 degs. below zero—or 32 or 40 degs. below the freezing point of mercury—was recorded last October. The snow, coming early in the season and being an almost absolute non-conductor of heat, serves as an effective clothing for the soil, which is thus protected from so low a minimum temperature as it occasionally reaches in England with the air at 15 or 20 degs. over naked ground. Hence the paradox of Siberian vegetation, which is so luxuriant in the summer, when the heat of the long days is very intense.—Arkansaw Traveler.

How Ostrich Eggs Are Hatched.

The ostrich egg is very delicate and will not keep its vitality more than thirty days. Now, as the laying lasts a couple of months, it is evident that half of it becomes worthless for sitting and can serve no purpose except as curiosities in bazars. It is, therefore, the business of man to provide against this improvident character of nature and utilize what is wasted by that force. No occasion to go into detail about incubators; the principle is well known. Practically they are padded boxes, each holding fifteen to twenty eggs and heated by hot water, which can have its temperature readily under control. The eggs are taken away as laid, one always being left in the nest. Each one is numbered and dated, and a list made out with its weight and description of the parents. They are kept in a dry room till the necessary number is obtained, when they are placed in the box and the heat is applied. The temperature is 40 degs. centigrade at first, 89 degs. at the end of eighteen days, and then 86.5 degs. to the finish. During the whole process each egg must be turned upside down every day at a regular time. This is absolutely necessary.

About the fifteenth day the eggs are examined to see which are impregnated and which not. This is done with a box containing a lamp and a reflector, in front of which is an opening which fits an egg supported on the outside by a little shelf. If the egg is clear it will not hatch; if opaque, except at the larger end, where the air chamber is, it goes back to the incubator. Sometimes the egg is rotten, in which case the gas formed within forces the liquid through the shell and turns it yellow. After forty days the greatest attention must be paid day and night to listen to the noise of the chick. On the forty-third day a small hole should be made in the shell near the air chamber, which has already been marked with a pencil. Next day this hole is enlarged so as better to notice any movement inside. When this is seen the shell must be broken, the membrane torn away and the chick freed, taking care to use the greatest delicacy in every movement. The chick is wrapped up and kept warm for twenty-four hours, when it has a very small lot of finely chopped greenstuff with a few bread crumbs. On the third day it gets a little milk; on the sixth a little grain with the vegetables and a little water to drink.—All the Year Round.

Tragedy of the Pet Dog.

I had been to a picnic luncheon with some friends in a glade near the lovely valley of Kujiar. We walked back, having our dandis (light palanquin) carried behind us; and when dusk began to fall we put the dogs which had accompanied us into the dandis, knowing it was no longer safe for them to run by our side. At length one lady became tired and called for her dandi. It was brought and set down for her to enter. As it touched the ground the little dog jumped out to welcome his mistress; but in a moment his pretty gambols were cut short. Like a flash a great creature sprang into the road, and snapping up poor little Prim, vanished with the rapidity of thought down the steep hillside.

We felt thunderstruck, and stood for some moments in horrified silence, gazing down into the bushes where the gliding form had disappeared; but nothing was to be seen or heard. The elastic tread of the leopard left no sign or track, and so noiselessly had it passed that we could not tell whether it had slipped at once to the bottom of the ravine or whether it was then lying only a few feet below us hidden in the brushwood. The latter we imagined to be the case from the sudden silence that fell upon the other dogs, which, instead of whimpering as before and rebelling against their imprisonment, now cowered, mute and terrified, in the cushions of the several dandis. Poor Prim must have been killed by the first clutch of the cruel claws, for he never uttered a single cry. We hurried home, grieving much over his dreadful fate, and the gentlemen of the party immediately returned to the spot with their rifles and beaters, but nothing was then to be seen of the leopard.—Chambers' Journal.

Convenience of the Telephone.

One has to go to other cities in order to thoroughly appreciate the revolution brought about by the use of the telephone. In cities like Cleveland, Detroit and Rochester all the well to do people have telephones in their dwellings, and the useful instruments are made to serve instead of letters, visits, and the employment of messengers. The ladies use them quite as much in the routine of household life as our down town men do in business.

After breakfast in the morning a provincial lady who has a telephone is apt to closet herself with it for a half an hour or more, during which time she finds out what the grocer has that is good to offer, sends her orders, connects with the butcher, and tells him what she wants; rings up her dressmaker and has a delightful chat over trimmings and flounces, and then calls upon one after another in her circle of lady friends, and gossips with each and all precisely as she would if she were making a social round in her carriage later in the day. The average New Yorker has scarcely any conception of the usefulness of a telephone as it is employed in other cities.—New York Sun.

Racial Elements of Russia's Army.

Probably the Russian army is the most heterogeneous in the world so far as its ethnology is concerned. From the information on the point just issued by the Russian statistical department we learn that of the 227,906 recruits levied in 1885, the racial composition was as follows: Russians, 169,053; Poles, 17,913; Bulgarians, 406; Tcheks, 12; Lithuanians, 6,800; Letts, 3,424; Greeks, 155; Moldavians, 2,350; French, 1; Germans, 3,572; Armenians, 142; Bohemians, 39; Georgians, 3; Jews, 10,011; Karchans, 309; Tchouds, 20; Esthonians, 2,604; Laps, 1; Moravians, 1,707; Cheremissans, 704; Votiaks, 841; Zyrians, 283; Permians, 68; Voguls, 5; Chuvachas, 1,529; Tartars, 4,508; Bashkirs, 3,017; and about 100 belong to three other races or tribes. In all, then, the Russian army comprises 32 different races, or at least tribal elements, among which it is noteworthy neither Ossetians nor Circassians are represented, so far at least as these recruits are concerned.—St. James' Gazette.

Advice to Story Writers.

If you will take any good and popular novel, you will almost always find that the story in its simple form is quite old. It is the setting which makes it new. Love, constancy, courage, faith, patience, endurance, forgiveness, and their opposites, are themes which are as old as the green hills. In skillful hands they are ever new. The generations come and go; with all of them in succession the old stories are acted again; in every one the old stories are told again by novelist, poet, dramatist and painter.

Do not strive, therefore, too anxiously about getting an original story. Be contented at the outset with a simple theme. On the other hand, do not take one which has been recently used, and with great success.—Walter Besant in London Atalanta.

Gen. Grant and His Horses.

Gen. Grant was noted for horseback riding, and posed more than once for an equestrian statue. His favorite horse was Cincinnati, and was a very noted horse, chiefly because the president rode him. President Grant had a large number of horses in his stable, but, in the interest of truth, it must be said that any competent judge of horseflesh would not point to them with pride. Candor compels me to say that they were of all sizes, shapes and conditions, excepting such as the president of the United States should own. In this connection it might be remarked that the horses the sultan of Turkey presented to Gen. Grant, as well as those made a gift to James Gordon Bennett, were anything but a creditable lot of Arabians.—Washington Letter.

Beauregard of La., and Jubal A. Early of Va. To those interested the returns are very attractive. The First Capital Prize of $150,000 was won by No. 57,515, sold in fractional tenths at $1 each sent to M. A. Dauphin, New Orleans, La. Two tenths were paid to M. A. Kelly, Pittston, Pa.; one to Mrs. G. E. Coleman, St. Louis, Mo.; one to J. W. Yates, No. 612 G St., N. W., Washington, D. C.; one to a depositor in the La. Nat'l Bank, New Orleans; one to the City Nat'l Bank, Dallas, Tex.; one to Dr. R. Quinney, Anderson, Tex.; one to Geo. H. Ashe, Galveston, Tex.; one to American Nat'l Bank of Kansas City, Mo.; one to A. Phillips, thro' T. W. House, Houston, Tex. No. 71,402 drew the Second Capital Prize of $50,000; it was also sold in tenths at $1 each; three paid to Anglo-California Bank, L'td, San Francisco, Cal.; one to Mrs. P. T. Robinson, 428 Prades St., New Orleans, La.; one to Col. R. H. Porter, Birmingham, Ala.; one to J. B. Bliner, Dunlinson, Oo.; one to Miss Frances A. Hoke, Smithsburg, Md.; one to H. Bunning, Moweaqua, Ill.; one to John Harrington, Houghton, Mich. No. 85,349 drew the Third Capital Prize of $25,000, also sold in fractional tenths; two were paid to the City Nat'l Bank of Cairo, Ill.; two to M. Wallgurski, New York, and the rest went elsewhere. Nos. 84,352 and 90,405 drew the two Fourth Prizes of $10,000 each which were sold in fractions and scattered all over the world. On July 10th the grand drawing takes place when the First Capital Prize will be $300,000, whole tickets costing $20 and fractional parts proportionately. Do not forget to catch hold of this chance.

The Stops of an Organ,

With such important functions as the liver, are of course productive of serious bodially disturbance. When it relaxes its secretive and distributive activity, bile gets into the blood, and tinges the skin and white of the eyes with yellow, the bowels become constipated, the tongue coated, the breath sour. Then come headaches, vertigo and congestion of the organ, accompanied with pain in its vicinity or under the right shoulder blade. Shall blue pill be the remedy sought? No, for mercury in any form is pernicious. What then? Experience indicates Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as the true remedy for inactivity of the liver. It not only relaxes the bowels without pain, but has a direct stimulating effect upon the hepathic gland itself, the seat and origin of the trouble. All malarial complaints involves disorder of the liver, and of these the Bitters is the most popular curative. It also conquers dyspepsia, nervousness, rheumatism and kidney troubles.

The usual treatment of catarrh is very unsatisfactory, as thousands of despairing patients can testify. On this point a trustworthy medical writer says: Proper local treatment is positively necessary to success, but many, if not most of the remedies in general use by physcians afford but temporary benefit. A cure certainly cannot be expected from snuffs, powders, douches and washes. Ely's Cream Balm is a remedy which combines the important requisites of quick action, specific curative power with perfect safety and Pleasantness to the patient.

CARE OF PARLOR CARS.

They Really Are Cleaned and Aired for Each Trip, and Stocked, Too.

It would probably be a gratifying assurance to the minds of many travelers to know what great care is taken to secure perfect cleanliness in the more luxurious classes of railroad coaches, known variously as sleeping, drawing room, dining and buffet cars. A conviction is widespread, particularly among women, that the reverse is the case. The blankets that are always so strangely suggestive of cold buckwheat cakes, being of a feel and thickness unlike any other blankets, are vere apt to be viewed with suspicion. As for the pillows, how many women have vowed that they could sniff the hair oil of the preceding user upon them? Why, even bed bug stories have been told of sleeping cars, and the anecdote about dropping a gold dollar in a sleeping car and finding it a month afterward just where it fell, has become such a stock story among traveling men that some of them now actually believe it. In view of all this, there is solid comfort in such a story as Superintendent C. D. Flagg tells about what is done with their cars at the conclusion of every trip. He says:

"Every car, as soon as it is emptied of its passengers at a terminal point, is, as we term it, 'stripped' in the yard. The carpets are taken up, carried out, beaten and aired. The seats and backs are taken out and thoroughly cleaned in like manner. The mattresses, blankets and berth curtains are also whipped, aired and, if the weather permits, sunned. The spring beds are freed from the 'bed dust' that gathers from fraying of textile fabrics, by brushing and wiping in all parts. All utensils are carried out, soused in scalding lye and scrubbed. The pillows are beaten and sunned like the mattresses. The floor and oilcloths in the saloons are scrubbed, and all the woodwork, having been scoured thoroughly clean with soap, brushes, hot water and drying cloths, is gone over with furniture polish. About once a week the veneering or painted canvas constituting the ceiling is carefully scoured to cleanse from it accumulations of smoke and clinging dust. The windows are cleansed and rubbed bright. All brass and silver mountings are polished. Dust and stains are as carefully washed from the outside of the car as from the inside. To do that work we keep 100 cleaners steadily at work here in New York, and numbers at other points in proportion to the work required. While all this has been going on, every shred of textile fabrics that should be washed—sheets, pillow cases, towels, napkins and cushion covers—has been sent to the laundry and replaced by a clean stock of articles. Each car has two complete outfits of these things, which are used alternately, one being laundried, aired and packed while the other is on the road.

"Then, when the process is complete, the car has to be retrimmed, by the relaying of carpets and oil cloths; putting in place of the springs, mattresses, seats and backs; stowing away of the pillows, linen and curtains, and, last of all, the thorough washing out of the water tanks and refilling them with fresh water and ice. That last thing is never done until the final moment when the car is about to be drawn from the yard to take its place in the outgoing train. While all this has been going on the railroad people who are responsible for the care of the running gear of the car inspect the trucks, test the brakes, sound every wheel, see that the boxes are rightly packed, and, as far as foresight can go, make sure accidents shall be averted.

"That is the regular routine, scrupulously followed every day upon every car that comes in. No housewife, even in Holland, ever dreamed of such a thorough 'house cleaning' as this is. In addition thereto, the blankets are steam scoured twice a year, which is at least double the attention they get in most hotels. The berth curtains are treated so once a year. Carpets have to be renewed every fifteen or eighteen months, as the hard service wears them out very rapidly. The only variation upon that elaborate process of cleaning are in handling the dining room and buffet cars, where the operations involve thorough purification of all utensils, cleansing of the ice boxes and kitchens and restocking with provisions. One rule always maintains that the primary thing to be done when the car comes into the hands of the cleaners is to take out of it everything that can be taken out. Then every separate piece so removed must be made faultlessly clean before it is put back.

"Each dining room or buffet car has its steward, whose duty it is to report to the assistant commissary immediately upon his arrival what stock he has left over and what he is short of. To verify his report the assistant commissary, who acts as a check upon him, goes through his stock and then makes out, to replace shortages and keep up the supplies, a requisition upon the commissary. That requisition is filled out upon a blank form, on which are specified about 300 articles in constant use on those cars, with spaces left for the addition of more as the conditions of the markets enable increase in the resources of our commissariat. In all the management of this department there is just such a system of checking in and checking out as obtains in the 'stock' room of every big hotel. All groceries, wines, liquors, and other nonperishable goods are bought in great quantities, and kept in the company's store houses for issue upon requisition as demanded; but fresh meats, poultry, game, fish, vegetables and fruits are purchased by the commissary in the markets from day to day, or supplied by contract with dealers, just as such things are provided by the steward of a hotel."—New York Sun.

Death of a War Horse.

When the Duke of Wellington was fighting in Spain there were two horses which had always drawn the same gun and had been side by side in many battles. At last one was killed and the other, on having his food brought to him as usual, refused to eat, but turned his head round to look for his old friend and neighed many times as if to call him. All the care that was bestowed on him was in vain. There were other horses near him, but he would not notice them and he soon afterward died, not having once tasted food since his former companion was killed.—Our Dumb Animals.

Dancing with a Corpse.

Burials alive are far more common in hot countries, where the burial takes place within twenty-four hours after death, than they are here, where one gets, as a rule, a week's grace. In Spain the body is frequently removed to the undertaker's shop a few hours after death. In one of the largest of these establishments in Madrid, some years ago, an extraordinary sight was witnessed. A gentleman was brought in his "casket" one afternoon and placed in the room set apart for that branch of the business. The proprietor lived over his premises, and on this especial evening was giving a grand ball. When the ball was at its height a gentleman in full evening dress suddenly joined the company. He danced with the wife of the undertaker and he danced with the undertaker's daughter, and seemed to be thoroughly enjoying himself.

The undertaker thought he knew his face, but did not like to be rude and ask him his name; but by and by all the guests departed, and the strange gentleman was the only one left. "Shall I send for a cab for you?" said the host at last. "No, thank you," replied the gentleman; "I'm staying in the house." "Staying in the house!" exclaimed the undertaker; "who are you, sir?" "What, don't you know me? I'm the corpse that was brought in this afternoon." The undertaker, horrified, rushed to the mortuary room and found the coffin empty. His wife and daughter had been dancing with a corpse. An explanation, of course, followed. The gentleman, who had only been in a trance, had suddenly recovered, and hearing music and revelry above, and having a keen sense of humor, had got out of his coffin (the Spanish coffin closes with a lid, which is only locked just previous to interment) and joined the festive party. He was quite presentable, as in Spain the dead are generally buried in full evening dress.—The Argonaut.

The Making of Glass Tubes.

"How is glass tubing made?" said a reporter to a large dealer.

"Well, it will not take very long to tell you all I know about it, but its manufacture is surprisingly simple. The glass blower takes a small quantity of melted glass from the pot with his blowing tube, rolls it slightly on a marble slab to give it a cylindrical form; he then adds a small quantity of glass from the same pot and blows the enlarged mass while rolling it, taking great pains to keep the shape cylindrical. If the tubes of large caliber are required, the inside diameter of the cylinder is enlarged and the glass is allowed to cool slightly before drawing. For tubes of very small caliber, such as thermometer tubes, the internal diameter is decreased and the glass is used very warm.

In making a piece of glass tubing the assistant places a ball of glass against the end of the glass cylinder by aid of his blowing tube. Now the men, each holding an end of the glass cylinder by means of their blowing tubes, begin to separate, walking backward. The cylinder is thus lengthened, and at the same time made smaller in diameter. When the tube has attained the right size it is generally too warm and soft to admit of laying it down without destroying its shape; it is then cooled by means of a fan. When it is sufficiently cooled, it is laid upon a series of equidistant parallel blocks of uniform length, where it remains until cool. It is then cut into lengths with a diamond or file. If the tubes are required to resist great pressure or changes of temperature, they are annaled, by plunging them into boiling linseed oil, and then cooled."—New York Mail and Express.

Emperor William's Widow.

A general, who was sent as a special envoy to the funeral of Emperor William, has written to his government that he was wonderstruck at the manner in which her royal and imperial majesty the Empress Augusta held on to her post. The military spirit, he said, extends itself at Berlin even to the court ladies, and braces up among them those who in other countries would reckon themselves invalids. The empress has the petrified rigidity of features of all the august and illustrious personages who, growing old with Emperor William, have survived him. She received in a darkened room, and wore the German widow's cap and double veil, the front part of which was thrown back. The arms of her chair project a little forward, and are arranged by means of an ingenious mechanism to rise to the level of her armpits when when she stands, and thus hold her up. She stood supported in this way when receiving the ambassadors, special envoys and princes who attended the funeral. The latter were legion. Every German reigning house, mediatized or other, sent a deputation of its scions.—The Argonaut.

Largest Loss in the War.

The official casualty lists of the Confederate forces are not so trustworthy as those of the Union side because they have not had careful revision since the war closed, but the tables now accessible show that the northern aim was equally true, and that the northern nerve was equally steady. The Twenty-sixth North Carolina—Pettigrew's brigade, Heth's division—lost at Gettysburg 86 killed and 502 wounded; total, 588, not including the missing, of whom there were about 120. In one company, 84 strong, every man and officer was hit; and the orderly sergeant who made out the list did it with a bullet through each leg. This is by far the largest regimental loss on each side during the war.—W. F. Fox in The Century.

A Truly Grand Achievement.

It is next to impossible to grasp the fact that the telegraph, which now does go around the world, was in 1837 inside a barn or shop at Speedwell, where it was being constructed as a rude model to be exhibited before a committee of congress. Exactly fifty years of the magnetic telegraph from its inception, and it seems as if the world could never have gone on at all without it. When the shop was rebuilt several years ago this room where the first model was built was preserved intact, and the descendants of Judge Vail still cherish it as a memorial of the infancy of "one of the grand achievements which mark the progress of modern civilization."—Globe-Democrat.

Paine's Celery Compound

CURES Nervous Prostration, Nervous Headache, Neuralgia, Nervous Weakness, Stomach and Liver Diseases, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, and all affections of the Kidneys.

WEAK NERVES

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is a Nerve Tonic which never fails. Containing Celery and Coca, these wonderful nerve stimulants, it speedily cures all nervous disorders.

RHEUMATISM

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND purifies the blood. It drives out the lactic acid, which causes Rheumatism, and restores the blood-making organs to a healthy condition. It is the true remedy for Rheumatism.

KIDNEY COMPLAINTS

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND quickly restores the liver and kidneys to perfect health. This curative power, combined with its nerve tonics, makes it the best remedy for all kidney complaints.

DYSPEPSIA

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND strengthens the stomach, and quiets the nerves of the digestive organs. This is why it cures even the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

CONSTIPATION

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is not a cathartic. It is a laxative, giving easy and natural action to the bowels. Regularity surely follows its use.

CURE OF

CANCER and ULCERS.

Judge T. C. McLendon writes to the Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga., under date of February 14, 1888: "About three years ago, Jerry Bradley, a colored man, had a cancerous sore on his face, near the right eye. It caused him a great deal of pain, and he lost the sight of the eye, but was finally cured of the cancer by the use of Swift's Specific. This case is well known in Wilkes Co., Ga, where he lived (near Danbury), and of this case, I, myself, had personal knowledge."

Mr. L. Cox, of Arkabutla, Tate Co., Miss. writes, February 24, 1888: "I suffered a great deal from old ulcers for six years. Your medicine was recommended to me, and after using six bottles, I was completely cured. I never saw its equal as a Blood Purifier. My neighbors will use no other. Your medicine does even more than you claim for it. I have known it to cure cases which were thought to be hopeless. It is the best medicine made."

Mrs. A. M. Goldsmith, No. 676 Warren St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes, February 23, 1888: "I commenced using S. S. S. about three years ago. I had suffered with a sore throat for over a year, when I commenced using your remedy. I used a great many other remedies with no good results. My little girl, also, had sore fingers; it commenced from the quick, and then the nails would come off. We doctored her for over two years, and when I commenced using S. S. S. I thought I would see what it would do for her. I am thankful to say that it entirely cured her. It is the best remedy I know of for the blood. I ally believe it was the means of saving my life. The doctor told me I had a throat disease similar to General Grant's. I cheerfully recommend it to all suffering from disordered blood. I use it now as a tonic whenever I think I need it."

Mr. B. F. George, Milford P. O., Ellis Co., Texas, writes: "I had a cancerous wart or mole on my eyelid, as large as the end of my thumb, which had the appearance of cancer, causing me much pain and inflammation, from which I suffered a long time. Seeing the S. S. S. advertised I commenced using it, and after the use of a few bottles the sore dropped out, my cancer was gone, and I was entirely relieved."

Mr. G. W. Pettis, of Aiken, S. C., writes: "I was a sufferer from cancer of the breast, and had been under the treatment of three physicians, but it did me no good. It was so bad that I had to stop work. After taking a course of S. S. S. I was entirely cured."

Cleveland Elected Him.

A despatch of the 12th inst. from New York says:

It is asserted that the judges of the court of general sessions of this city are greatly annoyed at the apparent neglect of duty on the part of District Attorney Fellows, now absent from the city. It is stated that the business of the district attorney's office is left to young and inexperienced assistants, and that the county is not properly represented in the courts when important cases are on trial. Judge Barrett called, it is stated, a special grand jury at Fellows' request, and it was sworn in last Monday, the 4th; Col. Fellows went to St. Louis on the preceding day, and has not since been heard from by the court; and the grand jury has nothing to do except to pass upon unimportant cases. No testimony in the important cases for which Col. Fellows requested a special term called, has been presented. Judge Barrett declares that if there is any more delay in bringing these cases before the jury he will dismiss the jurors, and give, as his reason for so doing, the deplorable neglience by the district attorney of his duties.

When Fellows was nominated for the position, it was notorious that he was totally unqualified to fill it, and that the sole reason for his nomination was that the then district attorney, Martine, was distasteful to many of the New York democracy by reason of his zealous vigor in prosecuting the "boodle" aldermen and other official thieves. It is also notorious that up to within a short time of the election there was every prospect that the criminals' candidate for district attorney would be defeated by Martine, who though a democrat was supported for re-election by the republicans as well as the better class of democrats, and that his election was only secured by Reformer Cleveland, who wrote a personal letter to the democratic machine politicians of New York, setting forth the administration's eager desire for Fellows' success. No such open and shameless interference in local political affairs by any national executive was ever known before, as was shown by this reformer who regards public office as a public trust, and stigmatizes as "offensive partisanship" the pernicious activity" of federal officials who use their positions to influence local politics. But it answered its intended purpose; it elected Fellows. And if the criminal classes of New York, who are now having so much easier a time of it than they had when Martine was district attorney, do not to a man vote for Cleveland and reform, it will be one of the most glaring exhibitions of gross ingratitude on record.

Fire in Manchester.

A fire which at one time threatened to be the most serious one in Manchester for many years, occurred on the night of the 12th inst. It originated in the laboratory of the Manchester Print Works. The laboratory was a large wooden structure, and in a few minutes was ablaze. It was surrounded by a lumber shed, a storehouse containing several hundred bales of unprinted cotton cloth, and a pile containing 400 cords of hard wood, to which the fire quickly communicated. A general alarm was sounded, and five steamers and all of the hose carriages in the city were quickly on hand. The storehouse was saved in a damaged condition, although the cloth was nearly all ruined. That portion of the laboratory containing the aniline dye works and a large quantity of valuable chemicals was also saved. The fire originated from one of the large chimneys over the retorts. Colonel Benjamin F. Dean, agent of the print works, said it was impossible to accurately estimate the loss, but he thought it would approximate $35,000. There was no insurance, the risk having been regarded as too hazardous to be accepted by the underwriters. Colonel Dean was of the opinion that the work of the corporation would not be delayed more than twenty-four hours by the fire, and the buildings destroyed would at once be rebuilt.

Square Republican Doctrine.

The following are the planks of general application, in the platform adopted by the republican state convention of Maine;

Resolved, That free trade as taught by the British Cobden club and supported by Grover Cleveland and the democratic party, is hostile to the industrial and business intesests of the United States, and that the Mills tariff bill should be opposed by all the honorable and effective influences which the friends of American labor can exert both in Congress and among the people.

Resolved, That it is the duty of Congress to reduce the national revenue to the amount which shall equal as nearly as possible the annual expenditures of the government, including therein a liberal provision for our veteran soldiers and a proper means of national defence, and that this should be done in a way not to impair our republican protective system, which has proved of inestimable value to American labor and our home markets.

Resolved, That for its surrender of American rights and interests in the recently-negotiated fishery treaty, the present national administration deserves the emphatic censure of all patriotic Americans, and that the republican senators are entitled to the thanks of their countrymen for their able and effective efforts against its ratification.

Resolved, That the abandonment of the principles of civil service reform by the democratic administration, together with its utter failure to keep the promises under which it came into power, is a conspicuous example of insincerity and hypocrisy, and merits the condemnation of all good citizens.

Resolved, That the republicans of Maine send greetings to the republicans of Oregon, and rejoice with them in the splendid victory they have just won over the supporters of Grover Cleveland, and for the cause of American labor and the principles of sound government.

Mrs. Mary B. Willard will take a company of young women to Europe this summer for a three months' trip, and will resume the charge of her home school at Berlin in the autumn.

Mrs. Eliza Rudoff, of New Orleans, has been for years the secretary of the Louisina State Pharmaceutical association. Her husband was a druggist, and since his death she has carried on the business successfully.

The petition sent to the New York legislature from the Auburn Woman Suffrage society, for an amendment to the charter of Auburn, N. Y., giving women privilege of voting for school commissioners, passed both houses and became a law.

The New York Herald says that the hand that rocks the cradle made itself felt to some purpose in the recent school election at Morristown, N. J., the women electing their candidate by a large majority.

There is no fool like an old fool! Yes there is! It is the young fool who knows every thing and persists in suffering with a severe cold rather than take that wonderful remedy. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

Richard E. Barnes died in North Conway on the 10th inst., at the age of ninety years, four months and six days. He was the son of a Revolutionary soldier, and a pensioner of the war of 1812.

The popular blood purifier, Hood's Sarsaparilla, is having a tremendous sale at this season. Nearly everybody takes it. Try it yourself.

The United States naval academy at Annapolis has never been so well known to the nation as the military school at West Point, but it now seems likely to get its proper share of public attention. In Harper's Magazine for July there is a full description of it, written by Lieutenant J. D. Jerrold Kelley, U. S. N., with numerous excellent illustrations (several full-page) from drawings by R. F. Zogbaum. Lieutenant Kelley is full of enthusiasm for his subject, and there is a flavor of sea-breeze in his descriptions which prevents them from being at all dry. The life of the naval cadet, apparently, is a busy one, but his lot is not utterly wretched if he happens to have a liking for his profession. He has to take the chance, of course, that at the end of his studies he must accept an honorable discharge and a year's pay because there is no place for him in one of our few ships; but still he can step down and out with a sound and well-stored mind in a strong body, and with the consciousness that he is as fully equipped to make his way in the world as any graduate of a civil college.

Don't Wait

Until your hair becomes dry, thin, and gray before giving the attention needed to preserve its beauty and vitality. Keep on your toilet-table a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor—the only dressing you require for the hair—and use a little, daily, to preserve the natural color and prevent baldness.

Thomas Munday, Sharon Grove, Ky., writes: "Several months ago my hair commenced falling out, and in a few weeks my head was almost bald. Tried many remedies, but they did no good. I finally bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and, after using only a part of the contents, my head was covered with a heavy growth of hair. I recommend your preparation as the best hair-restorer in the world."

"My hair was faded and dry," writes Mabel C. Hardy, of Delavan, Ill.; "but after using a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor it became black and glossy."

OFFICIAL NOTICE!

— OF —

The Atkinson House Furnishing Co.

— FROM THE —

HEADQUARTERS AT PORTLAND, MAINE,

To those who are contemplating the purchase of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

GREETING:

On and after June 1st we shall STOP PREPAYING the FREIGHT on GOODS SOLD by us, and we respectfully request that those who have dealt with us, and who have been BENEFITED by the PAYMENT OF THIS FREIGHT which in itself in the past three years has amounted to some

30,000 DOLLARS,

Will order what GOODS they require for this SPRING, from us this month, and please order as early as possible. And to those who intend buying

Silver-ware, Window Shades, Drapery, Dinner Sets, Toilet Sets, Stoves and Ranges, Feathers, Spreads, Blankers, Chamber Sets, Parlor Suits, Carpets, Lounges, Easy Chairs, Mattresses, Springs, Feather Pillows,

And anything else in HOUSE FURNISHING, can be BENEFITED to the extent of the freight to their depot, by buying from us this month. We have always PREPAID THIS FREIGHT FROM OUR OWN PROFITS, as we have invariably made the price on the

Furniture, Carpets,

Etc., lower than could be bought for elsewhere. There has always been a great advantage derived by our prepayment of the freight because we in every instance GUARANTEE the SAFE DELIVERY of the goods, and if there has ever been a fight to make with the railroad, we have done it, or in other words if you have received a

CHAMBER SET, PARLOR SUIT, Chair, or Range,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

That was damaged by the railroad, we have replaced it with another piece, and taken our chances to get the breakage from the road. There are items worthy of our close consideration, and especially at this time of year, be wise and order during this month,

And Save Yourself the Freight from Portland to your Depot, no matter where it is located in the State of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

We believe we are the only HOUSE FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT IN NEW ENGLAND WHO HAVE ADHERED STRICTLY TO THIS PLAN OF PREPAYING THE FREIGHT ON EVERYTHING SHIPPED BY US. We mean by this that while some other houses have shipped the goods, and allowed you to pay freight and afterwards send them a bill and then dicker on it for some time, We have invariably paid out the cash before the article left our freight sheds at Portland. And now notwithstanding the fact that we expect to lose a great deal of business by this this year there seems to be no other way to convince some people of the difference between OUR PAYING THE FREIGHT before the articles leave here, AND OUR CUSTOMERS PAYING THE FREIGHT after the articles get to the depot, and then having to write backwards and forwards over the matter. We wish to deal with perfect fairness and frankness in this matter, consequently we give you another month to make your selection, and to fill orders that are already placed. Now if you want a

KITCHEN RANGE, or a CHAMBER SET, or PARLOR SUIT, or CARPETS, WINDOW SHADES, DRAPERY CURTAINS,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

Kindly come and see us at once, or if you can not come, please write us for Catalogues and Descriptions of these Goods, and we will do our very best to please you in every one. Remember we carry COMPLETE HOUSE FURNISHINGS. There is scarcely a thing that you require for your homes that we do not keep, and we sell the same and shall continue to sell the same for cash, or a quarter cash, and the balance by the week or month. This notice applies TO ALL OUR STORES, and we have written to each of our MANAGERS to this effect, consequently there will be no more freight prepaid from our Bangor Store, Rockland Store, Auburn Store, Bar Harbor Store, Biddeford Store, nor from the Headquarters at Portland, after the 31st day of May, 1888.

Kindly get your orders in before June 1st, if you wish to save this freight.

Respectfully, the Public's Ob't Servants,

THE ATKINSON HOUSE FURNISHING CO.,

Headquarters Cor. Pearl and Middle Streets, Portland, and Branches at Auburn, Rockland, Bangor and Biddeford, also Bar Harbor for a short time.

ISAAC C. ATKINSON, Gen. Manager.

BASE BALL.

There must have been 1500 persons on the South end grounds yesterday afternoon to see the Salem Witches take a dose of goose-eggs from our "gilt-edged nine." The grand stand was completely packed with ladies and their escorts. A party of Exeter students added to the enthusiasm with their peculiar college yell, while the Portsmouth band played excellent music for a new organization, Colonel Sinclair was there, proving that he's no Jonah. Umpire Mahoney called game at 3:45 o'clock, and from that time until the game ended it was play-ball all the time. There are no star-players in the Portsmouths, but O'Connor deserves praise for the manner in which he fooled such heavy batters as Ray, Prince and Trask of the Salems. The Salems are a good team, but they're out of their class when they play with us; and if the Washingtons want to get out of the National League we'll take their place. There's nothing too good for us. Hey! Leonard? But here's the score:

To the base ball crank of the Dover Democrat. O! Richmond; come off, you're heated.

The south end boys have put up a fine score-board on the left field fence at the ball grounds, which is a great convenience to the spectators.

The Rochester club, of the Interstate League, disbanded on the 12th inst., the management being heavily in debt.

MARITIME NOTES

The steamer Oceanic will commence her regular trips between this city and the Isles of Shoals on Wednesday, the 20th inst. One hundred and five boarders have ordered rooms at the Appledore from the opening of the season, and are expected to arrive that day.

The steam collier Allentown was floated off of Bent's ledge, Buzzard's bay, on the night of the 12th inst., after lightering 200 tons of coal. She seemed to be all right, and was making no water.

The annual spring regatta of the Atlantic Yacht club of New York was sailed on the 12th inst., thirty-six yachts starting, in eleven classes. The breeze was very light. The Burgess cutter Pappoose beat the centre-board sloop Banshee, in the 6th class. In the eleventh class the catboat Bijou beat the British-built cutter Majorie nearly twenty-three minutes.

PERSONAL.

Hon. Frank Jones arrived home from the west on Wednesday afternoon, the 13th inst.

The Brewster residence on Mark street is opened for the summer by Mr. Samuel Brewster and wife of New Jersey.

The family of the late Wm. P. Jones will not be in Portsmouth this summer; their homestead on Court street is for sale.

Deaconess Ransford, matron of the Cottage Hospital, is soon to take charge of the Convalescents' Home at Manchester, Mass., and will be succeeded at the hospital in this city by a graduate of the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Trumbull, the "blacking man," was selling his goods on the parade last evening. Ben Sheppard, the colored banjoist, formerly of this city, is travelling with Prof. Trumbull this season.

A BASE BALL CRANK.

We clip the following items from the Dover Democrat of Tuesday, the 12th inst.:

The Portsmouth Chronicle spoke in a three-line item of the Portsmouths' defeat at Rochester as a game dropped, while the Portsmouth Times did not refer to it at all.

The Dover managers have decided to join the Rochesters, Haverhills and Nashuas in bouncing Portsmouth from the Interstate league. The Portsmouth club managers were the ones to make the $650 salary limit for the clubs, and it is said that they have evidence that Leonard has never paid less than a thousand for his men. If possible they will ask that Leonard be black-listed as a manager.

The Portsmouth Chronicle publishes the score of yesterday's farce there in full, but forgot to do so when the Rochesters defeated the Portsmouth.

Bro. Foster knows how to get up a sprightly, readable and progressive paper, but we do not believe he knows any more about base ball than we do. We have no doubt that all this talk about "foul tips," and "going to first on three strikes," and "sliding to third on called balls," and "stealing a bag," and "the umpire flying out over the centre field fence for a home run," is gibberish to him as much as it is to us. And yet the Democrat has a column or so of base ball news, couched in the correct vernacular, (we suppose,) about every day. There is evidently a base ball crank somewhere 'round the office, but we do not know who he is; we only know it cannot be Bro. Foster.

We do not suppose our Dover brother goes to see the games, either, any oftener than we do; and we never go. We had all we wanted of desperate adventure and imminent peril, many years since; not being a hog, we knew when we had got enough. We own up to admiring a magnificent thunder storm, and we are pleased with a heavy dynamite blast—viewed from a respectful distance; but when it comes to having ribs stove in, eyes filled full of glass from three-dollar spectacles, and new Scotch gingham umbrellas reduced to chaos, by a cannon-shot masquerading under the name of a base ball, we cannot see where the "sport" comes in. If Bro. Foster would like to join with us in a friendly contest where staunch, able boats crack on the muslin in a double-reefed-topsail breeze, or to take part in any other amusement which while healthy and exhilarating is absolutely devoid of danger, we are with him; but we have too high a regard for our personal safety to attend base ball games.

But it is not regard for personal safety alone which keeps us away from the ball field; our love of peace and quietness has something to do with it. Five years or more ago, just after obtaining our legal majority, we joined a church choir, and stuck to the position with the recklessness of early manhood, for nearly five months of unmitigated misery. At the end of that time we abdicated, with a mental resolution never again to be caught in such a scrape; and as it appears to us that the base ballists, with their eternal jealousies, bickerings and back-bitings, can discount any church choir we ever knew, we shall continue in the future as in the past to lay a course that will take us well clear of all base ball perils.

Circus day. Remember the street parade.

We have received from George W. Marston, Esq., formerly of this city and editor of this paper, now living in the west, a very handsome lithograph portrait of Hon. Walter Q. Gresham, one of the many available candidates for the republican presidential nomination. Judge Gresham's picture shows a marked resemblance to Dr. M. F. Wentworth of Kittery, and his republicanism is as pronounced and unyielding as that of the sturdy doctor.

The large tree at the head of Richards avenue, in front of the Shores house, was taken down and removed—totally obliterated, so far as the public are concerned—on Tuesday of this week, by Mr. David S. Lowd. Just why it was felled we are not informed, but there are plenty of other trees in the immediate vicinity, and the absence of this one is not noticeable to the ordinary traveller along Richards avenue or Middle street.

The treasurer of current expenses of the Chase Home for Children acknowledges gratefully the receipt of $8.25, "collection on children's Sunday from the children of the North church Sunday school for the Children's Home."

About—this—time—look—out—for—spontaneous enthusiasm for Cleveland, free trade and reform. Hon. Frank Jones has got home from Mr. Cleveland's convention at St. Louis.

A game of cricket will be played on the grounds at Frenchman's lane on Saturday, the 16th, between the Portsmouth club and the club of North Andover, Mass. Game called at one o'clock.

John P. Lovell of Dover was in this city on the 11th inst., and procured a United States license for the liquor agency of that city.

A Dover paper remarks: "The dedication of the soldiers' monument at Portsmouth on the Fourth will take many down there. Portsmouth this year has a double attraction, a 4th of July celebration, and the only city in New Hampshire where beer is sold."

Republican papers assert that there is absolutely no enthusiasm anywhere among the democrats of New England for their national ticket. The editors of those papers ought to hear how kindly the old-line democrats of Portsmouth speak of Thurman.

Be wise in time, and buy one of those lovely French-finish satteens of Lewis E. Staples. Only fifteen cents; they are worth twenty-five cents.

The Dover Democrat says the report in that city is that all the liquor now sold there is either taken up the river by boat, presumably from this city, or is brought from the Rollinsford depot, large quantities reaching Dover both ways.

The Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, during the week ending June 7th, paid death claims amounting to $132, 873.27, and matured endowments amounting to $23,132.08. Total claims paid during the week, $156,004.35; average daily payments, $26,009.72.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

COMPOUND EXTRACT

TRADE MARK

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and we ask you to try Hood's Peculiar Sarsaparilla. It strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. The peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation of the vegetable remedies used give to Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar curative powers. No other medicine has such a record of wonderful cures. If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other instead. It is a Peculiar Medicine, and is worthy your confidence.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

WE USE SOAP.

WE USE PEARLINE.

DISTORTED HANDS will surely come to those who clean house and wash clothes in the old-fashioned way—with soap. How can it be otherwise? You rub—rub—rub, and you ache—ache—ache. You spend hours inhaling the hot steam and odors which rise from the tub, impregnated with the filth of soiled clothing, and with all this you have not obtained the best results.

WITH PEARLINE a delicate woman can do a large wash. You do not have to rub yourself and your clothes to pieces. You do not have to inhale fetid steam; when finished you are not too tired to see that your work is well and economically done, and that you have saved many hours of woman's hardest work.

JAMES PYLE'S PEARLINE is the modern soap. Beware of imitations.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS. The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Our makers followed in the manufacture $22 TO $900. in these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.

Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their instruments, the fact that at all the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogues free.

PIANOS. Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos, that they are superior to all GRAND & UPRIGHT pianos. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN PIANO STRINGER," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.

A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and tuners, sent, together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant.

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives will an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

STARTLING STATISTICS.

What a High Official Has to Say About the Condition of the People—Some Serious Facts and Figures.

[Herald.]

"It is wonderful what figures will show." Such was the remark of a high official in the State Department to a representative of this paper. "How many really rich men do you suppose there are in New England? Very few. But how many do you think there would be if people were physically and mentally sound and vigorous? New England people are active, restless and ambitious, and therefore neglect themselves. Not one man or woman in ten is in perfect health."

"Official figures show this, do they?"

"Precisely. There seems to be a New England disease. People do not seem to think that headaches, or tired feeling, or 'blues,' or loss of appetite, or nervousness mean anything. Then, the first thing they know they are in bed and on thereon die to death.

"Do many die of this disease?"

"Thousands. Henry Wilson, Charles Sumner, Wendell Phillips and Governor Bodwell are among the number. James G. Blaine is also on the road, and his trip abroad is in the hope of recovering health."

"But what do you find to counteract it?"

"Very little. The only reliable medicine so far discovered is Hunt's Remedy. The faculty of one of our leading medical colleges, knowing the composition of the medicine, have been recommending it for some time, and the results have been wonderful. I know three ladies and one gentleman (one of the latter a State officer), who have been entirely cured by its use. I wish everybody might know more about it and use it."

Such facts and figures, and from so high a source, should prove invaluable to thousands whose success in life would be much greater were they physically and mentally sound and vigorous.

INGALLS'S MANDRAKE COMPOUND

Among the various organs of our system, none perform a more essential part than the Liver and Kidneys, and so many people are afflicted with diseases of these organs, causing the Blood to become impure, that it is our first duty to assist them in their work. This is done in a thorough manner by Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, which is purely Vegetable, and is worthy of a fair trial.

BROKER AND CHINAMAN.

Feats of Mongolian Financiers in San Francisco—A Shrewd Trick.

The Chinese have a well established reputation in California for shrewdness. To observe the Mongolian in the act of counting a goodly pile of American shekels after a hard driven bargain is to see the pig tailed stranger in his most inspired moments of commercial keenness. Any day on Montgomery street in brokers' offices, or where gold dust is bought, one can see the fine financial acuteness of the Asiatic colonist displayed to advantage. An agreement on the price of the gold dust or the rate of exchange is not easily reached. The Mongolian is cautious to a degree, and it is when he thinks that he has secured all that is coming to him that he closes negotiations. Then commences the important task of examining the lucre.

A white trader generally takes up his handfuls of twenty dollar pieces or silver dollars and carelessly tosses them into his pockets or a convenient sachel with the most cursory examination. Not so the suspicious colonist from Cathay. Every piece is closely scrutinized and passed from one hand to another. The edges are scanned and the color of the gold noted, until the whole pile has been observed closely. This is only the preliminary inspection. The gold is fair to the eye, but the doubts of a well conceived scheme to defraud him have not yet been quieted in the Asiatic trader's breast. His ear has to be satisfied, and he begins to jingle the pieces one after the other on the counter till every coin has announced its true character. The result in all probability is that some pieces have been found that shows signs of wear or fail to ring with the clear metallic sound so characteristic of the incomparable twenty dollar pieces fresh from the mint. A wrangle with the broker ensues, and the less perfect coins have to be exchanged for more faultless ones. These substitutes have also to be counted and jingled, and when the cautious Mongolian carries his shadow outside the threshold of the broker's shop he is morally certain that he has avoided deception by the exercise of what he regards as ordinary business sagacity.

The broker on his side, if in the habit of dealing much with Chinese, is unusually cautious and alert. If the money be passing from the Chinaman to him, the broker goes through the same formula. He takes no coins on trust as it were, but scores them all, for experience has shown him that the proverb of all being fair in love and war has been extended by the disciples of Confucius to money matters.

The scrutiny which the careful broker bestows on the coin is only excelled by the attention he gives his Mongolian customers, whose lightness of finger he has learned to regard with apprehension. Shoplifting is a fine art in Chinatown, and sleight of hand performers are abundant. Almost anything, from a diamond ring to an anchor, that they lay their hands on, disappears with magic promptitude. It is a fine study to watch a cautious Hebraic broker, who has been bitten a few times, as he doles out the shekels to a suspicious looking Mongolian financier. Every movement of the Celestial's long and deft fingers is watched, and a restraining hand put upon his claws every time they wander too close to his ample blouse with a load of half dollars. It is only when the final stage of the barter has been reached, and the "wherewith" has been shoved across the counter and all is safe, that the broker's countenance assumes its normal quietude.

It is considered so much the correct thing in China to overreach another in a monetary transaction that no sensible man will accept money by lamplight, and will only take his coin in the broad daylight after an exhaustive inspection by eye, ear and teeth. The best Chinese financiers rely on their teeth to determine the genuineness of a gold or silver piece of money. After banging a suspected coin on the counter or the sidewalk, if he be unable to decide whether it is good or bad, the Chinese financier places the metal between his teeth and leaves the verdict to molars and palate.

Brokers who do an extensive business with Chinese tell some curious stories of the cunning of their Asiatic customers. A down town broker exchanged some money for two Chinese one day not long since and in the transaction saw that he had lost two ten dollar pieces. The Mongolians protested violently that they had not taken the money, and when searched readily turned their pockets inside out. Their hats, shoes, and every corner of their several coats were examined, but the money could not be found and the broker finally let them go, though morally certain they had robbed him. During the afternoon he was pondering over the affair when an American friend who had had considerable experience with the Chinese in Shanghai dropped in. The broker described his loss and recounted how he had cunningly examined the shoes and hats of the suspected Mongolians. The friend from Shanghai laughed.

"The chances are," said he, "the money is stuck under your counter. That's an old trick in China."

On looking under the overhanging edge of the heavy counter the missing coins were found stuck to the wood with some strong Mongolian glue. One of the rascals had rubbed on the soft glue while parleying with the broker, and the other fellow, seizing a favorable opportunity, had stuck the money under the ledge, knowing that the instant it was missed they would be seized and searched.

The Shanghai man explained the trick.

"Those fellows have a confederate who has been here before," said he, "and will be around soon to hook those $10 pieces while he is giving you a fill about wanting to sell gold dust or something. You wait and see."

The money was left sticking to the counter, so that when the confederate came in he might be caught red handed and railroaded to the county jail.

Every one in the office, which is occupied by several persons besides the broker, set himself to catch the thief, and the unexpected result was that the money vanished without any arrest. When the broker returned after a hasty flight across the street for a cup of coffee, he found that the money was gone and no trace of the robber left. The well grounded belief of the detectives is that some one of the half dozen Chinese who dropped in during the afternoon was the confederate of the thieves and carried off the plunder unobserved.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Mrs. Burnett and the Game.

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, talking about "Little Lord Fauntleroy," says: "Most of the scenes in the book are real; that, for instance, in which Cedric undertakes to teach his grandfather baseball. One day the original thought it necessary to instruct me in the great national game. After a great deal of explaining, I was obliged to admit that I was rather stupid. 'Oh, no, you're not, dearest,' protested the little boy, 'you're not at all stupid; but I'm afraid I'm not a good 'splainer, and then, as you're a lady, of course baseball is not very easy to you.'"—New York Tribune.

"Coconut," and Not "Cocoanut."

It may interest readers to know that a recent number of the new quarterly, Annals of Botany, contains a short article by Professor Bayley Balfour upon the correct spelling of this word. He shows that etymology and early authority alike make "coconut" the correct form for the fruit of the coco palm, and that "cocoanut" is merely a relic of the ignorance of those who supposed cocoa and chocolate to be obtained from the coconut. This "ignorance, madam, pure ignorance!" was unfortunately shared by Dr. Johnson at the time when he prepared his "Dictionary," and although he afterward learned otherwise, and in his "Life of Drake" correctly wrote coco, plural cocoes, this was after the publication of the last edition of the "Dictionary" in his lifetime, so that he had no opportunity of correcting his unfortunate and misleading error.

Botanists, however, long continued to use the correct form—some have never ceased to do so—and Professor Balfour now calls upon them to unite in banishing the blundering "cocoa nut," and in putting an end to a mischievous confusion between coco, cocoa and coca, which are the three entirely distinct vegetable products. For coco he is able to cite not only Dr. Johnson's own use as opposed to his Dictionary, but the use of the laureate, who in "Enoch Arden" writes:

The slender coco's drooping crown of flowers.

Dr. Murray is also quoted as writing, "I shall certainly use coco in the dictionary," and treat cocoa as an incorrect form.

It is a well respected maxim: "Accept the advice of competent instructors and be guided thereby." Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is the only safe remedy for coughs and colds. It costs only twenty-five cents.

a man for groaning when he has Rheumatism or Neuralgia. The pain is simply awful. No torture in the ancient times was more painful than these twin diseases. But—oughtn't a man to be blamed if, having Rheumatism or Neuralgia, he wont use Ath-lo-pho-ros, when it has cured thousands who have suffered in the same way? It has cured hundreds after physicians have pronounced them incurable.

"The skill of five physicians could not cure me of Rheumatism which had settled in the hips, neck and shoulders. So intense was the pain that sleep was almost impossible. The first dose of Ath-lo-pho-ros gave me relief, and the third enabled me to sleep for four and a half hours without waking. I continued its use, and am now well."

The Stops of an Organ,

With such important functions as the liver, are of course productive of serious bodially disturbance. When it relaxes its secretive and distributive activity, bile gets into the blood, and tinges the skin and white of the eyes with yellow, the bowels become constipated, the tongue coated, the breath sour. Then come headaches, vertigo and congestion of the organ, accompanied with pain in its vicinity or under the right shoulder blade. Shall blue pill be the remedy sought? No, for mercury in any form is pernicious. What then? Experience indicates Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as the true remedy for inactivity of the liver. It not only relaxes the bowels without pain, but has a direct stimulating effect upon the hepathic gland itself, the seat and origin of the trouble. All malarial complaints involves disorder of the liver, and of these the Bitters is the most popular curative. It also conquers dyspepsia, nervousness, rheumatism and kidney troubles.

The usual treatment of catarrh is very unsatisfactory, as thousands of despairing patients can testify. On this point a trustworthy medical writer says: Proper local treatment is positively necessary to success, but many, if not most of the remedies in general use by physicians afford but temporary benefit. A cure cersainly cannot be expected from snuffs, powders, douches and washes. Proprieties.

Mrs. Parvenu pridedherself upon her attention to the proprieties; so, when she asked the druggist's head clerk what he considered the most efficient remedy attainable for Williamousness, and he handed her a bottle of Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, she noted with manifest pleasure that the wrapper on the bottle exactly matched the color of her morning neglige, and as she always kept her medicine on her dressing case, she was glad to have it harmonize with its surroundings.

LIFE AMONG THE SIOUX.

"Squaw Men" and Half Breeds—Picture Painters—Family Affection.

Among the Sioux may be found many white men who are married to squaws, and who are adopted by the tribe. They are known in frotier parlance as "squaw men," and before the Indians were restricted to the limits of the reservation, accompanied them from place to place in their nomadic wanderings. Of this class a great portion are French Canadians, and many of them are rich in cattle and ponies. Their children are usually bright and intelligent, and when old enough are given the advantage of the mission and agency schools, and taught to adopt the customs of the whites. The government scouts employed at the various military posts are composed chiefly of French half breeds for the reason that aside from their knowledge of the country, they speak with fluency both the Indian and American tongues.

Although the Sioux are not usually very demonstrative in their manners about the trader's store, they can on certain occasions become as noisy and boisterious as "a whole convent when the father Abbot has gone to bed." Among other novelties in the store, we once had an ingenious toy, which consisted of a small, square box, on the top of which were four little images representing negro minstrels, two of whom, seated on tiny chairs, held respectively a set of bones and a tambourine. The other two figures were in a standing attitude. When the concern was wound up with a key, the little darkey musicians began a lusty clattering of the bones and tambourine, and the standing figures would break out in a wild dance, jerking and throwing legs and arms in mirth provoking attitudes of every description. These mimic performances never failed to elicit the wildest applause, the squaws fairly shrieking with delight, and even the most stoical chiefs shouting wy-yu-pah (away up) at the top of their voice.

They are, however, subject to occasional fits of despondency in which "a sadness appears to fall upon their spirits," and I have been informed by educated half breeds living among them that the different lines of paint on their faces signify when they are in love, melancholy, etc. I once passed a period of fourteen days and nights with a young Indian at a point about thirteen miles up the river above the fort, near the mouth of the Cheyenne. My companion was a strong and active young fellow about 24 years of age, by name Ferocious Bear, but his manners greatly belied his name, for a more civil partner I could not hope to find.

One stormy Sunday while sitting by the fire in our shanty, I observed that Ferocious Bear was unusually taciturn. Usually, when about the shanty, he was employed in cleaning his firearms, or with bits of charcoal embellishing the walls of our shanty with pictures of eagles, buffalos, deer, etc. But on this particular day he scarcely touched his breakfast, and up till noon had spoken not a word. When I finally asked what was wrong, he shook his head mournfully and replied that "his heart was very bad." I had with me an excellent field glass belonging to Lieut. Myer at the post, and when the storm cleared away I handed it to the Indian and requested him to take a look at an encampment of his people a mile or so distant. It so happened that he had never before looked through one, and his amazement and delight was unbounded, and his moroseness soon passed away.

The Sioux picture writers or artists are by no means skillful painters—yet some of the decorations on their robes are of very clever designs. Among my collection of Indian curiosities is quite a large picture painted on cloth, representing a dozen mounted warriors bedecked with paint and feathers all ready for the warpath. It was executed for me by an Indian named Black Hawk. He was a participant in the Custer fight and several of his pictures representing the battleground were purchased by Dr. McChesney, of Fort Bennett, and forwarded to the Southsonian institution. The pictured representation of their battles with other tribes are an evidence of their tendency to exaggerate their own prowess. Every solitary Indian represented in these encounters as getting terribly thumped with a war club, or losing his topknot, is certain to be anything else but a Sioux.

A noticeable feature of the Sioux is their affection for their children. A chief, or, indeed, any Indian who is well to do, i. e., one who has many ponies, spares neither pains nor expense to make his little ones happy by lavishing upon them everything in the way of gaudy apparel that barbaric fancy can suggest. Some of the little boys, the pride of their parents' hearts, when mounted on their favorite ponies with embroidered saddle and bridle, and their own persons glittering with ornaments, are a sight to behold.—Sam Parker in Detroit Free Press.

How Servants Are Spoiled.

It is a well known fact that no French or English servant can find a place with her own country people after she has lived in an American family. Good servants are rare in every country, and they are so rare here that a lady, when she gets one, generally turns to spoiling her as the only means of keeping her. The bad servant is spoiled in the hope of wheedling her into doing better. One mistress who pays the modest sum of $25 a month for her cook says that the morning after she has given a dinner party she presents this autocrat of the dinner table with $1.

Another consults the convenience of her cook always before inviting her guests. The demand to go out from one to three times a week is a claim never questioned by the most obdurate of mistresses, but the servant who asks this here would only have a holiday once a month in England and the privilege of going to church once every Sunday. In France the conditions are the same. In this country there must be trouble until some of the women who are obliged to earn a living are willing to have servants and submit to being called by their right name, and not consider that, if they are "helps," they have equal rights with their mistresses. Then, too, the mistresses must learn how to treat their servants with perfect kindness and still without the familiarity that breeds contempt.—New York Press.

SCENES AMONG THE SIOUX.

What the Squaws and Young Bucks Buy. Vain and Fond of Finery.

An Indian who has a bundle of pelts to dispose of is one of the most impatient creatures in the world, and gives the trader no rest till he has exchanged them for such articles as he most covets in the store. In the early morning before sunrise they begin to congregate about the store, and the tired employes yet in bed are aware by the shuffling of their moccasined feet on the front porch that their chances for another nap are decidedly unfavorable. Placing their packs of hides or furs on the porch they wander from window to window, peeping inside to ascertain if anybody is yet astir within. When satisfied that all the employes are yet abed, they contrive somehow to cross the stockade fence, when they pass through the yard to the rear of the store, where the clerks usually sleep. Posting themselves at the bedroom windows they begin a lusty drumming on the panes, accompanied with the ejaculation: "E-nock-o-na-ku-lah' (hurry up, friend). This soon has the desired effect, and in a few moments the door is unlocked and thrown open and the business of trading begins at once.

So great is this morning rush that frequently it is impossible to take time to sweep the floor and dust the goods before the breakfast call. The crowd continues increasing until about 9 o'clock, when the store is literally jammed with Indians, men, women and children, and hordes of dogs. Then what a row of painted faces, nodding plumes and fantastic costumes you see ranged along the counter, and what a Babel of confusion—all clamoring to be waited on at once. A cluster of squaws arrayed in gaudy shawls call the trader's attention to a certain piece of calico, and demand the price, and no matter whether it be high or low his reply is greeted by a chorus of scornful exclamations and derisive laughter. During the process of tearing off the desired amount the trader is made the butt of a series of ridiculous taunts, in which a more proficient adept than an Indian squaw could nowhere be found. But still the throng increases and the noise accordingly. The benches around the walls are crowded, and now they begin to sit in groups on the floor, smoking and chatting. Occasionally a dog fight starts up, which creates a short stampede, until the belligerent canines are fired out.

Some of the peculiarities of the Indians in trade are very troublesome to the trader. For instance, if one sells furs to the amount of $3 or $4 and agrees to take his pay in goods, he usually insists on having the amount in money counted out and given him before he begins to purchase. When he receives the cash he begins to purchase, paying for such articles procured until the whole amount is expended. Presently another steps up and wishes change for $1 in dimes. He then calls for calico, laying down a dime, the price of one yard; when that is measured he continues, putting down a dime at each measure until the desired number is reached, when it is torn off and given him. Even then he is not through with you, for every purchaser, no matter about the extent of his bill, expects "sin-te," which must be a present of some matches, apples, candy or the like.

The squaws are as much given to vanity as their white sisters of civilization, the articles which they covet most being vermilion for painting the face, beads, fancy calicoes and shawls of gaudy colors. Iroquois, a small bugle shaped shell, is much prized and is used for making necklaces and ornaments for the ears. They also purchase a great many fancy articles, such as little hand mirrors, perfumery of various kinds, fancy soaps, etc. Among the perfumery display there is usually a few bottles of bay rum, but should a buck purchase a bottle it is not likely that he would use it for toilet purposes; he would remove the cork and gravely turning up the bottle drink off the contents at a draught. He does the same with flavoring extracts, lemon, vanilla, etc.

The Indians bring a great many curiosities to the store to be exchanged for goods. The squaws are quite tasty in the manufacture of these native ornaments, which consist of knife scabbards, pony whips, moccasins and other gewgaws made of buckskin and worked with beads and porcupine quills. The most interesting article, however, and one which ever commands a ready sale, is the Indian dolls. They are usually dressed in buckskin, in perfect imitation of a brave ready for the war path, with fringed leggings and tiny moccasins, the crown of the head being covered with buffalo hair terminating in a long wisp behind. With faces fantastically painted they present a very hostile appearance. The articles brought in by the men consist of deer heads, deer, antelope and buffalo horns; the latter, however, are now very rare. They also bring pipes, tomahawks, war clubs, bows and arrows, imitation scalps, and petrified remains picked up in their wanderings.—Sam Parker in Detroit Free Press.

Dress Goods in Different Lights.

We have in this store many ways of showing dress goods. All the goods for evening wear are shown under three different lights in rooms fitted up for that purpose. We show the goods first by sunlight, and then they are taken into a room lighted by gas. To the light shades of goods the gas gives a sort of pink rose tint, and in certain colors works a beautiful effect. The same goods shown in the room lighted by electricity take on a lavender tint in place of the rose hue produced by gaslight. This method of showing goods we find very satisfactory to our customers. It certainly has brought thousands of ladies to the city who, under other circumstances, would have purchased their dress goods of the small shops in the country towns.—Clerk in Globe-Democrat.

Saluting the Dead.

Foreigners have a beautiful custom of saluting the dead. Whenever a hearse comes they take off their hats to that silent majesty who cannot respond. The custom in Paris of having the coffin lie in state at the door of the inner court gives one an opportunity. It has moved the heart of many a passerby, this respectful salutation. It is in the veriest spirit of reverential politeness.—Mrs. M. E. W. Sherwood.

CURE OF

CANCER and ULCERS.

Judge T. C. McLendon writes to the Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga., under date of February 14, 1888: "About three years ago, Jerry Bradley, a colored man, had a cancerous sore on his face, near the right eye. It caused him a great deal of pain, and he lost the sight of the eye, but was finally cured of the cancer by the use of Swift's Specific. This case is well known in Wilkes Co., Ga, where he lived (near Danburg), and of this case, I, myself, had personal knowledge."

Mr. L. Cox, of Arkabutla, Tate Co., Miss. writes, February 24, 1888: "I suffered a great deal from old ulcers for six years. Your medicine was recommended to me, and after using six bottles, I was completely cured. I never saw its equal as a Blood Purifier. My neighbors will use no other. Your medicine does even more than you claim for it. I have known it to cure cases which were thought to be hopeless. It is the best medicine made."

Mrs. A. M. Goldsmith, No. 674 Warren St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes, February 22, 1888: "I commenced using S. S. S. about three years ago. I had suffered with a sore throat for over a year, when I commenced using your remedy. I used a great many other remedies with no good results. My little girl, also, had sore fingers; it commenced from the quick, and then the nails would come off. We doctored her for over two years, and when I commenced using S. S. S. I thought I would see what it would do for her. I am thankful to say that it entirely cured her. It is the best remedy I know of for the blood. I really believe it was the means of saving my life. The doctor told me I had a throat disease similar to General Grant's. I cheerfully recommend it to all suffering from disordered blood. I use it now as a tonic whenever I think I need it."

Mr. B. F. George, Milford P. O., Ellis Co., Texas, writes: "I had a cancerous wart or mole on my eyelid, as large as the end of my thumb, which had the appearance of cancer, causing me much pain and inflammation, from which I suffered a long time. Seeing the S. S. S. advertised I commenced using it, and after the use of a few bottles the sore dropped out, my cancer was gone, and I was entirely relieved."

Mr. G. W. Pettis, of Aiken, S. C., writes: "I was a sufferer from cancer of the breast, and had been under the treatment of three physicians, but it did me no good. It was so bad that I had to stop work. After taking a course of S. S. S. I was entirely cured."

A Rich Treat

For the Ladies and Young Folks—A Complete Story by Louisa M. Alcott in the text Boston Sunday Globe—Great Progress—Freckles, etc.

BOSTON, June 14.—One literary surprise follows another. All the ladies and young folks in New England will want to have the next Boston Sunday Globe because it will contain a complete story by Louise M. Alcott, author of "Little Women." The story is called "The Mysterious Key, and what it opened," and is in Miss Alcott's most natural and facinating vein.

The steady success of the Boston Sunday Globe exceeds anything in the records of American journalism. Three years ago (May 1885) the circulation of the Sunday Globe was 6,700. Last month it was 128,340, and the increase still continues.

The next Sunday Globe will have several valuable receipts for removing freckles, and will also tell how to remove superfluous hair. Order it to-day.

Missouri.

A recent number of the volumes of American Commonwealths, published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., is the history of Missouri by Lucien Carr, M. A., assistant curator of the Peabody Museum of Archæology at Cambridge. The book opens with the discovery and early exploration of the Mississippi river; sketches the Louisiana purchase, tells of the Missouri Compromise, and the admission of the state into the Union. Then comes the interesting period of the admission of Texas into the Union, and the Mexican war. Later on, the Kansas troubles, which caused such a marked change in the political power in this country, are retold; and then we have the story of Missouri's loyalty to the Union, and her part in the civil war. The event of the abolition of slavery resulting from the election to the State Assembly of a majority of emancipationists in November, 1862, by means of which one hundred and fourteen thousand negroes, worth for the purposes of taxation forty millions of dollars, who had once been slaves, were by the act of the state made free, is narrated. This was the only one of the slave states which voluntarily and of its own accord abolished slavery. Missouri has passed through periods of exciting history. For fifty years the slave question was a prominent factor in the politics of the state.

The historian has compressed into 371 pages a faithful account of the varied political events of this large state. He has studied carefully many historical and political publications, and given us an authentic, readable book, which will take a high rank among the volumes of this series devoted to the history of states which have exerted a positive influence in shaping our national government, and wherein have been enacted many thrilling events in our political career. Like the other volumes, the book has a map and a well arranged index. Price $1.25.

Uncomfortable Conundrum.

In the national house on the 13th inst., Mr. Bayne of Pennsylvania made a strong point in answer to a recent speech of Mr. Scott advocating the passage of the Mills bill. Mr. Scott said that the business of the country had been practically paralyzed during the time the measure was being considered, because the manufacturers did not know what Congress proposed to do. Mr. Bayne inquired, if business was paralyzed on account of the mere consideration of the bill, what its actual passage would entail? The silence on the democratic side which followed this query could have been sliced up with a knife.

Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb's Excursions to the Yellowstone National Park.

Three excursions to the Wonderland of America—the Yellowstone National Park—are announced by Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb for the summer and early autumn, the dates of departure from Boston being July 23, August 20, and September 10. These tours are planned for the purpose of making a very thorough sight-seeing round of that remarkable region, and ample time is afforded, so as to make the journey in easy stages, with restful halts by the way. This insures not only unusual advantages in the way of sight-seeing, but time enough to do all—both sight-seeing and travelling—in a leisurely manner. The parties will be limited in numbers, and will be under the guidance of experienced conductors, so that ladies need have no hesitation in making the trip without escorts. There is no more delightful excursion than the National Park tours, and every means will be taken to make these trips the best of all. Circulars descriptive of the route (and also circulars of the tours through Colorado and of the "seventeen July trips") may be obtained of W. Raymond, 296 Washington street, opposite School street, Boston.

Now that Mr. Cleveland has secured his re-nomination he is not so much interested in the passage of the Mills tariff bill as before the convention met. The managers of the Bandana Brigade are to confer with the free traders, and see to what extent the latter will come down in hard cash toward the campaign expenses of the revenue reformers. In the meantime the measure will be allowed to drift in Congress under the plea of courtesy to republicans pending their absence at Chicago. Our transatlantic cousins must now make their figures.

MARITIME NOTES

The steamer Oceanic on Thursday towed to the Shoals the Appledore landing stage.

Capt. Ephraim Anderson, well known among the "brickers" of the Piscataqua, arrived here this week in the Sadie A. Kimball, Capt. Burns, quite ill from rheumatism. He procured admission to the Cottage Hospital through the custom house authorities on Wednesday, the 15th, and is well cared for.

Lobsters of fine quality are being brought into this market by the York boats.

Mr. Charles Robinson brought in from Duck island, on the 14th inst., 500 good-sized lobsters, and sold the same to J. O. Downs & Co. He reports no signs of mackerel or bait of any kind at the Shoals.

The weirs off Pocahontas point were taken up on the 14th inst., and will not be put down again until there is a better prospect of getting bait, as this spring's work has been the poorest for many years.

David Slaney, fishing with a small boat, brought in on Thursday 2500 lbs. of fish, for which he received $1.25 per hundred.

The schooner Emily C. Dennison, Garland master, was on Tuesday, the 12th inst., lying at Gray's wharf in Saco with a load of 80,000 bricks for Boston on board, and the schooner James A. Gray, Coleman master, was loading at the same wharf with 100,000 bricks for the same destination.

The steamer Pinafore, Capt. Oscar Laighton, came in from the Shoals on Thursday, and went out on the same day with a cargo of finished lumber.

The schooner J. Frank Seavey, the new vessel now in course of construction for the Dover Navigation Co., is so nearly completed that she will be launched in about three weeks.

The steamer Mount Washington made a trial trip on Lake Winnipeseogee on the 12th inst., from Alton Bay to Centre Harbor and back; she was found to work all right, and is ready for the season's business.

A petition is being circulated in York and Wells, asking that the penalty of the law may not be imposed on Charles Phillips of York, whom Abijah Tarbox of Biddeford, fish and game warden, recently caught violating the lobster law.

Don't Wait

Until your hair becomes dry, thin, and gray before giving the attention needed to preserve its beauty and vitality. Keep on your toilet-table a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor—the only dressing you require for the hair—and use a little, daily, to preserve the natural color and prevent baldness.

Thomas Munday, Sharon Grove, Ky., writes: "Several months ago my hair commenced falling out, and in a few weeks my head was almost bald. Tried many remedies, but they did no good. I finally bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and, after using only a part of the contents, my head was covered with a heavy growth of hair. I recommend your preparation as the best hair-restorer in the world."

"My hair was faded and dry," writes Mabel C. Hardy, of Delavan, Ill.; "but after using a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor it became black and glossy."

Among the many improvements made in the old reliable New England Farmer, since it was purchased by Mr. George M. Whitaker, the addition of a poultry department has not been the least. The Lowell, Mass., Journal says: "Some of the most sensible poultry literature we have read for a long time we find in the New England Farmer under the name of A. F. Hunter. Mr. Hunter evidently knows what he is talking about, and he dispenses sound common sense to his readers."

OFFICIAL NOTICE!

— OF — -

The Atkinson House Furnishing Co.

— FROM THE -

HEADQUARTERS AT PORTLAND, MAINE,

To those who are contemplating the purchase of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

GREETING:

On and after June 1st we shall STOP PREPAYING the FREIGHT on GOODS SOLD by us, and we respectfully request that those who have dealt with us, and who have been BENEFITED by the PAYMENT OF THIS FREIGHT which in itself in the past three years has amounted to some

80,000 DOLLARS,

Will order what GOODS they require for this SPRING, from us this month, and please order as early as possible. And to those who intend buying

Silver-ware, Window Shades, Drapery, Dinner Sets, Toilet Sets, Stoves and Ranges, Feathers, Spreads, Blankers, Chamber Sets, Parlor Suits, Carpets, Lounges, Easy Chairs, Mattresses, Springs, Feather Pillows,

And anything else in HOUSE FURNISHING, can be BENEFITED to the extent of the freight to their depot, by buying from us this month. We have always PREPAID THIS FREIGHT FROM OUR OWN PROFITS, as we have invariably made the price on the

Furniture, Carpets,

Etc., lower than could be bought for elsewhere. There has always been a great advantage derived by our prepayment of the freight because we in every instance GUARANTEE the SAFE DELIVERY of the goods, and if there has ever been a fight to make with the railroad, we have done it, or in other words if you have received a

CHAMBER SET, PARLOR SUIT, Chair, or Range,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

That was damaged by the railroad, we have replaced it with another piece, and taken our chances to get the breakage from the road. There are items worthy of our close consideration, and especially at this time of year, be wise and order during this month,

And Save Yourself the Freight from Portland to your Depot, no matter where it is located in the State of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

We believe we are the only HOUSE FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT IN NEW ENGLAND WHO HAVE ADHERED STRICTLY TO THIS PLAN OF PREPAYING THE FREIGHT ON EVERYTHING SHIPPED BY US. We mean by this that while some other houses have shipped the goods, and allowed you to pay freight and afterwards send them a bill and then dicker on it for some time, We have invariably paid out the cash before the article left our freight sheds at Portland. And now notwithstanding the fact that we expect to lose a great deal of business by this this year there seems to be no other way to convince some people of the difference between OUR PAYING THE FREIGHT before the articles leave here, AND OUR CUSTOMERS PAYING THE FREIGHT after the articles get to the depot, and then having to write backwards and forwards over the matter. We wish to deal with perfect fairness and frankness in this matter, consequently we give you another month to make your selection, and to fill orders that are already placed. Now if you want a

KITCHEN RANGE, or a CHAMBER SET, or PARLOR SUIT, or CARPETS, WINDOW SHADES, DRAPERY CURTAINS,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

Kindly come and see us at once, or if you can not come, please write us for Catalogues and Descriptions of these Goods, and we will do our very best to please you in every one. Remember we carry COMPLETE HOUSE FURNISHINGS. There is scarcely a thing that you require for your homes that we do not keep, and we sell the same and shall continue to sell the same for cash, or a quarter cash, and the balance by the week or month. This notice applies TO ALL OUR STORES, and we have written to each of our MANAGERS to this effect, consequently there will be no more freight prepaid from our Bangor Store, Rockland Store, Auburn Store, Bar Harbor Store, Biddeford Store, nor from the Headquarters at Portland, after the 31st day of May, 1888.

Kindly get your orders in before June 1st, if you wish to save this freight.

Respectfully, the Public's Ob't Servants,

THE ATKINSON HOUSE FURNISHING CO.,

Headquarters Cor. Pearl and Middle Streets, Portland, and Branches at Auburn, Rockland, Bangor and Biddeford, also Bar Harbor for a short time.

ISAAC C. ATKINSON, Gen. Manager.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS. The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture of these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.

$22 TO $900.

Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all the great World's Exhibitions since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogue free.

PIANOS. Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos, that they are superior to all GRAND & UPRIGHT pianos. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN PIANO STRINGER," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.

A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and tuners, sent, together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant.

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Considerations whose Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

STARTLING STATISTICS.

What a High Official Has to Say About the Condition of the People—Some Serious Facts and Figures.

[Herald.]

"It is wonderful what figures will show." Such was the remark of a high official in the State Department to a representative of this paper. "How many really rich men do you suppose there are in New England? Very few. But how many do you think there would be if people were physically and mentally sound and vigorous? New England people are active, restless and ambitious, and therefore neglect themselves. Not one man or woman in ten is in perfect health."

"Official figures show this, do they?"

"Precisely. There seems to be a New England disease. People do not seem to think that headaches, or tired feeling, or 'blues,' or loss of appetite, or nervousness mean anything. Then, the last thing they know they are in bed and on therefore d to death.

"Do many die of this disease?"

"Thousands. Henry Wilson, Charles Sumner, Wendell Phillips and Governor Bodwell are among the number. James G. Blaine is also on the road, and his trip abroad is in the hope of recovering health."

"But what do you find to counteract it?"

"Very little. The only reliable medicine so far discovered is Hunt's Remedy. The faculty of one of our leading medical colleges, knowing the composition of this medicine, have been using it in practice for some time, and the results have been wonderful. I know three ladies and one gentleman (one of the latter a State officer), who have been entirely cured by its use. I wish every body might know more about it and use it."

Such facts and figures, and from so high a source, should prove invaluable to thousands whose success in life would be much greater were they physically and mentally sound and vigorous.

What Woman Has Made Him.

Professor C. V. Riley, formerly state entomologist of Missouri, and now entomologist of the department of agriculture, created a sensation at the meeting of the Six O'Clock club the other evening. Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Miss Phœbe Couzins and Belva Lockwood were among the ladies present. The subject of discussion was sexual quality from a scientific standpoint. Professor Riley showed how the male, at first insignificant and apparently a later creation, had developed and grown to a position of equality by the side of his female partner; how this had resulted from natural and especially from sexual selection—the female always choosing for her companion the handsomest and strongest; how the female of some species is 10,000 times larger than the male, and how, in other cases, he is a mere minute parasite, whom she carries about as a part of her baggage; how some female spiders are hundreds of times larger than the males, and how my lady Arachnida kills her myriads of successive husbands, beats them and flings their carcasses out into the back yard; how, under the influence of preference, the males of mammals and birds have arisen to physical superiority to the female till the lion is finer and stronger than the lioness, the bull larger than the cow, the peacock adorned with a gorgeous tail with which to excite the admiration of the pea hen, and the turkey cock gifted with a self important strut and arrogant gobble.

The inference was that whatever man is he has been made through millions of years of sexual preference by the female of his own species and the anthropoid and other species from which he has sprung, and that it would be unfair for him to kick down the ladder by which he has climbed.—Globe-Democrat.

The Best He Could Do.

"Do you know that man over there?" asked one Detroiter of another on the Lansing train the other day.

"No."

"Well, he's a drummer for a Jefferson avenue house, and I've known him by sight for fifteen years. His employer told me the other day that he hadn't lost a day for twelve years."

"He looks the picture of health."

"So he does, but I want to make a bet with you. I'll bet you a silk hat he carries remedies for no less than six different ailments."

"I'll do it!"

They went over and the case was explained to the drummer, who laughed and replied:

"Well, I dunno. I carry some troches to avoid hoarseness. I carry a bottle of cough medicine to ward off pneumonia. I have a porous plaster in my grip to put on if I get a lame back. I have some corn salve, a bottle of Jamaica ginger, some quinine capsules, a vial of peppermint essence, a box of mandrake pills, a liver medicine, a gargle for sore throat and a—"

"Good lands!" cried both gentlemen in chorus.

"Oh, well, what did you expect?" he inquired, with a injured air. "A man on $1,200 a year can't carry around a whole drug store, can he?"—Detroit Free Press.

Beggars in Cuba.

The treatment of beggars in Cuba gives them a certain individualization and character. Evidently most of them quickly take place as genuine public characters, permitted with consideration to ask alms, and if detected in imposition, are instantly subjected to severe punishment. So those who are tolerated are most sympathetically treated. While this is an odd social condition, it is still more odd that the beggar does not become over bold and insolent. But the recognized mendigo is not only permitted, but encouraged everywhere. You will stumble over him at the church doors; give him the sidewalk on the principal thoroughfares; see that he has a comfortable seat in the cabin of the ferries; walk all around him in his various forms at the doors of the cafes and shops; defer to his being agreeably located in the parks and plazas; give him the pleasantest corner beside your potero in the entrada of your dwelling; and, if you are not in a mood or condition to give him alms, you would be socially damned if you did not at least humbly respond to his request with "Perdon a por Dios!" ("Pardon me for God's sake!")—Edgar L. Wakeman in Kansas City Journal.

A Burial in Algiers.

One day I witnessed here the burial of a child. The young boy was laid in the grave wrapped in a yard or two of white cotton; a smaller hole was dug at the bottom of the grave, and served as a coffin, being covered with flat slabs of stone to prevent the earth from falling directly on the body. Twenty or thirty men stood round in silence, the earth was hastily replaced and temporary stones were placed at the head and feet; the cushions and pieces of embroidery in which the body lay on the donkey which bore it to the final resting place were put back on the animal, and the procession moved silently away. The women and girls always come afterward to weep on the grave and place flowers, and especially branches of myrtle. They often spend the greater part of three days round a new grave, sitting on matting and carpets.—F. A. Bridgman in Harper's Magazine.

Luck Among Exchange Operators.

On the Consolidated Exchange, especially in the shouting, gesticulating, pushing and rollicking oil group, it is considered a very bad omen to open an umbrella and raise it over the head. Putting up an umbrella in a board room would seem under all circumstances to be unnecessary. It is worse. It brings bad luck. There is a skeptical wag in the crowd, however, who, on dull days, when the brokers are skylarking, will raise an umbrella and run into the trading ring and hold it over as many brokers as he can. They scamper like a flock of frightened sheep.

Coming down on an elevated railroad train not long ago, one of the largest room operators on the Stock Exchange remarked with extreme satisfaction and perfect conviction:

"I shall make some money today."

"How do you know?" asked a friend.

"A black cat passed me this morning," was the exultant answer.—New York Mail and Express.

How Eggs Are Used.

In France alone the wine clarifiers use more than 80,000,000 a year, and the Alsatians consume fully 88,000,000 in calico printing and for dressing the leather that is used in making the finest French kid gloves.—Eastern Farmer.

A late refinement in dentistry is a tiny electric lamp for lighting up the cavities of the teeth during the process of filling.

Algeria, which sixty years ago was nearly all waste land, has now 9,000,000 of acres under cultivation.

A Tomb in Algiers.

At the head of each tomb is a slab of marble with one or two round holes in which flower pots are set or cups placed there that the birds may drink from them; the natives believe that these birds afterward fly away to heaven with a greeting from the soul reposing beneath.—F. A. Bridgman in Harper's Magazine.

Flowers as Badges.

The cornflower that was the favorite of Kaiser William—the blue "bachelor's button" of this latitude—is said to be the badge of the Liberty party in Belgium, while the red poppy is that of the Conservative or Clerical party.—Chicago Herald.

Strength of a Wet Rope.

Experiments have proved that the tensile strength of a wet rope is only one-third that of the same rope when dry; and a rope saturated with grease or soap is weaker still, as the lubricant permits the fibers to slip with greater facility. Hemp rope contracts strongly on being wet, and a dry rope twenty-five feet long will shorten to twenty-four on being wet.—Frank Leslie's.

Direction in "Tempering."

A Philadelphia tool manufacturer instructs his workmen to hold large steel tools in a north and south line while they are being tempered. He says that many years ago he noticed that such tools would often fly apart when being tempered if held "east and west," and that the liability to such accidents was greatly lessened, if not entirely obliterated, if the tool was held "north and south."—Chicago News.

Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam for coughs and colds does, is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The large bottles are 50c. and $1. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption. 6ly23 a man for groaning when he has Rheumatism or Neuralgia. The pain is simply awful. No torture in the ancient times was more painful than these twin diseases. But—oughtn't a man to be blamed if, having rheumatism or Neuralgia, he won't use Ath-lo-pho-ros, when it has cured thousands who have suffered in the same way? It has cured hundreds after physicians have pronounced them incurable.

"The skill of five physicians could not cure me of Rheumatism which had settled in the hips, neck and shoulders. So intense was the pain that sleep was almost impossible. The first dose of Athlophoros gave me relief, and the third enabled me to sleep for four and a half hours without waking. I continued its use and am now well."

THE WEATHER.

For New England to-day:—

Southerly winds, stationary temperature, local rains.

A TERRIBLE FALL.

A serious accident occurred at the show of the King & Franklin circus on Thursday evening. While Mrs. Jerome was hanging head downward from a trapeze at the top of the tent, holding her husband by the hands, a bolt supporting the apparatus gave way, and they fell some thirty feet to the bare earth, the man striking on his feet, and the woman's face striking the top of his head. No sound was uttered by either as they fell, or when they struck. Both were rendered senseless, the only wonder being that they were not killed. Although the tent was full of people there was not a docter in the audience, and Major Urch drove off after one, soon returning with Dr. Sherburne, Col. Marvin in the meantime quite skillfully dressing some of the hurts of the woman. Mrs. Jerome had a bad gash reaching from between the eyes to the top of the forehead, and in to the bone, besides receiving some lesser cuts; her husband had one shoulder dislocated; both were much bruised and badly jarred, and the full extent of their injuries cannot yet be told. They were taken to the Cottage Hospital.

THE PRESS EXCURSION.

Notwithstanding the rain about one hundred gentlemen connected with the New England press, who had accepted the invitation of General Manager Furber of the Boston & Maine railroad to visit York beach, were at the station in this city on Thursday morning at eleven o'clock. After the arrival of the trains from Boston, Concord and Portland, the party left in a special train for York beach, and on arrival there were met at the station by the proprietors of the Atlantic and Ocean houses, at which hotels the excursionists were dined in excellent style. After dinner most of the party took carriages for the Bartlett house and York harbor; and at four o'clock the train was taken for this city. Stops were made at the several stations, the train arriving here in time to connect with the five o'clock trains north and west. The thanks of the excursionists are due particularly to Manager Furber, Division Superintendent D. W. Sanborn, Conductor Small, C. B. Hildreth & Son of the Atlantic house, Ellis & Son of the Ocean house, and Directors H. E. Evans and J. E. Staples of the York Harbor & Beach railroad, for a most enjoyable day.

POCKET-BOOK LOST.

At the circus or in its vicinity, Thursday evening, a pocket-book containing money and papers. The finder will be liberally rewarded on leaving it at this office.

BASE BALL.

There will not be any game of base ball at the south end grounds to-day, the game which was to have been played with the Haverhills having been postponed. A fine game may be looked for on Saturday, at which time the Lynns, one of the best clubs in the New England League, will be here; game called at four o'clock.

The Dover Democrat's Rochester correspondent, writing on the 13th, says: "A preliminary meeting for the formation of a ball nine association was held at the Mansion house last evening. Several subjects pertaining to the sustenance of a winning nine were discussed, and many propositions accepted. It was thought advisable to issue stock at five dollars per share to the amount of $500 or more, call a meeting and commence business at once. The meeting was adjourned until this evening at the same place. As soon as the new company is organized, the concern will be managed on a different scale than it has been. Players of reputation will be engaged, and as for scouring the woods in the vicinity of Barnstead and New Durham for players, there will be none of it while ten thousand dollar ball-tossers are roaming the country. At all events Rochester will now break the salary limit as the others have done, and secure men that will bring the banner to the rustling town on the Cocheco." That's the way to talk; go ahead, boys.

The mikado of Japan has issed an edict against what he calls "the pernicious game of baseball, which foreigners are attempting to introduce into this country." So it is said, at least.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, June 14th, Mayor Hodgdon in the chair:

Absent, Alderman Sermour.

J. W. Marden was granted leave to open Vaughan street, to repair a drain.

The Portsmouth Republican club and Penny Post Pub. Co., were granted leave to erect a flag staff on Congress street, under the supervision of the srteet commissioner.

Petitions of L. E. Smith for new sidewalk on Middle street, and of Joshua B, Johnson for relay of sidewalk on same street, were referred to the committee on streets, with power.

Request of E. S. Fay and others for a naphtha light on Raitt's court, was referred to the committee on street lights, with power.

A communication from the Telegraph & Telephone Co., demurring to the board's order for the removal of the cable across Market square, was laid on the table.

Request of Rienzi Ridge for drain on Newcastle avenue, was granted.

The following ordinance was passed under suspension of the rules:

Be it ordained by the City Councils of the city of Portsmouth:

That chapter 24 of the Compiled Ordinances be amended by adding after Section 2 of said chapter the following:

Sec. 3. Whoever malicously cuts, marks, defaces, mutilates, injures or destroys any bridge, fence, rail, building, shade-tree or tree-box or any other public property of the city, shall be fined not exceeding twenty dollars or imprisoned not exceeding thirty days, or both, and the mayor is hereby authorized to offer and pay, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, suitable rewards for information that will lead to the conviction of any person or persons found so maliciously offending.

Adjournment to Tuesday morning, June 19th, at the court house.

PERSONAL.

Mr. J. Langdon Ward is at his Kittery Point cottage. Mr. Charles F. Blake is also at his summer home at the Point.

Prof. James Parsons and family, of Philadelphia, are at their cottage at Little Boar's Head.

"Roundy" Johnson, who was catcher for one of the Western League base ball clubs last season, is now travelling with the Zozo Co., as property man. He attended the Portsmouth-Salem game in this city on the 13th inst.

Mr. R. L. F. Cummings, local editor of the Biddeford Times, paid us a brief call on Thursday evening.

Mr. Charles Amazeen of this city, an employe in the office of the government printer at Washington, is at home on his annual vacation.

Col. William O. Sides, of the Penny Post, started for Chicago on Thursday morning, to remain until after the republican national convention is over.

Mr. William Donnell, manager of the Salem base ball club, is a Portsmouth boy, and a graduate of the Portsmouth high school. He was the guest of Mr. Andrew Lynn on Winter street, when the club was in this city on the 13th inst.

Mr. J. L. O. Coleman lost a valuable horse on Thursday by the bursting of a blood vessel.

While a gang of men were engaged in discharging a schooner at the Gas Co's wharf, Thursday afternoon, a stage on which two men were standing gave way, letting them down, and injuring them quite severely, one having an arm broken.

By request of the directors of the Portsmouth Electric Light Co., the city clerk recently made out a bill against the company for the time the city was deprived of light by the bad working of the plant, and the claim was promptly adjusted in a manner entirely satisfactory to the representatives of the city. The company only ask the city to pay for light supplied; darkness not being furnished by the corporation, they ask no pay for that.

The second Cleveland flag of the season was raised in front of the office of Hon. Frank Jones on Market street, on Thursday. It had a very patched-up look; and as a former democratic official, now a business man on Market street, remarked, "where was the crowd, and where is the enthusiasm?" The flag bears the names of Cleveland and Thurman; the same flag four years ago bore the name of Hendricks for the second place, but that gentleman has passed on.

Any one fond of natural beauty may obtain a pleasant view among the relics of the old elms of the Raynes estate at the upper part of Vaughan street. Festoons of living green fall from the trees, in one instance sweeping the ground when the wind blows. The ice storm, which so extensively trimmed the trees, resulted in the exuberance of foliage as thus seen.

Under the heading "Bangor jail's big criminals" an exchange says: "The Bangor jail has the following criminals: Sellon, Stain and Cromwell, and Foster, Dr. Weed and Whitney, the latter the Bennett murder convicts. They are all held for murder." Foster and Whitney were convicted of the robbery of old Peter Bennett, who was not murdered at all, and Dr. Weed has not been convicted of any crime; he is simply detained for trial on a charge of complicity in the Bennett robbery, mainly on testimony given by the convicted thieves.

Just at this time there is considerable being said in regard to unclaimed deposits in the savings banks of this state, it being said on behalf of the banks that they don't know where the owners are. Would it not be a good idea to publish the amounts of the unclaimed deposits and the name of the depositor? It would beyond doubt reach, if not the depositor, a relative on the part of his or her family who may need the money.—Dover Democrat.

Be wise in time, and buy one of those lovely French-finish satteens of Lewis E. Staples. Only fifteen cents; they are worth twenty-five cents.

"This will last out a night in Russia when nights are longest there" he said, clapping his hand over the aching tooth. But a friend suggested Salvation Oil, and he was fast asleep in twenty seconds.—Price twenty-five cents a bottle.

The court martial in the case of Capt. T. O. Selfridge, U. S. N., charged with criminal negligence in target shooting from the ship under his command in Japan, resulting in the death of several Japanese, honorably acquited him.

Impurities of the blood often cause great annoyance at this season; Hood's sarsaparilla purifies the blood, and cures all such affections.

Rochester people have petitioned for a postal route between Rochester and Northwood Narrows.

HOOD'S COMPOUND EXTRACT SARSAPARILLA TRADE MARK

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and we ask you to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. It strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. The peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation of the vegetable remedies used give to Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar curative powers. No other medicine has such a record of wonderful cures. If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other instead. It is a Peculiar Medicine, and is worthy your confidence.

Peculiar To Itself

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

A good illustration of the interest taken in politics this year by the republicans of Maine is to be found in the fact that of 1288 delegates to the recent state convention 1282 attended. York county was entitled to 125 delegates, and 125 were there.

Victor Paul of Biddeford was arrested on the night of the 12th inst., on a charge of robbing the crew of the schooner Paragon of Belfast, then in that harbor with a cargo of coal. It was claimed that Paul bought three pints of whiskey for the captain, and after the crew were under the influence of liquor went aboard and robbed the crew of what they had in their pockets. There was no evidence to hold him, and he was discharged.

Ephraim C. Spinney, Esq., farmer of Kittery, as well as a well known business man of this city, and a life-long democrat of the Andrew Jackson model, on being questioned as to how he regarded the alleged democratic national nominations replied: "I have not enthused yet to any great extent." A large number of the old-line democrats of Kittery say about the same thing.

WE USE SOAP.

WE USE PEARLINE.

DISTORTED HANDS will surely come to those who clean house and wash clothes in the old-fashioned way—with soap. How can it be otherwise? You rub—rub—rub, and you ache—ache—ache. You spend hours inhaling the hot steam and odors which rise from the tub, impregnated with the filth of soiled clothing, and with all this you have not obtained the best results.

WITH PEARLINE a delicate woman can do a large wash. You do not have to rub yourself and your clothes to pieces. You do not have to inhale fetid steam; when finished you are not too tired to see that your work is well and economically done, and that you have saved many hours of woman's hardest work.

JAMES PYLE'S PEARLINE is the modern soap. Beware of imitations.

The Stops of an Organ,

With such important functions as the liver, are of course productive of serious bodilatly disturbance. When it relaxes its secretive and distributive activity, bile gets into the blood, and tinges the skin and white of the eyes with yellow, the bowels become constipated, the tongue coated, the breath sour. Then come headaches, vertigo and congestion of the organ, accompanied with pain in its vicinity or under the right shoulder blade. Shall blue pill be the remedy sought? No, for mercury in any form is pernicious. What then? Experience indicates Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as the true remedy for inactivity of the liver. It not only relaxes the bowels without pain, but has a direct stimulating effect upon the hepathic gland itself, the seat and origin of the trouble. All malarial complaints involves disorder of the liver, and of these the Bitters is the most popular curative. It also conquers dyspepsia, nervousness, rheumatism and kidney troubles.

Everybody Likes

To be called handsome, especially the young ladies. But that is simply impossible as long as their faces are covered with pimples, blotches and sores. But wait, there is no need of this; one or two bottles of Sulphur Bitters will remove all such disfigurations, and make your face fair and rosy.—Fannie Bell, Editress.

Mr. Gladstone says he will never sit for another portrait.

The usual treatment of catarrh is very unsatisfactory, as thousands of despairing patients can testify. On this point a trustworthy medical writer says: Proper local treatment is positively necessary to success, but many, if not most of the remedies in general use by physicians afford but temporary benefit. A cure cersainly cannot be expected from snuffs, powders, douches and washes. Ely's Cream Balm is a remedy which combines the important requisites of quick action, specific curative power with perfect safety and Pleasantness to the patient.

Proprieties.

Mrs. Parvenu prided herself upon her attention to the proprieties; so, when she asked the druggist's head clerk what he considered the most efficient remedy attainable for Williamousness, and he handed her a bottle of Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, she noted with manifest pleasure that the wrapper on the bottle exactly matched the color of her morning negligé, and as she always kept her medicine on her dressing case, she was glad to have it harmonize with its surroundings.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester. decwtjan30

THE CANADIAN PARLIAMENT.

A Humorous Description of Its Opening. A Solemn Ceremony.

All the members were seated when we were let in upon them. I recognized some of the members, for I am not ashamed to admit that I know a few of them personally. A newspaper man gets so hardened in time that he is not ashamed to admit anything. It is no part of my duty, of course, to offer any suggestions to the leader of the opposition, still I would like to say to him that if he had fewer empty benches on his side of the house he would have more success in combating the measures of the government.

We all sat in solemn silence, doing nothing at all, something after the fashion of congress, when suddenly there came three solemn, measured raps at the door. They could hardly be called raps. They were much too dignified for that. They were knocks, as if somebody struck a very solid block of wood with a reasonably heavy sledge hammer. A man dressed in black, with a sort of regalia over his shoulders, who had been sitting quietly near the door, opposite the speaker, here assumed a look of pleased surprise, rose and threw open the doors. He was much astonished to find there a gorgeously dressed individual, and each of them bowed to the other ceremoniously, and then the person who knocked told him confidentially that he had something very particular to say to the speaker. The first gentleman with the collar said he would see about it, and then advanced and bowed to the speaker and told him that a messenger from the governor general was at the door and wanted to know what he was going to do about it. The speaker, instead of ordering him to be fired out, as he probably would have done if I had rapped in such a startling way, requested the man with the collar to tell the other gentleman to advance and give the countersign and speak his mind.

The messenger bowed civilly when he received the speaker's permission to advance, and then came on, as it were, by installments. A press man told me he was the Black Rod. The Black Rod took a couple of steps forward, bowed very low, then took a few more steps and bowed again. Finding that nobody threw anything at him he apparently gained courage, made a third advance and a third bow and spoke. He said that the governor general required the immediate attendance of the speaker, the members of the house and myself in the senate chamber. He repeated this message in French for my benefit, which I beg to assure him was a needless trouble, as I understand English quite as well as I do other languages, and then retreated backward as gracefully as he had advanced, bowing three times.

Then we all made a break for the senate chamber. It was a circus coming down that narrow stairway. I missed the first step in the dark, and took nearly the entire press of Canada as I tobogganed to the bottom. The honorable members of the commons are graciously allowed to stand in the senate chamber, packed like sardines, while the message is read. There is a resplendent throng at the other end of the large room, and under a sunset canopy the governor general sat with his uniform on and a cocked hat on his head. This hat was not removed except for a brief moment when he addressed the gentlemen of the senate and the commons. The chairs of the senate were filled with the ladies of the aristocracy in evening dress, toilets as handsome, and, no doubt, as expensive, as one would see on a similar occasion in London. In the large and roomy galleries were the ladies of the democracy, not quite so expensively dressed, but every bit as good looking, bless 'em.

The governor read his message first in English and then in French. When he had finished the company rose and began shaking hands with each other. And that is how Lord Lansdowne and myself opened the first session of parliament for the year 1888.—Luke Sharp in Detroit Free Press.

Why Boys Leave the Farm.

"Why do the boys leave the farm?" wails a writer in an agricultural journal. Well, dear brother, there are several reasons. One is because the boy is not 65 years old at his birth. Then, if there is a hoe on the farm weighing fourteen ounces, bright as nickel plate and sharp as a razor, and another hoe weighing somewhat less than a breaking plow, with an edge on it like a hammer, and a sapling with the bark on for a handle, the hired man takes one and the boy gets the other, and every man in America knows which is the other. Did you ever stand with such a hoe in your hands away down in a corn row on some airless, still, hot summer day, twenty acres of corn blades and tassels wilting about you, standing fourteen inches higher than your head, shutting out every last trace of breathable air, and then hear a locust down in the edge of the timber strike up his long, strident, monotonous call to make it ten times hotter? And all this time a cool creek not a mile away, loitering in deep, silent pools in shady places in the woods, or breaking into merry dancing ripples over the pebbles? And in the deep holes, the fish just lying around waiting for a boy? Well, then, you know why some boys leave the farm. Still, boys can be kept on the farm and made to stay there all their lives. You drive a long spike through a boy's abdomen and through a live oak tree, and clinch or bolt on the other side, and then saw off the boy's legs and break his back, and he will stay on the farm. Yes, there are some other ways we know, but this is the only infallible method.—Burdette in Hawkeye.

A Son of Senator Voorhees.

Charles Voorhees, son of Senator Voorhees, is the congressional delegate from Washington territory. Although he has no vote in the house he can introduce all the bills he chooses. He has presented one measure, at least, which shows that he has statesman's blood in his veins. It is a bill to regulate spelling by law, the amended orthography to be taught in all government schools. The measure makes war on the silent "e," as in "live," "bronze," etc., and advocates the adoption of "nke" for "nche," "ankor" for "anchor," and other abbreviated forms for certain words.—New York World.

A SCHOOL IN ALGIERS.

The Intellectual Training of Young Arabs Is Very Limited—A Noisy Set.

On the other side of the central public square is a school, a small Babel of sixty boys or more. The intellectual training of children is very limited, and causes but little anxiety to parents, who teach them in early childhood to repeat, "I testify that Mohammed is God's apostle," and to hate Christians. The remainder of their education consists in the acquirement of a few rudimentary rules of arithmetic and the practice of committing to memory as much of the Koran as possible. Let it be understood that we are referring to the purely Arab schools, and not to others where French influence is gaining ground; one of the largest buildings in Algiers is the Lyceum, where about 800 Christians, Jews and Mohammedans are educated together. The old professor of the school on the public square has assistants of different ages for the younger boys, so that there is a continual running stream of big and little voices, each trying to outcry the other; higher and more shrill they yell as they take in a fresh breath and repeat what they know at such a rate that it seems impossible that any one should distinguish one syllable from another.

In fact, during my stay I often asked my young factotum of the day what was being recited; his only answer was a significant shrug of the shoulders—"Je sais pas, mossou—connais pas ca, moi." Allah—Illah - Allah - Achbah - Mohammed-wally-golly-jolly-holly, repeated at the top of your voice, and at lightning speed, a thousand times a minute if you can, will give you, my reader, a faint idea of what one of the youngsters is saying; then multiply by the number engaged in this noisy method of committing the Koran to memory, and you may get still nearer the effect. Children are made to recite in as loud a voice as possible, in order to strengthen their lungs—a requirement especially necessary for a muezzin, who calls to prayer from the top of the minaret. Those who are to follow a trade are sometimes taught writing and a little useful arithmetic. To vary the monotony of these recitations at school, the lad is occasionally taken across the knees of the old teacher, who sits tailor fashion, holds the offender by the ankles, and administers blows with a rod on the soles of his feet—a mild form of bastinado.

The pupil's stationery and books at the Arab school do not cost his parents a great amount. A slate, so called, but made of hard wood, is the medium of knowledge. The surface becomes as smooth as glass by repeated application of fine pipe clay, which is moistened with water and rubbed on with the fingers. When the lad has filled his slate on both sides with dictations from the Koran, written in ink with a reed pen, and has committed its contents to memory, he washes it and renews the coating of clay. A mistake is easily corrected with the wet finger. The Arab boy has all the mischief of any other school boy, and as he must break, chew, crack, nick and mend something, his slate ends by being a kind of one horse shay put together again with glue, nails and bits of tin and brass, cross beams and corners; the marvelous clay fills up all the chinks. On the wall hangs a large blackboard; on the floor matting lie burnooses and shoes, but no primers, grammars, geographies or other ink stained accessories which strew the benches and desks of our schools.

Groups of dear little black eyed boys from 8 to 5 years old, other groups of different classes, youths of 17, 18, all wearing their red tarbouches with big blue tassels, jackets and burnooses of all shades and colors, enlivened by streaks and spots of sunlight sifted through the intricate designs of the windows and stained glass, make a charming kaleidoscope. All around is the plain white-washed wainscoting, considerably soiled and stained by the backs, hands and heads that lean against it; and above are exquisite arabesques in stucco—for the interior, though somewhat dilapidated, is untouched by the restorer's hand, and remains one of the very finest examples of Moorish art. The building was a small mosque, the ornamented and painted wooden ceiling of which, almost in ruins, is supported by arches and onyx columns. —F. A. Bridgman in Harper's Monthly.

Disadvantages of Color Blindness.

No man who has this defect should be a physician. He cannot tell whether his patient is flushed or pale. As was said of one such: "How should he know whether this is scarlet fever? He never saw scarlet in his life." Next to the physician the chemist is a dangerous man; he must trust entirely to the labels on his drugs; if they change color, and this often indicates that they are deteriorating, he does not know, but still sends them out with a cheerful mind. The sick nurse is also disqualified, and for the same reason. After these come the railway signal man, who reads the red danger signal to stop as if it was the green, commanding him to dash on. Then there is the sailor who mistakes the starboard for the port light of a vessel sighted in the night and reads into it a directly opposite meaning from that it was meant to convey.

It is a crime for the color blind to pursue any of these callings when their defect has been brought home to them, and there are other trades which it is foolish in them to follow, because they can never compete with those who have perfect vision. The tailor, the milliner, the house painter, the dyer are instances of these. But more than half of the color blind live and die unaware of their defect; among those who are uneducated it frequently passes for ignorance and stupidity, or if known it is concealed as a disadvantage by them, though in the nature of things they are not aware of the mischief they may do through it.—Good Words.

Colors from Coal Tar.

Some 150 different colors are now obtained from coal tar, and these have almost entirely supplanted vegetable and animal dyes. In fact, only two of the vegetable class—indigo and logwood—are still of any considerable importance. Coal yields a large amount of coloring matter, the magenta from a ton being sufficient to dye 500 yards of flannel; the aurine, 120; the vermilline scarlet, 2,560; and the aligarine, 255.—Arkansaw Traveler.

Paine's Celery Compound

CURES Nervous Prostration, Nervous Headache, Neuralgia, Nervous Weakness, Stomach and Liver Diseases, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, and all affections of the Kidneys.

WEAK NERVES

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is a Nerve Tonic which never fails. Containing Celery and Coca, these wonderful nerve stimulants, it speedily cures all nervous disorders.

RHEUMATISM

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND purifies the blood. It drives out the lactic acid, which causes Rheumatism, and, restores the blood-making organs to a healthy condition. It is the true remedy for Rheumatism.

KIDNEY COMPLAINTS

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND quickly restores the liver and kidneys to perfect health. This curative power, combined with its nerve tonics, makes it the best remedy for all kidney complaints.

DYSPEPSIA

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND strengthens the stomach, and quiets the nerves of the digestive organs. This is why it cures even the worse cases of Dyspepsia.

CONSTIPATION

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is not a cathartic. It is a laxative, giving easy and natural action to the bowels. Regularity surely follows its use.

CURE OF CANCER and ULCERS.

Judge T. C. McLendon writes to the Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga., under date of February 14, 1888: "About three years ago, Jerry Bradley, a colored man, had a cancerous sore on his face, near the right eye. It caused him a great deal of pain, and he lost the sight of the eye, but was finally cured of the cancer, by the use of Swift's Specific. This case is well known in Wilkes Co., Ga, where he lived (near Danbury), and of this case, I, myself, had personal knowledge."

Mr. L. Cox, of Arkabutla, Tate Co., Miss. writes, February 24, 1888: "I suffered a great deal from old ulcers for six years. Your medicine was recommended to me, and after using six bottles, I was completely cured. I never saw its equal as a Blood Purifier. My neighbors will use no other. Your medicine does even more than you claim for it. I have known it to cure cases which were thought to be hopeless. It is the best medicine made."

Mrs. A. M. Goldsmith, No. 674 Warren St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes, February 22, 1888: "I commenced using S. S. S. about three years ago. I had suffered with a sore throat for over a year, when I commenced using your remedy. I used a great many other remedies with no good results. My little girl, also, had sore fingers; it commenced from the quick, and then the nails would come off. We doctored her for over two years, and when I commenced using S. S. S. I thought I would see what it would do for her. I am happy to say that it entirely cured her. It is the best remedy I know of for the blood. I shall believe it was the means of saving my life. The doctor told me I had a throat disease similar to General Grant's. I cheerfully recommend it to all suffering from disordered blood. I use it now as a tonic whenever I think I need it."

Mr. B. F. George, Milford P. O., Ellis Co., Texas, writes: "I had a cancerous wart or mole on my eyelid, as large as the end of my thumb, which had the appearance of cancer, causing me much pain and inflammation, from which I suffered a long time. Seeing the S. S. S. advertised I commenced using it, and after the use of a few bottles the wart dropped out, my cancer was gone, and I was entirely relieved."

Mr. G. W. Feltis, of Aiken, S. C., writes: "I was a sufferer from cancer of the breast, and had been under the treatment of three physicians, but it did me no good. It was so bad that I had to stop work. After taking a course of S. S. S. I was entirely cured."

The King and His Party.

While the republicans, all over the country, have in their ranks men who would ably fill the office of president, and could be elected next fall if nominated at Chicago, the democrats have all along admitted that in their great party there was but one man who could occupy the position of their candidate. Thus Mr. Cleveland has become at once a despot, and his energies are bent to discover new modes by which he can govern his party in case of his re-election.

It is given out that visiting statesmen at the White House have commingled with their congratulations hints of what the party wants. It is not only the purpose of the still hungry and thirsty democrats to remove every republican in government employ, down to the chief cook of the White House, but their zeal goes further. A new set of democrats must succeed those gathered in under the first reign of King Grover. In short, the liveliest kind of internecine war would at once spring up after March 4th in case of Mr. Cleveland's re-election.

The Buffalo politician sees the game, and goes one better. If he is re-elected, he will be president. The democratic statesmen will not be able to dictate to him as to patronage. If Mr. Cleveland possesses one trait of character above another, it is firmness. By some, this beautiful characteristic is termed obstinacy. But called by whatever name, this adamantine objection will always lie in the path of the office-seeking democrat under the regime of Cleveland. To make the handling of the spoils more difficult for his supporters, and at the same time throw a sop to his mugwump backers, Mr. Cleveland proposes to have the civil service rules so modified that he can do as he pleases in regard to patronage. This of course, as far as the republicans are concerned, save in a few instances of high offices, is always his prerogative. But the man who thinks luck is to pull him through the November contest is fortifying himself in anticipation of the assaults of his political friends (?) This is the milk in the cocoanut of the last move in civil service reform, which according to the commissioners cannot keep pace with the reformatory ideas of the president!

Great is humbug. Should Mr. Cleveland by any unfortunate contingency be re-elected, the happy family of the democrats will become a marvel in political affiliation.

Death of Germany's Empress.

The Emperor of Germany died at eleven o'clock Friday forenoon, the 15th inst.

The deceased emperor was fifty-six years and eight months old. He married Princess Victoria, daughter of Queen Victoria of England, in 1850. He was thoroughly educated in military affairs; commanded an army of 125,000 men in the Austrian war of 1866, deciding the great battle of Sadowa in favor of the Prussians. In the war of 1870 he commanded the Third German army, consisting of three army corps, in all about 200,000, and 500 guns. He managed his troops with great skill, and became immensely popular with the south German troops. Since 1870 his life has been comparatively uneventful.

The new Emperor William is twenty-eight years old, and many things, both good and bad, are told of him. It is said that he has the spirit but not the genius for action; it is feared he will plunge the empire into war at an early date.

Double Wedding.

At Menton, Ohio, June 14th, at the home of Mrs. James A. Garfield, widow of President Garfield, a double marriage took place, Mr. Harry Garfield becoming the husband of Miss Belle Mason of Cleveland, Ohio, and Miss Mary Garfield becoming the wife of Mr. J. Stanley Brown of Washington, D. C., formerly President Garfield's private secretary. The marriage service according to the Presbyterian form was read by Rev. Dr. William V. W. Davis, who is now pastor of the Union church at Worcester, Mass., but who was at one time pastor of the Euclid avenue Presbyterian church

THE MAJORITY.

How fare they all, they of the pallid faces,
Beyond our power to beckon their return?
How is it with them in the shadow places?
How shall we learn
Their solemn secret? How can we discover,
By any earnest seeking, the true way
Unto the knowing in what realm they hover,
In what high day,
Or in what somber shadows of the night,
They are forever hidden from our sight?

We question vainly. Yet it somehow pleases,
When they have spoken the last sad good-by,
It somehow half the pain of parting eases,
That in the sky,
In the vast solitudes of stars and spaces,
There may be consciousness and life and hope,
And that when we must yield to death's embraces
There may be scope
For the unfolding of the better powers,
So sadly stifled in this life of ours.

Living on Volcanic Isles.

Bonin Islands, discovered and settled by the Japanese 250 years ago, and deserted by them fifty years later, are situated between the 25th and 27th degs. of north latitude, and east longitude about 140 degs. 23 mins. There are more than forty islands, large and small. St. John, being the only one inhabitable, boasts about fifty people of double nationality, governed by no law except the precarious one of "every man for himself, and the devil for us all." While peace generally prevails, grievances are not infrequently wiped out in blood—the assassin having nothing to fear unless the victim has a friend to avenge him.

This group is a volcanic formation, and the scenery is wonderful. High mountains, whose heads disappear among the clouds, deep valleys worn into fantastic shapes by the heavy rains of January and February, perpendicular bluffs and level plains, smooth gravel beaches and bold rocky shores, form a contrast so wild and picturesque, so terribly enchanting, that one expects some great and instantaneous change, some wonderful phenomenon, a falling of these frightful precipices, a rising of the fruitful plains—a grand mingling of the whole—for you cannot throw off the idea that the laws of gravitation are at fault, and that a crash may be expected at any moment. Pure springs of crystal water far up among the cliffs send down leaping brooks and rivulets, which, rushing through some volcanic rupture in mountains, are scattered in finest spray, but gathering again, ripple on their rocky course, seeming to smile as they glide more smoothly among the cabbage trees, watering the loholla, mulberry and banana, spreading over the pebbly beach and mingling with the waters of the harbor. And such a harbor, landlocked with perfect "holding ground" from ten to thirty fathoms below the surface. A hundred ships would "swing clear" with their "right bower" a cable's length ahead.

Green turtles are taken by thousands, and form the principal flesh food, although wild hogs are found among the hills in large droves, and deer are plenty. Twenty kinds of fish are caught along the reefs and shores. Onions are raised in large quantities, sweet potatoes and yams are cultivated to some extent, all of which are exchanged with passing vessels for Spanish dollars, and the dollars hoarded—for what?—Kennebec Journal.

A Diplomatic Clergyman.

A good minister was talking to a class of young people who had become interested in religious matters through the influence of the Moody meetings. He was impressing upon them the idea that a man should carry his religion into his business.

"Don't keep your religion exclusively for Sunday. Pray to him for success in business. I believe it is a right for a man to ask the Almighty to increase his business and make it prosper."

"But," said a young man present, "I am an undertaker. Would it be right for me to ask the Lord to give me a boom in business?"

The minister was nonplussed for a moment, and the class evidently regarded the question as a poser. But the divine finally arose to the emergency and replied:

"While I don't think it would be right for you to ask the Lord to make deaths plentiful in order that your business may thrive, yet you could ask that in case of any deaths in the community the funerals might be thrown in your way."—Louisville Post.

Singular Salt Water Customs.

The people of Varna, on the coast of the Black sea, in Bulgaria, have a singular custom which they observe at the feast of the Epiphany, which occurs on Jan. 6. The clergy, both Greeks and Bulgarians, accompanied by an immense crowd, go to the seashore, carrying with them a wooden cross. This cross is thrown by the clergy into the sea, and thereupon the strongest swimmers jump in after it. The best swimmer gets it, of course, and brings it in triumph to shore.

The Varna people have a still more singular salt water custom on the same day. After dark at night, all the newly married men in the town are conducted, with bands of music and singing, to the shore, and made to take three successive plunges into the icy water. They are then conducted home, where their brides, accompanied by their relatives and friends, have been awaiting them in state. After this there is feasting and merry making.

These singular customs are believed to be derived from a pagan origin.—Youth's Companion.

Alphonse Daudet's Methods.

Like a painter who keeps an album, where he carefully notes, under the impression of the moment, silhouettes, attitudes, a foreshortening here, a movement of arms there, I have collected, during the last thirty years, a multitude of little notebooks, where I cursorily jot my remarks, my thoughts, enough to remind me of a gesture, a tone of voice, the whole to be developed and enlarged later in harmony with the future novel. In Paris, on my travels, in the country, I have blackened these notebooks without a thought of the labor that I was accumulating between their pages. I find there proper names which often I cannot bring myself to alter, as I discover in names a proper physiognomy, the imprint of the people who bear them.—"Thirty Years of Paris."

To Prevent a Black Eye.

Physicians have been for years looking for something that will quickly remove traces of a black eye. Put an oyster on it, and tie raw beef on it, is the usual advice, as common as it is useless. When the blood once becomes extravasated nothing can be done but to let nature do the work, although bathing with warm water will assist the process. I have, however, found that when the injury is fresh, and before the blood has had a chance to coagulate, that a strong infusion of tea made of cayenne pepper, and applied with a brush to the point that threatens discoloration, will keep

The Y. M. C. A. and Society of Christian Endeavor encampment, and the Bible conference, at Crescent beach, Revere, will open the first of July, with a good home and tent accommodations at reasonable prices. Good bathing, nearness to Boston, good company, opportunities of Bible study, etc., make this a most attractive place for young and old in summer. For further information address Rev. J. P. An Important Element

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Doses One Dollar," stolen by imitators, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This can easily be proven by any one who desires to test the matter. For real economy, buy only Hood's Sarsaparilla, Sold by all druggists.

The latest reason given by the democrats for their annihilation in Oregon is that the men who were sent from New York and Washington to preach free trade and distribute British boodle "were suspected of being emissaries of the administration." That is awful.

The Atkinson House Furnishing Co.

— FROM THE —

HEADQUARTERS AT PORTLAND, MAINE,

To those who are contemplating the purchase of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

GREETING:

On and after June 1st we shall STOP PREPAYING the FREIGHT on GOODS SOLD by us, and we respectfully request that those who have dealt with us, and who have been BENEFITED by the PAYMENT OF THIS FREIGHT which in itself in the past three years has amounted to some

30,000 DOLLARS,

Will order what GOODS they require for this SPRING, from us this month, and please order as early as possible. And to those who intend buying

Silver-ware, Window Shades, Drapery, Dinner Sets, Toilet Sets, Stoves and Ranges, Feathers, Spreads, Blankers, Chamber Sets, Parlor Suits, Carpets, Lounges, Easy Chairs, Mattresses, Springs, Feather Pillows,

And anything else in HOUSE FURNISHING, can be BENEFITED to the extent of the freight to their depot, by buying from us this month. We have always PREPAID THIS FREIGHT FROM OUR OWN PROFITS, as we have invariably made the price on the

Furniture, Carpets,

Etc., lower than could be bought for elsewhere. There has always been a great advantage derived by our prepayment of the freight because we in every instance GUARANTEE the SAFE DELIVERY of the goods, and if there has ever been a fight to make with the railroad, we have done it, or in other words if you have received a

CHAMBER SET, PARLOR SUIT, Chair, or Range,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

That was damaged by the railroad, we have replaced it with another piece, and taken our chances to get the breakage from the road. There are items worthy of our close consideration, and especially at this time of year, be wise and order during this month,

And Save Yourself the Freight from Portland to your Depot, no matter where it is located in the State of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

We believe we are the only HOUSE FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT IN NEW ENGLAND WHO HAVE ADHERED STRICTLY TO THIS PLAN OF PREPAYING THE FREIGHT ON EVERYTHING SHIPPED BY US. We mean by this that while some other houses have shipped the goods, and allowed you to pay freight and afterwards send them a bill and then dicker on it for some time, We have invariably paid out the cash before the article left our freight sheds at Portland. And now notwithstanding the fact that we expect to lose a great deal of business by this this year there seems to be no other way to convince some people of the difference between OUR PAYING THE FREIGHT before the articles leave here, AND OUR CUSTOMERS PAYING THE FREIGHT after the articles get to the depot, and then having to write backwards and forwards over the matter. We wish to deal with perfect fairness and frankness in this matter, consequently we give you another month to make your selection, and to fill orders that are already placed. Now if you want a

KITCHEN RANGE, or a CHAMBER SET, or PARLOR SUIT, or CARPETS, WINDOW SHADES, DRAPERY CURTAINS,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

Kindly come and see us at once, or if you can not come, please write us for Catalogues and Descriptions of these Goods, and we will do our very best to please you in every one. Remember we carry COMPLETE HOUSE FURNISHINGS. There is scarcely a thing that you require for your homes that we do not keep, and we sell the same and shall continue to sell the same for cash, or a quarter cash, and the balance by the week or month. This notice applies TO ALL OUR STORES, and we have written to each of our MANAGERS to this effect, consequently there will be no more freight prepaid from our Bangor Store, Rockland Store, Auburn Store, Bar Harbor Store, Biddeford Store, nor from the Headquarters at Portland, after the 31st day of May, 1888.

Kindly get your orders in before June 1st, if you wish to save this freight.

Respectfully, the Public's Ob't Servants,

LET'S HAVE THE FIRE-WORKS.

It has been suggested by many citizens, and is approved by the general committee on the dedication of the monument, that a display of fireworks on the evening of the 4th of July, at Langdon park or some other appropriate place, would be an additional attractions, and a fitting close to the exercises of the day, But in order to have this, without the expenses of the celebration exceeding the city's appropriation for that purpose, it will be necessary to raise by subscription $250 or $300, and this it is proposed to attempt. The members of the finance committee, Messrs. William Ward, Thomas Entwistle, Joseph E. Amazeen. Daniel Casey and Frant L. Pryor, propose to call upon our business men and citizens generally, that all who wish to contribute to this end may do so; and any one who is not waited upon personally will please not regard it as an intentional slight, but hand to any member of the commitee the sum which it is wished to donate.

PERSONAL.

Col. William H. Hackett and wife are making a brief visit at Newport, R. I.

Chas. E. Batchelder, justice of the police court, has engaged passage for England on the steamer Cephalonia, which leaves Boston for Liverpool June 30th.

Mrs. L. D. Mayhew of Lynn, Mass., is visiting friends on Northwest street, this city.

Mrs. Joseph Spinney of Union street is passing the summer in New Haven, Conn.

Hon. Marcellus Bufford and wife of this city are occupying for a few weeks the Abbott cottage at York beach.

Rev. J. A. Hainer, pastor of the Court street Christian church, is visiting at Millbridge, Me., his former pastorate.

Mr. Andrew Bingham of Littleton, is visiting at Mr. James Cunningham's on South street.

Mrs. Albert Vanderhoff and children, of Winthrop, Mass., are visiting Mr. Frank L. Pryor and wife of this city.

Mrs. Rodney Fall and daughter, of Farmington, are visiting friends in this city.

Mr. Bert J. Rowe left on Friday morning for Boston, to assume the duties of purser of the steamer William Harrison, of the Boston & Hingham Co.'s line.

The man who was injured at the circus on Thursday evening was around town Friday morning with one arm in a sling. He reported his wife as being getting along nicely. Neither of them was so badly injured as was at first feared.

The heavy coal scales of J. Albert Walker and also those of the Concord railroad have been taken out and thoroughly repaired and adjusted by the Fairbanks' agent.

The Penny Post of the 15th inst. says: "A feature of yesterday's excursion, which elicited high commendation from the newspaporial fraternity, was the typographical excellence and tasteful arrangement of the menu card at Hotel Atlantic. It was from the press of Richard I. Walden of this city, whose well-earned fame has spread far and wide for excellent workmanship, prompt attention and business probity."

From last Friday's Dover Republican looking over the grounds and buildings, this week, and drawing plans, etc. Mr. F. N. Footman, of Boston, was the leading architect. It is said that if anything is done by way of improvement this year the present hotel building will be moved back several rods and be used for an ell, while a fine large structure, of model style, will be erected in its place, at no very distant date. With the addition of the fine grounds of John P. Hanson, which will no doubt be purchased if possible, and these properly laid out, no finer place can be had for a summer hotel in the country."

Hon. Daniel Marcy's campaign flag was hauled in on Friday, perhaps with the intention of placing on it the name of the democratic nominee for vice president, whom the old-line democracy would have much preferred to have placed at the head of the ticket.

A meeting of holders of the defaulted bonds of Tiffin, Ohio, Water works was held in Boston on Wednesday, the 13th inst. A committee, of which Wm. H. Rollins, Esq., of this city, is chairman, was appointed to investigate the management of the company's affairs, and to report to the bondholders. The bonds were sold originally by George Wm. Ballou & Co. The Portsmouth Savings bank is reported to hold twelve thousand dollars in these bonds.

MARITIME NOTES.

The schoner Gertie Freeman, Charles O. Johnson master, has fitted out for seining, and will start out on Monday.

Capt. Daniel Clark, the well-known fish dealer of Commercial wharf, has fitted his large whale-boat, the Lily, to drag for mackerel, and will commence operations on the 18th inst.

E. Newton & Co. commence their summer business on Lunging island next Monday. They take out as a crew Capt. Otis Haley, (who has charge of the look-out,) Joseph Fernald, George Wilson and Edward O. Downs.

Joseph Jameson, of Commercial wharf, is doing a large business in fish buying this summer. He has at this time over twenty boats fishing for him, and is receiving from 15,000 to 20,000 pounds per day. E. S. Newton of Manchester purchases about 8,000 pounds per week from Mr. Jameson.

Mr. Clarence Caswell came in from Smuttynose island with 600 nice lobsters on Thursday last. He reported a smooth sea, and his whale-boat made a quick run in.

The American ship Zouave, of Boston, has been abandoned at sea; crew rescued by British ship Larnica, Capt. Boyd, from Liverpool for New York.

The American ship Farragut, which sailed from Calcutta on Jan. 20th with a general cargo for New York, has not been heard from since, and shipping men believe that the vessel with all hands has foundered. She was owned by Edward Lawrence, Jr., of Boston; was built at Newburyport in 1876, and registered 1549 tons.

Forty-two inmates of the Baldwin Place Home for Little Wanderers, Boston, arrived at Rosemary Cottage, Eliot, on the 13th inst., in charge of city missionary Waldron, being the opening day of the cottage. The young folks will remain two weeks to enjoy country life, when their places will be taken by an equal number of other children from the Home.

The York County Congregational Conference convened at Wells on the 13th inst., with a large attendance of clergymen and laymen. The session lasted through the 14th.

The State Unitarian Conference of Maine met at Kennebunk on the 13th inst. In the afternoon Dr. Hill of Portland delivered an address.

Secretary Whitney expresses great confidence that Mr. Cleveland, if reelected, will continue him in the cabinet. This means a liberal subscription to the campaign fund by the Standard Oil Co.

What a Time

People formerly had, trying to swallow the old-fashioned pill with its film of magnesia vainly disguising its bitterness; and what a contrast to Ayer's Pills, that have been well called "sugated sugar-plums"—the only fear being that patients may be tempted into taking too many at a dose. But the directions are plain and should be strictly followed.

J. T. Teller, M. D., of Chittenango, N. Y., expresses exactly what hundreds have written at greater length. He says: "Ayer's Cathartic Pills are highly appreciated. They are perfect in form and coating, and their effects are just that the most careful physician could desire. They have supplanted all the Pills formerly popular here, and I think it must be long before any other can be made that will at all compare with them. Those who buy your pills get full value for their money."

"Safe, pleasant, and certain in their action," is the concise testimony of Dr. George E. Walker, of Martinsville, Virginia.

"Ayer's Pills outsell all similar preparations. The public having once used them, will have no others."—Berry, Venable & Collier, Atlanta, Ga.

HOOD'S COMPOUND EXTRACT PY SARSAPARILLA TRADE MARK

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and we ask you to try Hood's Peculiar Sarsaparilla. It strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. The peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation of the vegetable remedies used give to Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar curative powers. No other medicine has such a record of wonderful cures. If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other instead. It is a Peculiar Medicine, and is worthy your confidence.

To Itself

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

The Equitable Mutual Relief society, a Boston substitute for life insurance, is to be wound up by the attorney general of Massachusetts. It has reached the condition so often attained by such concerns, where the liabilities exceed the assets—result, bankruptcy.

The three-mile race between Kennedy of Quincy, Ill., and Plaisted of Portland, Me., on Lake Quinsigamond, June 13th, was easily won by the former, who finished thirty lengths ahead.

The house spent most of the afternoon on the 13th in discussing a motion to strike tin plate from the free list of the Mills bill; no action was taken. At the conclusion of Senator Hale's speech on the fisheries treaty, consideration of the treaty by the senate was postponed until June 25th.

WE USE SOAP.

WE USE PEARLINE.

DISTORTED HANDS will surely come to those who clean house and wash clothes in the old-fashioned way—with soap. How can it be otherwise? You rub—rub—rub, and you ache—ache—ache. You spend hours inhaling the hot steam and odors which rise from the tub, impregnated with the filth of soiled clothing, and with all this you have not obtained the best results.

WITH PEARLINE a delicate woman can do a large wash. You do not have to rub yourself and your clothes to pieces. You do not have to inhale fetid steam; when finished you are not too tired to see that your work is well and economically done, and that you have saved many hours of woman's hardest work.

JAMES PYLE'S PEARLINE is the modern soap. Beware of imitations.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS. $22 TO $900. The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture in these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.

Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogues free.

PIANOS. Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos, GRAND & UPRIGHT, that they are superior to all others. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN PIANO STRINGER," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.

A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and tuners, sent, together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant.

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

GLYCEROLE OIL DRESSING SHOES

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

STARTLING STATISTICS.

What a High Official Has to Say About the Condition of the People—Some Serious Facts and Figures.

[Herald.]

"It is wonderful what figures will show." Such was the remark of a high official in the State Department to a representative of this paper. "How many really rich men do you suppose there are in New England? Very few. But how many do you think there would be if people were physically and mentally sound and vigorous? New England people are active, restless and ambitious, and therefore neglect themselves. Not one man or woman in ten is in perfect health."

"Official figures show this, do they?"

"Precisely. Dyspepsia is to be a New England disease. People do not seem to think that headaches, or tired feeling, or 'blues,' or loss of appetite, or nervousness mean anything. Then, the first thing they know they are in bed and on thereon to death.

"Do many die of this disease?"

"Thousands. Henry Wilson, Charles Sumner, Wendell Phillips and Governor Bodwell are among the number. James G. Blaine is also on the road, and his trip abroad is in the hope of recovering health."

"But what do you find to counteract it?"

"Very little. The only reliable medicine so far discovered is Hunt's Remedy. The faculty of one of our leading medical colleges, knowing the composition of this medicine, have been recommending it for some time, and the results have been wonderful. I know three ladies and one gentleman (one of the latter a State officer), who have been entirely cured by its use. I wish everybody might know more about it and use it."

Such facts and figures, and from so high a source, should prove invaluable to thousands whose success in life would be much greater were they physically and metally sound and vigorous.

MANDRAKE CompounD

Among the various organs of our system, none perform a more essential part than the Liver and Kidneys, and so many people are afflicted with diseases of these organs, causing the Blood to become impure; that it is our first duty to assist them in their work. This is done in a thorough manner by Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, which is purely Vegetable, and is worthy of a fair trial.

CITY OF PORTSMOUTH,
MAYOR'S OFFICE, April 16th, 1888.

THE JUGGLER.

A mountebank amidst a crowd
Thus cried aloud—
"Walk up, Messieurs, and try the cure
For every evil men endure!
It is a powder which will give
All things for which you strive and live.
To fools it gives intelligence;
And to the guilty innocence.
Honor on rascals it bestows,
And to old women brings young beaux;
Secures old men young, pretty wives,
Makes maidens lead well temper'd lives—
In short, whatever you would gain
It will assist you to attain.
It is a perfect panacea."

"The juggler's table I drew near
This wondrous powder to behold
Of which such miracles were told—
It was a little powdered gold!"

—The Fables of Florian.

Lizards and Their Tails.

Most lizards have the faculty of shedding their tails when seriously frightened, and of sprouting new ones from the stump some time afterward. This leads a writer in a cyclopædia for young people to say that "lizards' tails are almost as brittle as glass," and that a glove or handkerchief dropped on them causes them to snap off. To my own knowledge the tail of the "joint snake," or legless lizard, is so much more "brittle" than glass that it breaks into several pieces when it isn't touched at all, provided the reptile is placed in jeopardy of his life. The tendency to sprout a new tail when the old one is gone is so strong that it is not uncommon to see a lizard with a forked tail—the new one having grown out when the old one was only partially dissevered.—Henry J. Philpott in American Magazine.

Weak Eyes in School Rooms.

It is not surprising that so many school children suffer with weak eyes when we consider the conditions under which they are forced to use them. The very fact that the light in many school rooms is twice strained through glass partitions before it penetrates the inside rooms, is in itself a severe test of sight. The preponderance of ssah wood over the panes of glass is anything but propitious to clear seeing. With heads bent over desks doing arithmetical examples, or studying the fine printed school books, or reading their own imperfect handwriting from which many of the lessons must be learned, the only wonder is that all the little ones are not purblind before they reach the grammar schools.—Professor David Webster, M. D.

Fishes in an Aquarium.

In a store where birds, fishes and animals are sold I watched an attendant putting together the material for a small aquarium. "Is it not great trouble to keep the fishes alive?" I asked. "You must change the water daily, must you not?" "Not more than once a year," was his reply. "That was the old fashioned aquarium before the scientists had discovered for us the oxygen producing plants. You see that bit of plant under the rocks there? Well, that is oxygen producing. We put it in with the fishes, where it serves at once as an ornament and a life giver and preserver. This aquarium that I am now finishing will not require a change of water for at least eighteen months. Then by changing the water it will go another year or year and a half."—New York Tribune.

Error of European Tourists.

It is a fatal error of almost all those 60,000 tourists who come in the annual swarm across the Atlantic that they fly along the well worn paths, live in modern hotels, diet themselves on homeopathic doses out of guide books, and pass from city to city, just as the rustic gazes through one hole after another in the peep show at a country fair. There are thousands of people who stay at home, read quietly, look thoughtfully at maps and pictures, and through all kinds of good books get a far deeper insight into the lives of other lands than the bustling conventional tourists, who take the round peep show method of looking at Europe.—Corinth Cor. Boston Globe.

Railroad Building in New South Wales.

There was nothing else for it, so I took a pick and shovel and went to work on the railway embankment, yes, even as a sub-contractor; that is to say, the land was just being cleared and burnt off and my undertaking was to take so many claims, according to the nature of the ground, at a price varying from twopence to fourteen pence per cubic yard; the mullock was to be dug and wheeled to form the embankment. In some cases we met with rocks and other impediments, and then we didn't dig at all. We, my mates and myself, went to work about sunrise in the summer, say 5 a. m., and knocked off at sunset. We lived in our own camp, a calico tent, cooked our own tucker, when we had any, drank water that you wouldn't drown a dog in at home and had altogether a sanguinary jolly time of it. However, we stuck on with the work and eventually got to within sixteen miles of Bourke, when the water, feed and everything else gave out.

The weather was as hot as tophet three heated, and the work for the time was abandoned. And a very lively trip we had of it down the fifty-five miles of back line. We had to carry water in our canvas water bags. Out of nine dogs we had with us, six died from the heat, and we ourselves were not too much alive at the finish. I may here say that during the eighteen months I was working on the line the only vegetables I tasted were dried apples, rice and bread; the rest of our bill of fare was made up of corned mutton, very occasionally; canned fish, preserved mutton and beef, and very rarely fresh beef. We also consumed kangaroo when we could get it. Sometimes we would poach a couple of jumbucks (sheep), and to show to what a state they were reduced, I have often carried two in a sack, and they didn't weigh more than twenty pounds together.—Australia Letter.

The Humorist and the Poet.

Humor seems to accord better with our present attitude toward life than poetry does. The humorists certainly make more money than the poets. This is a course and brutal test, but it means popularity, the approval of the spirit of the age. We are scientific, and science does not object to quips and cranks, especially when they are directed against religious, spiritual or transcendental tenets. The latter, on the contrary, cannot endure being laughed at with equanimity. And, disguise it how we may, this is a sign of weakness—not necessarily in true religious, spiritual or transcendental philosophy, but in what just now passes for those philosophies among us. Laughter may be the expression of a contemptible as well as a contemptuous feeling; but so much the more ought it to be impotent against whatever is secure in its own strength and value.—Julian Hawthorne in American Magazine.

The "Jingals" of Burmah.

These jingals are brass guns, about two feet long, like a cannon in shape, and are carried by the Burman on his shoulder. When he wants to fire a shot he gets a forked stick and a few stones, and placing the barrel in the fork he takes aim by inserting stones under the butt of it. Having so charged it, he picks up the jingal and runs off to another place, so it is very hard to know where he is.—Neville Morris in New York Star.

A Waterproof Shoe.

The latest idea in the direction of waterproof footwear is a shoe made with a stout calfskin vamp, seamless, underlying which is a vamp of thin rubber, and between it and the lining, which is of stout canvas. The bottom of the shoe has a rubber interlining between the outer and inner soles, and thus the shoe is about as near waterproof as a leather shoe can be. It is said to wear well and preserve its waterproof qualities for an indefinite period.—Chicago Times.

A Georgia farmer, who lives near Kenesaw mountain, with a small branch running through his farm, which you could dam up with a couple of spades of dirt, has the following sign stuck up: "Hunting positively forbidden on this place, but you can fish as much as you please."—Chicago Times.

New Eggs Are Used.

In France alone the wine clarifiers use more than 80,000,000 a year, and the Alsatians consume fully 38,000,000 in calico printing and for dressing the leather that is used in making the finest French kid gloves.—Eastern Farmer.

Delicate Children, Nursing

Mothers, overworked men and for all diseases where the tissues are wasting away from the inability to digest food, or from overwork; should take Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam for coughs and colds does, is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The large bottles are 50c. and $1. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption. tje23

a man for groaning when he has Rheumatism or Neuralgia. The pain is simply awful. No torture in the ancient times was more painful than these twin diseases. But—oughtn't a man to be blamed if, having Rheumatism or Neuralgia, he wont use Ath-lo-pho-ros, when it has cured thousands who have suffered in the same way? It has cured hundreds after physicians have pronounced them incurable.

"The skill of five physicians could not cure me of Rheumatism which had settled in the hips, neck and shoulders. So intense was the pain that sleep was almost impossible. Clinging to the Last.

The virus of rheumatism often remains in the system through life, when it does not cut the thread of existence suddenly, as it is always liable to do by attacking the heart. Ere the grip of this tenacious disease tightens, it should be loosened by that beneficent liberator from disease, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which will free the sufferer at the outset from subsequent pain and danger. No purer or more agreeable blood depurent exists, as multitudes of the rheumatic and neuralgic have ascertained by certified experience. It is through the medium of a regular action of the kidneys and bladder that an outlet is afforded for the escape of impurities which beget not only rheumatic, but gouty ailments, and dropsical effusions. To these organs the Bitters gives an impulse, never verging on the bounds of irritation, but sufficiently vigorous to cause them and the bowels to perform their functions with clock-like precision. Use it also for dyspepsia, biliousness, fever and ague and debility.

An Important Element

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Doses One Dollar," stolen by imitators, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This can easily be proven by any one who desires to test the matter. One man was killed and three wounded in a recent battle between New Mexico cattlemen over a few cents.

I have had catarrh for twenty years, and used all kinds of remedies without relief. Mr. Smith, druggist, of Little Falls, recomended Ely's Cream Balm. The effect of the first application was magical, it allayed the inflammation and the next morning my head was as clear as a bell. One bottle has done so much good that I am convinced its use will effect a permanent cure. It is soothing, pleasant and easy to apply, and I strongly urge its use to all sufferers.—George Terry, Little Falls, N. Y.

A Hearty Laugh.

There is nothing that will help digestion like a hearty laugh. But how can a billious man laugh? What warmth is there in a dyspeptic's smile? And how can a man be mirthful when his liver is out of order? We recommend all such persons to use Ingalls' Mandrake Compound. It acts directly on the liver and stomach, stimulating the one and strengthening the other. A single bottle will convince one of its efficacy.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. A LETTER FROM MARION HARLAND.

[FAC SIMILE.]

I regard the Royal Baking Powder as the best manufactured article in the market, so far as I have any experience in the use of such compounds. Since the introduction of it into my kitchen, three years ago, I have used no other in making biscuits, cake, etc., and have entirely discarded for such purposes the home made combination of one-third soda, two-thirds cream of tartar. Every box has been in perfect condition when it came into my hands and the contents have given complete satisfaction. It is an act of simple justice and also a pleasure to recommend it unqualifiedly to American housewives.

A FAIR IN ENGLAND.

Leading Features of an Old Custom Which Is Becoming Obsolete.

The annual or semi-annual fair still held in many towns in England is an old custom which is becoming obsolete. Its only practical usefulness would seem to be the market portion of it held in the morning, in the case of one day fairs, when cattle, sheep, etc., are sold and farmers exchange views and greetings. Some larger fairs extend over three or four days, the last being sometimes called "pack and penny day." The marketing business over, the remainder of the day is spent in visiting the shows (with exaggerated exterior), shooting galleries, fancy stalls, etc., where the country rustics especially, who have for some time dwelt in pleasant anticipation of the sights coming to town, can meet old friends and enjoy the sweetmeats and wonders in store for them.

The owners of the different objects of amusement appear to be something of the gypsy kind and move about with their belongings from place to place, paying a certain "royalty" for standing room, the showmen being placed away from the main streets to prevent their noisy clamor from frightening horses. The cracking of rifles and smaller weapons, noisy rivalry of the showmen, music of the merry go rounds, make up one unceasing "pandemonium." Here one may be invited to try his skill with a small gun which fires a dart propelled only by a percussion cap, with the assurance that it is "the very gun that killed Bonaparte;" next, perhaps, the visitor is drawn into a wonderful peep show where the more recent tragedies seen through a magnifying glass are dolefully described as they appear in turn. I recall a hideous looking picture of a man, the true likeness of which I was unable to deny and which, with a peculiar nasal drawl, was stated to be "correct representation of Nena Sahib, who committed those fearful atrocities at Cawnpore and Delhi in India."

The external amusements outside the different variety shows usually excel the inside performances sufficiently for you to enter in response to the invitation to "walk up." I remember an eloquent showman yelling lustily: "Walk up and see the Great African Sandpiper which, when hunted, buries his head in the sand, from which place of security he laughs with delight at his pursuers;" and "hear the animals roar," the response being an unearthly noise from men inside. Frequently living monstrosities are shown and allowed to take up a collection from the audience, being, perhaps, their sole remuneration. The "Cheap Jack" who sells all kinds of "Brummagen" goods, chiefly cutlery, in a sort of mock auction, is also a humorous character, who amuses the spectators with funny speeches and songs during his sale. Thus, after gaping "at all the sights in town," frequently adjourning to one of the many taverns to get his exchequer replenished by his father, the small boy retires from the busy scene to dream of all the things he has eaten and beheld.—Detroit Free Press.

Carelessness in Handling Infants.

If there is one piece of folly that excites my impatience more than another it is the methods pursued by the average nurse girl—and perhaps some mothers also—of lifting the 3-year-old or 4-year-old infant in their charge into a street car or other vehicle, or out of the same. The said method, with slight variations, according to the temper of the person in charge, is something like this: The luckless youngster is standing on the street by the side of its keeper; a second or so passes while the car comes to a standstill; the infant then finds itself grasped firmly by the arm somewhere below the elbow, lifted bodily into the air, and lugged like a sack of beans or bundle of old clothes to the desired altitude.

On reaching its destination it is yanked downwards in the same ruthless fashion, the victim landing on its little feet with a crash, after sailing through the air much after the style of a toy balloon at the end of a twenty-foot string on a windy day. Time and again have my sympathies been racked by this strangely horrible spectacle. In witnessing it my strongest emotion is a desire to strangle the person who is responsible for it, and my next strongest one of astonishment that the "kid" should have become sufficiently inured to the torture to stand it without bawling.—Chicago Journal.

Leprosy in the Land.

A few years ago leprosy was considered one of the impossible diseases in this land. It was held to be a peculiar development of unsanitary conditions incident to long past ages. It was, to be sure, known that in Africa, and possibly among the Chinese, leprosy still lingered. But now it has fairly located itself in America, and is one more evil that may reach enormous proportions. Dr. Allen, in the New York Medical Journal, concludes: "(1) Leprosy has existed in this country to some extent for twenty years; (2) the tendency is for the disease to increase, not only from immigration, but from sporadic cases; (3) it is a contagious disease, and may also be transmitted from parent to offspring; (4) transmission takes place in some cases by inoculation; (5) segregation has been proved to be the only sure means of freeing a country from its ravages; (6) it is the duty of the government to establish leprosy hospitals or isolated settlements for the treatment of the afflicted."—Globe-Democrat.

A Silk Walk in Shanghai.

In one part of the walls the path, as so often in China, has been encroached upon, not for a rope walk, but a silk walk. A boy with two small shuttles seizes hold of the light weight attached at one end of the silken cord, and with a few dexterous turns sets the whole cord, composed of several fibres, spinning. Then the next, then the next, and so on till five silken threads are being spun by hand without the aid of machinery. At the other end there are weights hanging to keep them taut. But the other end is a long way off; and as we walk along it is hard to avoid brushing against the prettily colored silken threads. Here is a man winding them into skeins. He enters into conversation. It seems the soldiers make an honest penny by letting off some part of the walls for silk winding. They

A Horrible Inheritance

The transmission of the fearful effects of contagious blood poison is certainly the most horrible inheritance which any man can leave to his innocent posterity. The curse contained in the Scriptural declaration: "The sins of the fathers shall be visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generation," can be certainly mitigated, and in the majority of cases, prevented, by the use of the antidote to the contagious blood poison which Nature herself furnishes, and which is to be found in its native purity and infallible efficacy in the remedy known all over the world as Swift's Specific—commonly called "S. S. S." As illustrative of this fact we give the following evidence—they are test cases, taken at random from hundreds of others of similar character:

Mr. J. H. Brown, of Hornellsville, N. Y., writes: Three years I suffered with this horrible disease. Swift's Specific cured me completely.

Prof. Edwin Baar, 234 E. Twenty-second street, New York, writes: Swift's Specific cured me of a fearful case of Blood Poison.

Dr. B. F. Wingfield, of the Soldier's Home, Richmond, Va., writes: Swift's Specific cured me of a severe case of Blood Poison.

D. W. K. Briggs, Brooklyn, N. Y.: I was a perfect wreck from Blood Poison. Specific restored health and hope, and I am well today.

C. W. Langhill, Savannah, Ga.: I have suffered a long time with Blood Poison. I tried Swift's Specific and am now a perfectly well man.

A. W. Buell, of Power's Hotel, Rochester, N. Y., writes: It is the best blood remedy on earth. I cured myself with it. I recommended it to a friend of mine, a well know business man, and it made him well.

Mr. F. L. Stanton, editor of the Smithville, Ga., News, writes that a friend of his was afflicted with a severe case of Blood Poison, and that two bottles of S. S. S. effected a complete cure. He tried every other remedy in vain.

Mr. J. B. Kellogg, Stamford, Conn., writes, December 16, 1887: Your S. S. S. is doing for me what ought to have been done long ago. It has done me more good in one week than all the medicines I have ever taken. Would I had gotten it before! But "all's well that ends well." It will make a new man of me, and I thank God that I have found it at last!

Possibly a True Story.

A despatch of June 15th from Philadelphia to the Boston Herald says that Capt. Howard of the three-masted schooner Edward W. Young, at Philadelphia from Boston, reports that on May 24th, when off the capes of the Delaware, he saw a two-masted schooner blown up. The despatch goes on:

"After the explosion the Edward W. Young approached somewhat nearer to the wreck of the unknown vessel, and the black, dismantled hulk could be plainly seen without a glass, rising up and down in the swell of the sea. The waves seemed to be unusually agitated, while over the wreck hung sheavy cloud of black and lead colored smoke. The lookout was looking at the strange vessel when the explosion occurred. While he was gazing at her, suddenly a great wave of smoke puffed out of the hatchway, then a tongue of flame shot up between the masts like a bolt of forked lightning, and instantaneously, and before the report of the explosion had reached his ears, the air was filled with debris. Masts, spars, decks and everything else seemed to hang in the air for a moment. Then the debris sank back into the water, and nothing was left of the vessel except the black hulk. The lookout scanned the neighborhood of the wreck with his glass in every direction, in the hope that some of the crew had been warned in time to escape from the vessel, but no sign of a human being could be found. Evidently the entire crew had perished. Capt. Howard made every possible effort to approach the wreck, but the lightness of the wind made it impossible. The wrecked vessel may have been the schooner Rambler, Capt. O'Brien, which sailed from New York May 21st with a crew of seven men, and a cargo of sixty tons of dynamite for Colon."

This may be all true; but just where the three-master has been since she was off the Delaware capes on the 24th of May, bound to Philadelphia, is not stated, nor is it clear how so much came to be left of an old wooden schooner of small size, after the explosion of sixty tons of dynamite in her hold. Either the vessel must have been uncommonly strong or the dynamite less powerful than the usual article.

The Republican National Convention organizes at Chicago to-morrow. It is not to be a convention of one man, but of the unmarked delegates of a great party.

Advices from the Congo say that Arabs, who have arrived at Kinshassa, say that Henry M. Stanley was wounded in a fight with natives, and afterwards half his escort deserted. Tippoo Tib had not sent the promised convoy to Stanley.

The house committe on foreign affairs will report favorably the bill for an exposition in Washington of the products, arts and manufactures of the American republics.

There were a number of fatalities by a recent electric storm in Nebraska, and two children were killed by lightning in Minnesota the same day.

Marion Harland's Opinion.

Readers of the Chronicle are familiar not only with the sprightly writings of Marion Harland, but also with her sound common sense upon matters of every day life and action. Her name, indeed, is a household work, and is equally well known in the parlor and kitchen. Her celebrated cook book is without a peer, and shows that she has made a careful study of how to prepare good, wholesome food, in the best manner of the best materials. In this issue we produce a fac-simile letter from Marion Harland that speaks in the highest terms of the unequalled qualities of the Royal Baking Powder. Housewives everywhere should read the opinion of such an expert and act accordingly. All good cooks, who have used the Royal, are of the same opinion also.

"Captain Kidd's Gold. The true story of an Adventurous Sailor Boy." By James Franklin Fitts. No. 10 of the "Boy's Home Library." Paper, 12mo. Price twenty-five cents. Published by A. L. Burt, 162 William St., New York.

The author of this number of Mr. Burt's excellent Boys' Library has caught the true spirit of Daniel Defoe and Captain Marryat, and he has here given to the boys of America a most fascinating story of the sea, for which it is very safe to predict a wide reading and large popularity. Not only is it a clever and entertaining story, but it embodies such lessons in geography and history as make it of sterling value to parents and instructors, while the high moral tone that everywhere breathes through it is a strong recommendation. The author has evidently travelled far and seen much as his pen-pictures of interesting localities could never have been drawn at second-hand. The illustrations are apt, and the volume cannot fail to make its way to the boys. It is for sale at Goodrich's.

Can I give you something that I found in a delightful book called "Among the Azores?" It is about convicted criminals in Flores, one of the Azores, where the law actually compels a prisoner to become his own jailer! He is given the keys of the establishment, and is expected to keep himself closely confined, but with entenuating privileges. The liberties he enjoys, his freedom from toil, the friends whom he admits to keep him company, render his prison life rather a luxury than otherwise. The windows of the prison are always inviting to gossiping loungers, and it is rumored that prisoners have been known even to take pleasant rambles through the city after dark. There is supposed to be a jailer connected with the establishment, but he has an easy time of it.—From "Jack-in-the-Pulpit," in St. Nicholas for June.

A timely article in the July Century is "Disease Germs and how to Combat Them." It will be accompanied by a frontispiece portrait of Pasteur, who has made disinfection and fermentation a longer study than hydrophobia, although it is with the latter that his name is more intimately associated in the public mind.

A Drink That Kills Men.

Absinthe consists essentially of alcohol mixed with volatile oil of wormwood and some other less active ingredients, especially oil of anise. Dr. Cyrus Edson, of the health department, and others say that for some time it has been noticed that the effects of absinthe drinking differ essentially from those of pure alcoholic drinks, constituting a series of symptoms which have been designated under the name of absinthism. The attention of a reporter was called to the case of a wealthy merchant who was quite recently taken ill in the street and carried into the house of a physician. He had for a score of years drank brandy and whisky, oftentimes to excess. About six months ago he took to drinking absinthe in the morning to steady his nerves. He found that after the first effects of the drink wore off he was in a worse condition than before, and in order to keep up he found it necessary to keep himself pretty much all the time braced up with the poison. From drinking absinthe in whisky he took to drinking it plain. When he was carried into the physician's office he was frothing at the mouth and suffering from convulsions. He is now under special care and there are hopes of his ultimate recovery.

The characteristic symptoms of absinthism are restlessness at night, with disturbing dreams and nausea and vomiting in the morning. The hands tremble and the tongue shakes in a jerky fashion in the mouth. The sufferer is hardly able to articulate. Then follow vertigo and a decided tendency to epileptiform convulsions, in which the patient loses consciousness. He falls, bites his tongue, foams at the mouth and makes facial grimaces. All the while his limbs are working. Experiments have been made with alcohol and oil of wormwood, separately, on the lower animals, and it is undeniably demonstrated that the effects referred to are ascribable directly to the wormwood. As absinthe is made from wormwood it may be inferred by even the uninitiated in medical science that as a drink it more dangerous than any other alcoholic drink in its pure form.

Method of "Muzzling Oysters."

Professor W. Matthieu Williams writes to Nature that the practice of muzzling oysters—recently described—is by no means new, though probably original on the part of American naturalists. London fishmongers have muzzled oysters on a large scale from a time that is immemorial among them, but without wires, as anybody may learn by watching an expert in the process of barreling. After the mass of oysters is compressed so as to render the slightest gaping of any one quite impossible he firmly nails down the head of the barrel. Experience has proved that oysters thus effectively muzzled may take long slow journeys (as they did in the old coaching days) and be kept fresh and without loss of flavor for two or three weeks, provided the barrels are unopened. If, however, they are loosely barreled a few days are too many.—Chicago News.

Sleep Before Midnight.

It is just as true as that the sun has not failed to rise daily in all these many centuries that every hour's sleep before midnight is as beneficial as a beautifier as three hours' rest in the arms of Morpheus in the wee ama' hours.—Chicago Herald.

A SIBERIAN CONVICT BARGE.

Prisoners Going Aboard at Tiumen—Criminals Bound for the Mines.

The barge lay at a floating landing stage of the type with which we had become familiar on the rivers Volga and Kama, and access to it was gained by means of a zigzag wooden bridge sloping down to it from the high bank of the river. The exiles, although uniformly clad in gray, presented, from an ethnological point of view, an extraordinary diversity of types, having evidently been collected from all parts of the vast empire. There were fierce, wild looking mountaineers from Daghestan and Circassia, condemned to penal servitude for murders of blood revenge; there were Tartars from the lower Volga, who had been sunburned until they were almost as black as negroes; Turks from the Crimea, whose scarlet fezes contrasted strangely with their gray convict overcoats; crafty looking Jews from Podolia, going into exile for smuggling; and finally, common peasants in great numbers from all parts of European Russia. The faces of the prisoners generally were not as hard, vicious and depraved as the faces of criminals in America. Many of them were pleasant and good humored, some were fairly intelligent, and even the worst seemed to me stupid and brutish rather than savage or malignant.

At last all were on board; the sliding doors of the network cages were closed and secured with heavy padlocks, and a regular Russian bazar opened on the landing stage. Male and female peddlers to the number of forty or fifty were allowed to come down to the side of the barge to sell provisions to the prisoners, most of whom seemed to be in possession of money. In one place might be seen a half grown girl passing hard boiled eggs one by one through the interstices of the network; in another a gray haired old woman was pouring milk through a tin tube into a teapot held by a convict on the inside of the cage; and all along the barge men were buying and bargaining for loaves of black rye bread, salted cucumbers, pretzels and fish turn overs. The peddlers seemed to have perfect trust in the convicts, and often passed food to them before they had received pay for it. The soldiers of the guard, who were good looking, fresh faced young fellows, facilitated the buying and selling as far as possible by handing in the provisions and handing out the money, or by opening the sliding doors for admission of bulky articles as loaves of bread, which could not be passed through the net work.

While we stood looking at this scene of busy traffic, a long haired Russian priest in a black gown and a broad brimmed felt hat crossed the landing stage and entered one of the deck houses, followed by an acolyte bearing his robes and prayer book. In a few moments, having donned his ecclesiastical vestments, he entered the women's cage, with a smoking censer in one hand and an open book in the other, and began a "moleben," or service of prayer. The women all joined devoutly in the supplications, bowing, crossing themselves, kneeling, and even pressing their foreheads to the deck. The priests hurried through the service, however, in a perfunctory manner swung the censer back and forth a few times so as to fill the compartment with fragrant smoke, and then went into the men's cage. There much less interest seemed to be taken in the services. The convicts and soldiers removed their caps, but only a few joined in the prayer, and buying and selling went on without interruption all along the side of the barge.

With few exceptions, the latter seemed cheerful and happy, and in all parts of the cage we could hear laughter, joking, and animated conversation. Mr. Frost finally began making sketches in his notebook of some of the more striking of the convict types on the other side of the network. This soon attracted the attention of the prisoners, and amidst great laughter and merriment they began dragging forward and arranging, in what they regarded as artistic poses, the convicts whom they thought most worthy of an artist's pencil. Having selected a subject, they would place him in all sorts of studiously careless and negligent attitudes, comb and arrange the long hair on the unshaven side of his head, try the effect of a red fez or an embroidered Tartar cap, and then shout suggestions and directions to the artist. This arranging of figures and groups for Mr. Frost to draw seemed to afford them great amusement, and was accompanied with as much joking and laughter as if they were school boys off for a picnic, instead of criminals bound for the mines.

At last, just after sunset, a steamer made fast to the barge, the order was given to cast off the lines, the exiles all crowded against the network to take a parting look at Tiumen, and the great black and yellow floating prison moved slowly out into the stream and began its long voyage to Tomsk.—George Kennan in The Century.

The Era of Discovery.

The announcement that a commission of savants will shortly set out for Mount Ararat, or the elevation in Western Asia designated by that name, recalls the alleged attempt some years ago to recover from the bed of the Red sea, at the point where the children of Israel were supposed to have crossed, some relic of the lost hosts of Pharaoh.

It would seem that a new era is about opening in the matter of exploration and discovery. A Danish expedition will shortly start to explore the interior of Greenland; a Mexican party is preparing to invade the undiscovered interior of Yucatan; the sources of the Amazon are being penetrated, while the Russians are pushing their discoveries in Northern Siberia and their possessions within the Arctic circle. Stanley is in the heart of Africa, and while waiting to hear from him the world listens to the story of the wondrous discoveries in the planetary world by the aid of the superb Lick telescope. Taken all in all, the indications are that before the dawn of the year 1900 many of the mysteries of lost cities and forgotten nations, of nebulæ and stars and interplanetary space will have been revealed to the glorious light of the Nineteenth century.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Her Frank Opinion.

Mr. Selflove (who always tries to be quite at his ease over the size of his nose, but who never quite succeeds)—Some people, you know, quite admire a large nose, Miss Frankleigh, and the noble Romans considered the possession of one really an honor. Do you—that is, will you be quite frank and tell me what you think of mine?

Don't Wait

Until your hair becomes dry, thin, and gray before giving the attention needed to preserve its beauty and vitality. Keep on your toilet-table a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor—the only dressing you require for the hair—and use a little, daily, to preserve the natural color and prevent baldness.

Thomas Munday, Sharon Grove, Ky., writes: "Several months ago my hair commenced falling out, and in a few weeks my head was almost bald. Tried many remedies, but they did no good. I finally bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and, after using only a part of the contents, my head was covered with a heavy growth of hair. I recommend your preparation as the best hair-restorer in the world."

OFFICIAL NOTICE!

— OF — -

The Atkinson House Furnishing Co.

— FROM THE —

HEADQUARTERS AT PORTLAND, MAINE,

To those who are contemplating the purchase of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

GREETING:

On and after June 1st we shall STOP PREPAYING the FREIGHT on GOODS SOLD by us, and we respectfully request that those who have dealt with us, and who have been BENEFITED by the PAYMENT OF THIS FREIGHT which in itself in the past three years has amounted to some

80,000 DOLLARS,

Will order what GOODS they require for this SPRING, from us this month, and please order as early as possible. And to those who intend buying

Silver-ware, Window Shades, Drapery, Dinner Sets, Toilet Sets, Stoves and Ranges, Feathers, Spreads, Blankers, Chamber Sets, Parlor Suits, Carpets, Lounges, Easy Chairs, Mattresses, Springs, Feather Pillows,

And anything else in HOUSE FURNISHING, can be BENEFITED to the extent of the freight to their depot, by buying from us this month. We have always PREPAID THIS FREIGHT FROM OUR OWN PROFITS, as we have invariably made the price on the

Furniture, Carpets,

Etc., lower than could be bought for elsewhere. There has always been a great advantage derived by our prepayment of the freight because we in every instance GUARANTEE the SAFE DELIVERY of the goods, and if there has ever been a fight to make with the railroad, we have done it, or in other words if you have received a

CHAMBER SET, PARLOR SUIT, Chair, or Range,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

That was damaged by the railroad, we have replaced it with another piece, and taken our chances to get the breakage from the road. There are items worthy of our close consideration, and especially at this time of year, be wise and order during this month,

And Save Yourself the Freight from Portland to your Depot, no matter where it is located in the State of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

We believe we are the only HOUSE FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT IN NEW ENGLAND WHO HAVE ADHERED STRICTLY TO THIS PLAN OF PREPAYING THE FREIGHT ON EVERYTHING SHIPPED BY US. We mean by this that while some other houses have shipped the goods, and allowed you to pay freight and afterwards send them a bill and then dicker on it for some time, We have invariably paid out the cash before the article left our freight sheds at Portland. And now notwithstanding the fact that we expect to lose a great deal of business by this this year there seems to be no other way to convince some people of the difference between OUR PAYING THE FREIGHT before the articles leave here, AND OUR CUSTOMERS PAYING THE FREIGHT after the articles get to the depot, and then having to write backwards and forwards over the matter. We wish to deal with perfect fairness and frankness in this matter, consequently we give you another month to make your selection, and to fill orders that are already placed. Now if you want a

KITCHEN RANGE, or a CHAMBER SET, or PARLOR SUIT, or CARPETS, WINDOW SHADES, DRAPERY CURTAINS,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

Kindly come and see us at once, or if you can not come, please write us for Catalogues and Descriptions of these Goods, and we will do our very best to please you in every one. Remember we carry COMPLETE HOUSE FURNISHINGS. There is scarcely a thing that you require for your homes that we do not keep, and we sell the same and shall continue to sell the same for cash, or a quarter cash, and the balance by the week or month. This notice applies TO ALL OUR STORES, and we have written to each of our MANAGERS to this effect, consequently there will be no more freight prepaid from our Bangor Store, Rockland Store, Auburn Store, Bar Harbor Store, Biddeford Store, nor from the Headquarters at Portland, after the 31st day of May, 1888.

Kindly get your orders in before June 1st, if you wish to save this freight.

Respectfully, the Public's Ob't Servants,

THE ATKINSON HOUSE FURNISHING CO.,

Headquarters Cor. Pearl and Middle Streets, Portland, and Branches at Auburn, Rockland, Bangor and Biddeford, also Bar Harbor for a short time.

ISAAC C. ATKINSON, Gen. Manager.

The Portsmouths play the Salems on the grounds of the latter to-day.

Dr. M. B. Sullivan on Saturday resigned his position as director of the Dover base ball club, and W. H. Cushman was elected in his place. It was voted to admit ladies and clergymen free to all games on the Dover grounds hereafter.

The Manchester Mirror says: "H. Frank Morse closed a contract this week with Frank J. Leonard, to act as advance agent in the interests of his bookkeeping enterprises, which he intends to extend in various parts of the United States. Mr. Leonard will sever his connection with base ball interests at Portsmouth early in August to go upon the road. Mr. Morse recently refused the position of cashier and head bookkeeper in the United States hotel, Boston."

PERSONAL.

The Sherburne house on Christian Shore was opened on Saturday for the summer by Mr. Henry Putnam and wife of Worcester, Mass., and Mr. A. A. Payne.

Mrs. B. Whitcomb of Fleet street went to Boston on Saturday, to pass the 17th of June (celebrated this year on the 18th, the 17th being Sunday) with relatives in that city.

Mr. Ed. C. Stickney, the champion dumb-bell lifter, arrived in the city on Saturday from Augusta, Me., on his way to Massachusetts, and stopped over a few hours.

Mr. William T. Rand and wife, of Boston, are passing a few days with Mr. Rand's parents, Mr. Alexander L. Rand and wife of Islington street.

Mr. George W. Boynton of Natick, Mass., who was last week the guest of Charles E. Boynton, Esq., of this city, left on Saturday for his home.

Mrs. Wm. C. Ham of Boston is visiting her parents, Mr. Theodore H. Deverson and wife, of Newcastle avenue.

Miss Addie I. Cobbett of Lynn is visiting her parents, Mr. G. A. Cobbett and wife of Northwest street.

Mr. Hartley W. Mason has taken rooms for his family at James Locke's, at the Lower Foreside, Kittery, for the summer. He has bought a piece of land of Wm. H. Fernald, at Kittery Point, and will erect a summer cottage there.

Mr. William J. Mendum of Winchester, Mass., is passing a few days at the home of his father, Charles H. Mendum, Esq., on Middle street.

Mr. William Sharfenberg, wife and two daughters, of New York, arrived at Sawyer's cottage, Rye beach, on Friday evening, and one of the daughters, aged twenty-two years, died very suddenly that night. The young lady had been in feeble health for some time.

DON'T OVERLOAD YOUR BARRELS.

Mr. James McCarthy, one of the city teamsters, has been confined to his home for some days on account of a severe strain to his back received while emptying a heavy barrel of rubbish into one of the carts engaged in gathering the refuse matter placed on the streets by the citizens. We have before called attention to the fact that the city carts are high-wheeled and high-sided, and that ashes barrels filled to the top require an unsafe exertion on the part of the teamsters to empty. The death of at least one of the city employes is said to have resulted from this cause. The men are not required by their instructions to empty a barrel containing over two bushels, but of course they do not wish to appear churlish or lazy. A little consideration on the part of the citizens, for the working men, would harm no one.

MARITIME NOTES

The barque Harvard, Thompson master, passed through Hell Gate June 14th, on the way from New York to Batavia, Java.

The Newmarket Advertiser reports that "great numbers of alewives are being caught in the river just below the dam" at that place, and adds: "They have not been so plenty hereabouts for twelve or fourteen years."

Schooner Charles McDonald with ninety-six barrels of mackerel taken off Block island, and the Geneva with twenty-eight barrels, arrived at Providence, R. I., June 14th. On the same day the schooner Cora E. Smith arrived at Newport with sixty barrels of very small ones.

The annual regatta of the Portland yacht club was sailed Saturday in a light breeze. Only four yachts started in the race for the challenge cup, which was won by the sloop Genevra.

RAILROAD ITEMS.

The Portsmouth, Great Falls & Conway railroad directors last week organized by the choice of S. C. Lawrence of Medford as president, Wallace Hackett of this city as clerk, and Edward Leslie of Boston as treasurer.

The outward trains on the York Harbor & Beach railroad, Saturday, were crowded with passengers. It is reported that the road will run nine trains daily during the season of summer travel.

W. T. Plaisted, the veteran conductor on the Boston & Maine, is now enjoying a two weeks' vacation at Rangely lakes. Mr. Plaisted is to run the vestibule train from Boston to Bangor this season. He has been in the service of the Boston & Maine for the past forty years, and has never had a passenger injured.

Summer travellers are now arriving quite numerously at Portsmouth and travelling out to the different summer resorts in this vicinity.

E. W. Ryan was on Saturday sworn in as special police officer without pay, for the south end base ball grounds and vicinity.

The decorators who have been at work on the inside of the hotel Wentworth at Newcastle for some weeks, left for Boston on Saturday morning, having finished the job.

The services at the Methodist church, Sunday morning, were in memory of Mrs. Carrie (McIntire) Frost, who died the previous week in Boston.

Rev. Alfred Gooding's sermon in the Unitarian church, Sunday, was an eloquent and thoughtful tribute to the lofty character and noble moral heroism of the late James Freeman Clarke. The men are few who at the close of their lives can have such words truthfully spoken of them.

The Innate club will go to Hampton on Tuesday evening of this week in barges, to partake of a supper gotten up by Landlord Whittier of the Union house in his best style.

The Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union will hold a meeting in their hall on Market street, Thursday evening, June 21st, commencing at 7:30 o'clock.

The 70th anniversary of the establishing of the Unitarian Sunday school will be celebrated in the church next Sunday afternoon, the exercises commencing at three o'clock, and consisting of a responsive service by the children, singing of appropriate hymns, and a historical discourse concerning the school by Rev. Dr. Peabody. The venerable ex-pastor will also preach in the forenoon of that day, Rev. Mr. Gooding conducting the rest of the service.

On and after the 1st of July, a new system of keeping the accounts will be adopted in the office of the general storekeeper at the navy yard, by order of Secretary Whitney. The system now in vogue, previously introduced by Sec. Whitney, is so bad in the line of red tape that the new one cannot possibly be any worse.

Under the heading of "Kittery Point" the Biddeford Standard says: "By the recent sale of the Blake property the last of Kittery's ocean front save a few narrow privileges has passed into the hands of the pleasure seeking stranger; in fact the desirable portions of our harbor shore is likewise in their possession, or devoted to their interests. Thus within a few years has the native Kitterian beset his path to the sea with placards of 'No Trespass,' and betaken himself to the shallow creeks for commercial purposes; how far they have been wise, let time make proof. True it is that already we are witnesses of that transformation which displaces the lusty shout of the busy skipper for the bad grammar and sickly smile of the omnipresent flunky."

Mr. C. A. Grant, of the Sea Cottage, York beach, had fifteen boarders at the end of last week. He expects to have his excursion buckboard, to be drawn by two or four horses and carry a dozen people, in readiness for service this week. Mr. Grant will run a free coach between his house and the Long Beach station of the York railroad this season, to accommodate the patrons of the house.

The little Baptist church at North Kennebunk was much cheered and encouraged by the addition of four new members on Sunday, the 10th inst. The services, conducted by Rev. G. B. Titus of Saco, were very interesting and inspiring. This, with previous accessions, makes a total of thirteen added to the church during the year, which is equal to the entire resident membership of the church one year ago.

The steamer Australia, which arrived at San Francisco last week, brought news that Bishop, the mind reader, who is at Honolulu, is a mental wreck, from the effects of cocaine and morphine.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly. Do not be induced to buy other preparations, but be sure to get the Peculiar Medicine,

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS.

$22 TO $900. The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture in these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.

Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogues free.

PIANOS. Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos, that they are superior to all GRAND & UPRIGHT pianos. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN PIANO STRINGER," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.

A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and tuners, sent, together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant.

SUCCESS Are you mortgaged, pay heavy rent, big salary, or running bank? Excellent

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

"IT WAS INHERITED."

The Fearful Effect of Heredity Upon the Lives of Men and Women—A Striking Case.

"The man or woman does not live who is free from hereditary influences." This remark was made by the celebrated Dr. Vanderville, of New York, to the Rev. Dr. Brooks, at a recent convention of scientists. "I agree with you, doctor," said the divine. "Pure blood," continued the doctor, "is the great cause of health; impaired blood the source of most diseases. It may even go back to the grand or great grand parents."

"I have in mind a prominent man," said the reverend gentleman, "General Alfred C. Moore, of No. 1 Pemberton Square, Boston. His inherited kidney troubles from both parents, one of whom died with it. He suffered terribly from pains in the back and head, and at times when walking the dizziness became so bad that he was compelled to lay hold of some convenient post for support. He was in a most desperate condition."

"And is he so still?" asked the doctor.

"No, he is in perfect health. Dr. McGregor, I believe of Maine, who had amputated an arm for the general, cured him."

"Do you know what medicine he used?"

"I understand it was Hunt's Remedy."

"Oh, Hunt's Remedy. I know it very well," said Dr. Vanderville. "I consider it the best remedy for kidney, liver, heart troubles, and female difficulties in the world. It is in no sense a patent medicine, but a standard remedy, which deserves to be used by all intelligent people. The fact is, no blood-taint can exist when the kidneys are in perfect order, and there is where Hunt's Remedy shows its marvelous superiority."

"I only wish," said Rev. Dr. Brooks, "that all people who inherit a tendency to disease could know of this remedy of which you speak so highly and use it. I am positive it would greatly lessen suffering and death."

A DISTRESSING COUGH.

How many, especially during the Fall and Winter months, are troubled with a Cough, sometimes dry and hacking, sometimes loose causing the sufferer to raise a large amount of offensive matter; this can soon be cured by using Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs.

Cured her Cough.

Mrs. JEREMIAH CLARK, Lowell, Mass., says: "Twelve years ago I first took a bottle of your Throat and Lung Specific. I had been troubled with a very bad Cough for months. A 50-cent bottle cured my Cough. Since then I have not been without it. I can heartily recommend it to any one who has a bad cough."

Saved his Life.

CHAS. A. WAITT, says: "No language can express the value I attach to your Specific. I believe it saved my life."

We would cite other testimonials did we think it necessary, but a trial bottle will convince you that it is all we represent. Give it a trial.

CITY OF PORTSMOUTH, MAYOR'S OFFICE, April 16th, 1888.

A Housewife's Plan for Dinner.

A notable little housewife whom I once knew, and who never asks what she shall have for dinner, once told me her plan. She said: "Somebody has to think it all out. I can't trust my servant. I won't bother my husband. I won't take the time to study it over every day. So I make out a list every two weeks of fourteen breakfasts and dinners ahead. I try to avoid too frequent repetitions, and it isn't very hard to do that. I don't make out a regular bill of fare, but just put down one or two of the principal dishes and the dessert.

"Then at the end of the two weeks I begin over again. I don't make just the same list over again, and I don't stick to my programme too closely. I do my own buying, so I know pretty well what is new in the markets, and if I want to change the dinner I do it. And after the first list is made out it is easy enough to write out the next one.

"By doing my own buying I serve three purposes: I keep posted on the markets, I get exercise and I save money. I never run a grocer's or a butcher's bill. If I have not enough money to buy what I want, I go without. I find it worries my husband less to have something missing from his dinner than it does to have bills to pay, for we are poor, you know."—David A. Curtis in New York Mail and Express.

Is Our Diet Too Strong?

The idea is beginning to gain vogue, not only among vegetarians by principle, but with others who have never considered the subject in the light that the vegetarians do, that our diet is altogether too strong in the matter of the more heating meats; so much is this the case that it is maintained that mild wines do really less harm to the general system than flesh that is loaded with red blood. This strong meat, such, for instance, as beef, the eating of which, it is said, frequently generates too hot blood, gives us our reckless activity, our intensity, and many of our new diseases. White meats, vegetables, oils and fruits, in long tried use among the ancients, are in this view a safer and wholesomer diet than that which we have so long considered the best to be had. Whether the facts and their inferences are correct or not, they deserve consideration.—The Argonaut.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. eon.wed,fri,ot1ja1

Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam for coughs and colds does, is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The large bottles are 50c. and $1. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption. tjc23

The Crab as a Rabbit Driver.

Along the coast of France, where the land line is formed by long stretches of sandbanks lying between the high cliff uplands, there used to be found innumerable rabbits, who made their burrows in the dry and above high water mark. They ran one hole into another, so that the labyrinth of underground passages frequently extended for several hundred feet, rendering it next to impossible to dislodge the inmates in the usual manner by slipping a ferret into one of the holes. For if this were done, the ferret would simply drive the rabbits from one corner of the network to another, where they would hide as soon as they had evaded him.

The continental poacher, ever prolific in devices, knowing that the instinct of the crab will lead him always to descend in search of water, elaborated a system of placing a bolt net at the mouth of every hole he could locate, no matter how many there might be. Then taking a dozen or so good sized crabs, he fastened about half an inch of composite wax candle to the center of each shell, fixing them firmly enough for his purpose by slightly melting the wax at the bottom, and then pressing it to the shell. These pieces of wax candles he obtained from the innkeepers and lodging house keepers in the adjacent coast town.

He then lighted the candles and turned one crab into each of the main runs. The crab just taken from a damp place immediately sought the lowest ground in the burrow, carrying his light along with him where light had never penetrated before. The rabbits, frightened almost to death, rushed madly through the runs to the mouths of the holes, sprang out into the bolt nets, and, hopelessly tangling themselves in the meshes, lay panting until the poacher came and put them out of their misery. I have known more than one hundred rabbits taken from a single burrow at one haul, and the practice proved so destructive to the rabbits that the French government took the matter in hand and subjected every offender to a heavy fine and imprisonment.—W. P. Pond in Youth's Companion.

A Salutation in Northern Africa.

A short distance ahead we overtook and passed a caravan headed the same way we were going, and my men had to go through the process of salutation, and while I begrudged the time it took I could not but feel that the Moors would confer a great boon upon enlightened America if they could only come over and introduce their form of salutation. A couple of Americans meet, grab each other's hands, and you wonder how much water they have contracted to pump in five minutes. An Englishman nears a friend and they pound each other on the shoulder, while you look on nervously, wondering who will draw first blood. Frenchmen meet and they fall to kissing each other, while you go off in a corner and feel sick. Italians fall into each other's arms and go into convulsions, while you are hunting for the doctor. The Portuguese hook their chins over each other's shoulders, as if they wanted to find which pocket held the handkerchief; while Spaniards hug each other, with tears streaming down their cheeks, leaving you in doubt as to who has just died; but the Arab, when he meets his friend, advances toward him, they join hands in firm pressure for just a moment, and then, without a grimace or movement of the lips, raise their own hand and touch it to their lips, saying afterward: "Welcome sight." The whole thing is done with dignity that is thoroughly manly, and yet with a hint of tenderness that is nothing less than beautiful.—Cor. Boston Transcript.

Manual Training in Toledo.

This intense interest in the new work had at first to be so modified as not to interfere with the regular prosecution of the intellectual or class room work proper. After some experimenting, the two lines of work were harmoniously adjusted to each other. Boys and girls pass from their algebra and history to their drawing, wood carving or clay modeling, and from these again to geometry and English literature, with a hearty zest for all. The girls in the domestic economy department con their Virgils or don their cooking suits, and prepare with ease and grace such savory and palatable food as would mollify the most radical opponent of industrial training. In short, there is such a harmonious blending of the useful and the practical with the higher intellectual culture, that the unprejudiced observer needs but to inspect the work to be convinced of the reasonableness and great utility of such training. The advantages of the manual department are open to none except pupils of the public schools. Those who take the manual work do the same amount of mental work in the class room studies as those who have no work in the industrial department.—Superintendent H. W. Compton in The Century.

A Ring and Its Setting.

Probably the most curious ring in New York is worn by the wife of a wealthy and well known lawyer. She has three handsome, manly sons, but only one daughter, who made her debut into society this season, and was much admired. This girl is the idol of her parents, and the ring worn by her mother is a testimony to their affection, though a very eccentric one. When the girl was 10 years of age the father presented to the mother at Christmas a ring in which were set two little semi-translucent white stones surrounded by diamonds, and for a long while resisted his wife's entreaties to tell her what sort of stones they were, she never having seen anything at all resembling them. Finally he confessed to her a little shamefacedly that when their small daughter had lost her pretty little milk teeth he had saved the two front ones and carried them about in his pocketbook for a long time until the idea occurred to him of utilizing them in this way. The wife laughed at him a good deal, but continued to wear the ring and still wears it, though very few persons know the story of its setting.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Taxing the "Little Stranger."

But of all the taxes ever imposed on a people the "birth tax" was the most odious. It lasted thirteen years, dating from 1695. Every person not in receipt of alms was required to pay two shillings for every "little stranger" that came into existence. The tax was a great burden to the lower orders; but the nobility and gentry were subjected to still heavier payments than their poorer neighbors. Thirty pounds had to be paid on the birth of a duke. This sum gradually diminished according to a certain fixed

Clinging to the Last.

The virus of rheumatism often remains in the system through life, when it does not cut the thread of existence suddenly, as it is always liable to do by attacking the heart. Ere the grip of this tenacious disease tightens, it should be lessened by that beneficent liberator from disease, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which will free the sufferer at the outset from subsequent pain and danger. No purer or more agreeable blood depurent exists, as multitudes of the rheumatic and neuralgic have ascertained by certified experience. It is through the medium of a regular action of the kidneys and bladder that an outlet is afforded for the escape of impurities which beget not only rheumatic, but gouty ailments, and dropsical effusions. To these organs the Bitters gives an impulse, never verging on the bounds of irritation, but sufficiently vigorous to cause them and the bowels to perform their functions with clock-like precision. Use it also for dyspepsia, biliousness, fever and ague and debility.

In the bicycle race at Berlin, Woodside was second and Temple third.

Vigor and Vitality

Are quickly given to every part of the body by Hood's Sarsaparilla. That tired feeling is entirely overcome. The blood is purified, enriched, and vitalized, and carries health instead of disease to every organ. The stomach is toned and strengthened, the appetite restored. The kidneys and liver are roused and invigorated. The brain is refreshed, the mind made clear and ready for work. Try it.

THE SOIHAK'S CATTLE.

Romantic Hungary! Home of the picturesque brigand and birthplace of half these extravagant stories that have audacity for their basis and all Europe for their narrators; the roaming ground for unnumbered Gypsies; the origin of handsome women and good wine.

I have just returned from the Pussta, this great territory of which Buda-Pesth is the commercial center. I went there seeking novelty, and incidentally to make a visit, and I return with admiration of the shrewd and brilliant resources of the quick witted and sharp people who make prey of the world outside their ownselves.

The visit I had in contemplation when I left Vienna was interfered with by an accident so remarkable that I believe it stands unique among the queer happenings of the world.

Three years ago I visited Hungary for the first time, and was entertained at my uncle's castle, an enormous structure of medieval build and impressive proportions, complete with everything to make life comfortable; and the addition of my three charming young lady cousins made life agreeable.

My uncle, Baron Paul von Rovac, is a whole souled relation with a desire to do the proper thing in the way of entertaining, and a hospitality that makes his salons the most popular in this rather wild country. He cultivates his property with the most studious and painstaking care, his crops are reputed to be the most prolific thereabout, his vaults are well warmed with governments and consols, while his wine cellar is tested to its fullest capacity with casks of the richest Hungarian clarets and the clearest Tokay.

The first day of my visit was marked by the arrival of another guest—one of the opposite sex, however—a vigorous, healthy fellow with a fierce mustache and a loud voice—a fellow who enjoyed the distinction of using two "vons" in his name—Von Glyenke and Von Boroth. A natural leader in everything that pertained to sports, he was the best fencer, the most daring rider, the luckiest card player, the heaviest drinker and the most entertaining "masher." He played well and sang well. Whether or not he knew of the 80,000 guldens each daughter would receive directly on the death of my uncle, I am unable to say; yet true it is that within one week of his coming he had made love to all three of the girls and engaged himself to Emma, the eldest.

The etiquette of Hungary does not permit too close an inquiry into the monetary affairs of another, yet my uncle quite naturally desired to assure himself of the future his daughter might expect and the possibility of the same easy life continuing that she was then accustomed to. So, with the delicacy and tact born of gentle surroundings and an elevated soul, my uncle got around the question and asked Carl where he lived, which, being omitted in the note of introduction that opened the castle gate to the gentleman, gave an excuse for the query.

"I live in Castle Boroth," Carl replied, "at Pustza Gerely, near Kassa. My halls are spacious, and my salons show the faces of twenty generations of nobles, my stables have accommodations for forty horses, and he who joins my hunts has sport unlimited and a wealth of excitement. My mounts are the best in the country thereabout, and nothing would give me greater pleasure than to welcome you to my board and satisfy you by the evidence of your own eyes that I can provide a worthy home for your lovely daughter,"

This fluent and flowery description went far toward satisfying my uncle, and he replied in that gracious and courtly manner distinctively his own:

"My dear Carl, I know what you say must be so, and I sincerely believe my child will be happy with you. Kassa is some distance from here, but, as I must journey that way shortly, I will take advantage of the trip and make a stop at your castle."

With much noise and godspeed and laughter Carl took his departure the day following this conversation, and turned his horses' heads toward the east and his own preserves. The following week my uncle was ready to follow the same road, while I, who had always been possessed of the liveliest desire to see more of Hungary, had arranged to accompany him.

Arriving at Kassa at dusk, we put up at the Hotel de l'Etoile du Nord, where we enjoyed a delicious supper and the society of a loquacious landlord, with whom my uncle labored long and earnestly to learn something concerning the Baron Carl. The garrulous old man told of the castle, but was totally ignorant of its occupants, nor could any information be had of others in the house. This created some anxiety in my good uncle's mind, and, when the landlord had withdrawn, he asked me in a startled and mysterious voice:

"Do you think Carl can be a Soihak?"

"And what is a Soihak?" I rejoined.

"They are sons of impoverished baronial families who have no means of support other than their wits, and carry on the high sounding and equally highly dishonorable career of the chevaliers de l'industrie. I hope Carl is none such." And my uncle for some moments was deep in thought.

The next morning we engaged a guide who knew the Castle Boroth well, and agreed to conduct us thither. After a ride of more than three hours we entered the grounds of a vast estate, and our guide, turning to us, said: "You are now on the property of the Baron Boroth."

My uncle gazed about him upon every side; he stood erect in the carriage, the better to take in a wide prospect, and after a silent and studious contemplation he resumed his seat, saying: "The land is dry, no cultivation, no vegetation, no care for anything, no crops. Even though he has a castle, Carl seems not to be a practical farmer."

Presently a turn in the road brought us in view of a building of such magnificent extent as quite to silence my uncle's complaining tone and turn his querulous plaints into enthusiastic utterances. And armed men in the feudal days, whose portcullis raised only to admit friends or to send out the legions that followed the barons. There was a moat, dry now, but formidable to an invader, watch towers, battlements, armed turrets and an enormous iron cage suspended from the wall, the only evidence of the awful punishment dealt to one who would betray the place to an enemy, and, whose skeleton long since had crumbled into dust and become a plaything of the wind as it swept through the iron bars of the great box.

Our vererzug (four-in-hand) rolled over the drawbridge, and as we drew up in the courtyard we were confronted by a tall halberdier, who, grim and speechless, stood, spear in hand, symbol of baronial protection. We asked the man whether the baron was at home, but he gave us to understand by signs that he was both deaf and dumb. Another attendant appeared almost instantly, and, informing us that his master was within, begged us to follow him to the reception room.

The door through which we entered was crowned with a gold crest, the bearing of the Von Boroths.

Carl greeted us with the warmest effusion, and everything and everybody in the castle was at our disposal. Bottles of the choicest Badacsonyer, Ermellek and Oedenburg were opened for us, and our elaborate luncheon was concluded with a quart of most delicious Tokay, dating from the days of Maria Theresa.

It was, indeed, a royal reception and a princely entertainment. We were favored and feted for the several hours of our stay; the baron showed the greatest deference to our every expression; we were escorted through the spacious halls and chambers of the castle, and to us were opened the vaults of the treasure house, where the family jewels and the family plate were securely guarded. And thus we exhausted the day until well into the afternoon, when, ordering our carriage despite the protests of Carl, who vainly urged my uncle to rest at the castle for the night, we drove back into Kassa.

My uncle was buoyant and cheery upon our return trip, satisfied that his prospective son-in-law was in every way desirable.

Three weeks following our visit to the Castle Boroth Carl and Emma were married, and I returned to my literary labors in Vienna.

* * * * * * *

The year was a busy one with me, and the days and weeks sped so rapidly into months that I was unconscious of the flight of time until the season for my annual outing came around, and, by a combination of circumstances entirely beyond my adjustment or control, I found myself again in Kassa with some of the most agreeable companions I ever traveled. Being so near my cousin it was natural that I should call and see her, so turning my horses in the direction of Von Boroth's ancestral seat, I retraversed the road my uncle and myself had learned a twelve months before.

There was no change, the landmarks were as I remembered them, the ground lacked cultivation, the same neglect appeared about everything, and when we caught a glimpse of the castle it bore the same aspect as before. We were received by the mute guard, whom I passed, and went directly to the door, where a servant intercepted me.

"Is the baron at home?" I asked.

"He is, madam," was the reply.

"I will see him."

"Impossible, madam."

"Impossible! And why impossible?"

"The baron has not come from his breakfast yet."

"What, at this hour!"

"Well, you see, madam, when people are just married they like to take their time, not be disturbed."

"Yes, but that can't affect the baron. He was married twelve months ago."

At this the attendant smiled, though by no means in a disrespectful manner. In a moment he controlled himself, and said:

"Not twelve months, madam. It is now but four days. Sunday they were wedded, now it is Wednesday."

"Possibly you have misunderstood me. It is Baron Boroth I wish to see," I somewhat petulantly exclaimed.

"My master, of course," the servant made answer.

"You must be crazy, then. Take this card to him. I guess he will see me."

I pushed past the man, and while he disappeared around a corner in the hall I entered the reception room.

I had just seated myself when the portiere separating the apartment from the next was thrown aside, and a gentleman of some 28 years stood before me.

"What can I do for you?" he asked.

"I want to see the baron."

"I am the baron."

"But I mean the Baron Boroth."

"That's me."

"Impossible. You are not the Baron Boroth who married my cousin."

"I dont know who you mean. What is your name?"

I handed him my card, which he perused at a glance, and, casting it upon the table, came toward me, both hands extended, and, in the heartiest manner, he called me Irma, my first name, addressed me as his cousin, and ushered me, with every expression of pleasure, into the dining hall, where at a table sat three ladies, one young and beautiful, the other two older and exceedingly dignified.

The baron introduced me to the young lady as his bride, and the elders were his mother-in-law and aunt. They pressed me to join their meal, and I enjoyed my breakfast greatly. But every time I referred to Baron Carl the conversation was adroitly turned toward another subject. Persisting, however, in forcing an answer to my queries, I was at last severely called to a realization of the inappropriateness of my query by the rather sharp and suggestive remark from the baron:

"I have told you there is no such person. I trust you will permit that to suffice and not force me to consider you irresponsible in your utterances. Demonstrations of lunacy are certainly not agreeable at one's meals."

The young man's uniform, courteous treatment and the ladies' kindly attentions made my visit of two days most enjoyable, and when I left it was to take with me the pleasantest memories of my stay in the castle.

AFFAIRS IN KITTERY.

KITTERY POINT, ME., June 18th.

It was quite hot yesterday, and has been quite hot to-day in the sun. Vegetable gardens are thriving finely. Mr. Hiland Mitchell has the finest row of peas we have seen this season. They are tall and full of blossoms.

The John Fernald place has been sold to Mr. Wasson, a marine artist from Medford. He will build on the knoll south of the old house. It is a charming site, and a beautiful view of the river, harbor and ocean will be secured. If the pilgrim fathers of Kittery Point could now view this village we think they would hardly recognize the Kittery of former days.

Mr. Stickney, owner of the cottage on Gerrish's island, is at the Pepperrell. If Mr. Stickney's object was to have something odd for a summer residence, he has it without doubt. It is the most positively unique place on the coast. One room, octagon shaped, with the quaintest windows facing south, took our fancy. It is the gem of the rooms. A rose garden, also octagon shaped, is laid out east of the house. The mantels are the most delightful ones imaginable, with odd little shelves for curiosities; we almost broke the command. "Thou shalt not covet," over them.

The Warner cottage is nearly completed. The lower story of stone gives the house a quaint appearance.

Mrs. Charles Riley died last week of typhoid pneumonia. Her sister Mrs. Manning Phillips, who cared for her during her sickness, is very ill with the same disease.

The first guests arrive at the Park Field to-day. Dr. Pennoyer intends to pass the summer there.

Capt. G. D. Amee has built a very pretty, light skiff, the Hellene, to be launched this week.

The illustrated lecture at the Free

Study of a Queer People.

The stories that are told of Cushing, who is now in New Mexico making a study of Zuni traditions, are quite romantic. I met last night a gentleman who has just returned from a visit to Cushing. He says: "You know when Cushing went down to New Mexico first he attempted to make a study of the Zunis, but found out that he could make no progress with them unless he himself turned an Indian. Cushing addressed himself to this task with his usual zeal, and after a short time the transmogrification was complete. He tells me that the Zunis have a hut in which they keep the scalps of their enemies, and so long as this hut has a certain number of scalps the Zunis say that the god of war is satisfied, and that he does not want war.

But unfortunately for the peace of the Zunis the hut, which was built on the banks of the river, was swept away by a sudden flood. The Zunis were desperate. There were no scalps, and the god of war demanded at least two to avert an outbreak. Cushing saw a chance to prevent this war. He telegraphed for two scalps, which he knew to be in Washington, and which arrived in due time. The Zunis were still in great agitation when the two scalps arrived. Cushing formally presented them to the chief priest, and the war was averted. When the chief priest and the other priests had recovered from their surprise they began to think that Cushing was a man who could accomplish any wonder. They looked upon him as a god, and, nothing being too good for him, they immediately admitted him into the priesthood, and he is now one of their head priests.

This securing of the scalps turned out more fortunate for Cushing than one would at first suppose. For it saved him from matrimony. So pleased were the Zunis with Cushing that they had determined to find for him a wife. A stout Zuni maiden was found for him, and Cushing was told to prepare for his marriage. Needless to say that Cushing did not relish this proposition, and he fought against the coming of the evil day. He would have surely been married had it not been for the opportune arrival of those scalps, and his being made a priest excluded him from marriage. Cushing has not as yet made public any of his researches, and it will probably be some time before he does. The money that has been given him for this important work has been subscribed by a very enthusiastic lady, who has set no limit upon his time. Cushing was lately on a visit to this city, and he said that he traced a relationship between the Chinese signs and the Zuni signs; and, in fact, he said that the only part of San Francisco which interested him was Chinatown, and he spent most of his time there.—San Francisco Post.

Success Lies in Specialism.

Let, therefore, the man who is bent upon entering the arena of mental combat think well what weapon he will choose before he arrives in the midst of the fray and it is too late to turn back. Having once chosen his arm, however, he should perfect himself to the best of his ability in its use, never relaxing until he has mastered every detail which may possibly conduce to his competency. Above all things, let him eschew that pernicious vacillation of the mind which is both detrimental to the intellectual faculties themselves and fraught with imminent danger of ultimate failure.

Though forty or fifty years ago a man might, at different times in his career, pursue with success various employments, such a course is much more difficult today, on account of the hold which modern specialism has gained in all phases of human industry. If, however, in addition to competency in his special line of work, a man succeed in acquiring that broad insight into human affairs which renders his judgment of value to his kind, such a man may be pretty certain that the world will recognize his capacity for leadership, and confer upon him those rewards which have ever been the emoluments of first class capacity in all ages of the world.—Dr. J. Leonard Corning.

What the "Coming War" Means.

Why is this "coming war" so craved? Because it may improve our trade abroad, fill the papers with exciting news, one-half at least of which will be contradicted next day, and wear to death a few more war correspondents in the arduous train to furnish it.

Undoubtedly these are among the reasons. This is an age of Christian civilization. At least we call it so. Yet the preparatory steps for beating swords into pruning hooks do not seem taken as yet. Perhaps it is because there are so few prunes to prune. And any one who should stand forth in this busy Christian world of ours and ask our excited war talkers, war destrers and war agitators if they were aware that war meant killing, murdering, burning, plundering, disease, hardship and agony for thousands of the poor simple creatures arrayed to confront and shoot each other for they know not what—after an experience more or less prolonged of dirt, vermin, starvation and worn out bodies—why, the unspoken sentiment regarding such a man from many of his fellow Christians would be: "Get thee to a nunnery, a Sunday school, a woman's social convention, or a milk and water peace convention, with all that sort of talk."—New York Star.

Elephants as Executioners.

Elephants were kept by the kings of Burmah as executioners. When criminals condemned to die for treason—often innocent persons who were wealthy and the monarch desired their treasures for himself—were brought out of prison to make a public spectacle for the populace, and so strike terror to the hearts of the king's enemies, they were executed by these elephants. Each one would catch hold of a condemned man by the neck with his trunk, lift him off the ground, give a sudden jerk like flicking a whip, then tread him to a jelly beneath his great feet. Sometimes the elephants knelt upon the criminals and kneaded them to pulp.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Scent Analogous to Sound.

Professor Leclerc, writing in Cosmos, maintains that odors are due, not to the emanations, as such, of so called odoriferous bodies, but to the vibratory movement among such emanations, due to processes of oxidation. Scent, on this theory, is analogous to sound.—Boston Budget.

Women in Prison.

The Boston Transcript notes that only a fraction over 14 per cent. of the prison population of Massachusetts are women, in spite of the sixty odd thousand "superfluous women" in the state.

A new vegetable fiber, called "gamootic," is imported from Celibes into Holland, and is made to take the place of moss and hair in upholstery.

Luck of an Unstable Man.

When hardly more than a boy he began as an apprentice with the leading carpenter and builder in a large city. Three months later he was found clerking in a store on a salary of $3 a week.

"Carpentering is too slow a way for a fellow to get rich," he said; "you have to fool away two or three good years of your life learning the business before you can make anything pay from the start. A fellow can make more in a year in business life than he can in five years as a builder."

Six months later he was found in an uninviting little room with a case or two of eggs and several tubs of butter, having gone into business for himself on borrowed money.

"Clerking don't pay," he said. "The sooner a fellow gets into business for himself the better, and I tell you there's a clear profit of one-half on every dollar you take in in this butter and egg business. It pays big."

Evidently he didn't take in many dollars, for he was soon after found in a business college learning stenography and type writing.

"There's big money in it," he said, enthusiastically, "and there was too much competition in the butter and egg business. I know of a court stenographer who is making two hundred a month right along; and it don't take much time to learn the business."

But he did not learn the whole business. He suddenly discovered that stenography was "overdone," and he concluded to study law.

"Lawyers get rich sooner than any other class of men. Think of them getting a fee of $10,000 for a single case. Yes, sir! And the law's so simplified now that a fellow can pick up all he needs of it to practice in less than no time."

Naturally, he gave up the study of law in a short time. Then he spent three months working on a patent shoe buttoner that amounted to nothing, although he said it was worth a million dollars.

He next went west, but instability and lack of purpose are worth no more there than in the east, and he came back pronouncing the west the greatest humbug of the age.

He tried canvassing, reporting, type writing and bookkeeping, but gave up each occupation for something that promised immediate and great wealth.

He had married in the meantime, and he and his wife successively boarded, kept house, took their meals out and rented a lodging house. With a great fortune always in sight, he is always poor. Unmindful of the fixed rules of success in life, he spends his days in seeking the short cut to wealth that such men never find.—Youth's Companion.

Losses of the Next War.

Gatling has invented a gun that will kill 500 soldiers a minute, but in the next war in which these guns are used the losses, after a five hours' engagement, will be 75 killed and 160 wounded on one side, and 3,000 killed and 4,500 wounded on the other. These figures will be reversed when we read a report of the battle in the papers on the other side.—Norristown Herald.

There was a considerable number of teams in town on Saturday, and some wood and a quite large amount of hay appeared on the Parade during the day, and found ready sale. Hay of good quality went at about $12 a ton, the farmers being willing to sell at a low price in order to get barn-room for the large crop anticipated this year.

The York County Congregational Conference, at Wells last week, was well attended, and officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Moderator, Rev. David B. Sewell of York; scribe, Rev. J. S. Richards of Alfred; delegates to the state conference, Deacon Samuel L. Boynton and J. R. Libby of Biddeford, and Samuel M. Caine of Alfred. Rev. G. A. Lockwood of Kennebunk on Thursday evening preached the closing sermon, which was followed by the sacrament.

Asa McIntire, of Beach Ridge, York, came in on Monday with a load of hay, which he sold at $17 per ton. The hay was of very superior quality, and was delivered at Little Harbor. Hay sold on the Parade on Saturday went at a much lower figure.

Don't Wait

Until your hair becomes dry, thin, and gray before giving the attention needed to preserve its beauty and vitality. Keep on your toilet-table a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor—the only dressing you require for the hair—and use a little, daily, to preserve the natural color and prevent baldness.

Thomas Munday, Sharon Grove, Ky., writes: "Several months ago my hair commenced falling out, and in a few weeks my head was almost bald. Tried many remedies, but they did no good. I finally bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and, after using only a part of the contents, my head was covered with a heavy growth of hair. I recommend your preparation as the best hair-restorer in the world."

"My hair was faded and dry," writes Mabel C. Hardy, of Delavan, Ill.; "but after using a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor it became black and glossy."

— OF —

The Atkinson House Furnishing Co.

— FROM THE —

HEADQUARTERS AT PORTLAND, MAINE,

To those who are contemplating the purchase of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

GREETING:

On and after June 1st we shall STOP PREPAYING the FREIGHT on GOODS SOLD by us, and we respectfully request that those who have dealt with us, and who have been BENEFITED by the PAYMENT OF THIS FREIGHT which in itself in the past three years has amounted to some

30,000 DOLLARS,

Will order what GOODS they require for this SPRING, from us this month, and please order as early as possible. And to those who intend buying

Silver-ware, Window Shades, Drapery, Dinner Sets, Toilet Sets, Stoves and Ranges, Feathers, Spreads, Blankers, Chamber Sets, Parlor Suits, Carpets, Lounges, Easy Chairs, Mattresses, Springs, Feather Pillows,

And anything else in HOUSE FURNISHING, can be BENEFITED to the extent of the freight to their depot, by buying from us this month. We have always PREPAID THIS FREIGHT FROM OUR OWN PROFITS, as we have invariably made the price on the

Furniture, Carpets,

Etc., lower than could be bought for elsewhere. There has always been a great advantage derived by our prepayment of the freight because we in every instance GUARANTEE the SAFE DELIVERY of the goods, and if there has ever been a fight to make with the railroad, we have done it, or in other words if you have received a

CHAMBER SET, PARLOR SUIT, Chair, or Range,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

That was damaged by the railroad, we have replaced it with another piece, and taken our chances to get the breakage from the road. There are items worthy of our close consideration, and especially at this time of year, be wise and order during this month,

And Save Yourself the Freight from Portland to your Depot, no matter where it is located in the State of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

We believe we are the only HOUSE FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT IN NEW ENGLAND WHO HAVE ADHERED STRICTLY TO THIS PLAN OF PREPAYING THE FREIGHT ON EVERYTHING SHIPPED BY US. We mean by this that while some other houses have shipped the goods, and allowed you to pay freight and afterwards send them a bill and then dicker on it for some time, We have invariably paid out the cash before the article left our freight sheds at Portland. And now notwithstanding the fact that we expect to lose a great deal of business by this this year there seems to be no other way to convince some people of the difference between OUR PAYING THE FREIGHT before the articles leave here, AND OUR CUSTOMERS PAYING THE FREIGHT after the articles get to the depot, and then having to write backwards and forwards over the matter. We wish to deal with perfect fairness and frankness in this matter, consequently we give you another month to make your selection, and to fill orders that are already placed. Now if you want a

KITCHEN RANGE, or a CHAMBER SET, or PARLOR SUIT, or CARPETS, WINDOW SHADES, DRAPERY CURTAINS,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

Kindly come and see us at once, or if you can not come, please write us for Catalogues and Descriptions of these Goods, and we will do our very best to please you in every one. Remember we carry COMPLETE HOUSE FURNISHINGS. There is scarcely a thing that you require for your homes that we do not keep, and we sell the same and shall continue to sell the same for cash, or a quarter cash, and the balance by the week or month. This notice applies TO ALL OUR STORES, and we have written to each of our MANAGERS to this effect, consequently there will be no more freight prepaid from our Bangor Store, Rockland Store, Auburn Store, Bar Harbor Store, Biddeford Store, nor from the Headquarters at Portland, after the 31st day of May, 1888.

Kindly get your orders in before June 1st, if you wish to save this freight.

Respectfully, the Public's Ob't Servants,

THE ATKINSON HOUSE FURNISHING CO.,

BASE BALL.

The Portsmouth club did not play the Salems on the grounds of the latter, Monday, as had been arranged, the Salems having games with the Manchesters and New Yorks that day.

The Nashua club will play the Portsmouths on the South street grounds this afternoon; game called at three o'clock.

The Boston Herald says: "The Portsmouth club is doing great work. The whitewash of the hard-hitting Salems, and the narrow margin of defeat at the hands of the Lynns, show the club to be the strongest in the country, considering the salaries paid. Manager Leonard is to be congratulated."

POLICE COURT---BATCHELDER J.

MONDAY, June 18th.

Thomas Sullivan, charged with malicious mischief (breaking a lock on door of house of Josiah H. Morrison,) was fined $3, costs $6.90, and sent to the county farm in default of payment.

Thomas Marshall and Richard Brennan, for drunkenness, were each assessed $9.90, fine and costs, and both will work it out at Brentwood.

Annie Gunnison, charged with stealing an axe from John Russell, was discharged, the evidence against her being so flimsy as to amount to nothing.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

The Board of Mayor and Aldermen will continue the hearing in the horse railroad matter this morning at ten o'clock, at the court house.

MARITIME NOTES

Capt. Frank Bird has chartered the steamer City of Portsmouth, formerly the "line" of the Portsmouth & York Beach Steamboat Co., and will run her this summer as an excursion boat in Boston bay.

A schooner with the soldiers' monument on board sailed from Bridgeport, Conn., for this port, on Friday night, the 15th inst.

The schooner yacht Wm. H. Russell, Charles S. Drowne master, went to Lunging island, Shoals, on the 18th inst., taking out Elvin Newton's fishing gang and gear, to commence the summer's work as soon as the fish are ready. Mr. John S. Hunt also went out in her to Smuttynose, to remodel Mr. Lemuel B. Caswell's store on that island.

The steam yacht Josie M., owned by Mr. Marquand of Newburyport and commanded by Capt. Howard, arrived at this port on Monday from the Merrimac with an excursion party of about thirty persons. They had stopped for an hour or two's fishing on the way, and after a brief stay here left for a run around to York beach, and thence back to Newburyport.

The schooner Maggie S. Hart, from Philadelphia with 1180 tons of coal, the Seth W. Smith, from Perth Amboy with 347 tons, and the Quddy, from Perth Amboy with 267 tons, were among the arrivals at this port on the 17th inst., all to J. Albert Walker.

The steamer Oceanic went to the Shoals on Monday morning with a detachment of female help for the hotels, and a number of boarders. She proceeds this (Tuesday) morning to Boston to bring to the Appledore an invalid lady who has been accustomed to pass her summers in quiet there, and cannot sustain the jostle of railroad travel.

The ship Zouave, of Boston, before reported lost on the passage from Mobile to London, was hove down in a hurricane May 22d, and afterward righted, they were rescued with great difficulty by a boat from the British ship Larnica, the sea being very heavy at the time.

Revenue cutter Dexter reports that her topmast was shattered by a thunderbolt in New Bedford harbor on the night of June 15th.

A CARD.

Having disposed of a large portion of my damaged stock from the fire at my old store, and having received a full line of New Goods (gentlemen's, ladies' and children's) from the best manufacturers, I am now prepared to show purchasers the best line of boots and shoes ever offered in this market, at very low prices.

J. C. CARR.

RAILROAD ITEMS.

The conductors and brakemen of the Boston & Maine railroad are to have new uniforms patterned after the suits worn by the employes of the Pennsylvania railroad. The contract will amount to $8000.

The train leaving Boston for this city at 12:30 P. M., on Monday was delayed in starting for an hour or more, owing to an accident to a freight train at the crossing of the Fittsburg railroad, four or five cars being piled up and smashed.

PERSONAL.

Col. John H. Jackson of Boston arrived in this city on Saturday, and remained till Monday afternoon.

Mr. William Sullivan left this city on Saturday morning for his post of employment during the summer at the Union house, Williamstown, Mass. This house is situated among the lofty hills of Berkshire county, and in proximity to the Connecticut river, which forms the boundary line between Connecticut and Massachusetts.

Hon. Marcellus Eldredge and family will leave for Chatham, Mass., on the 6th of July, to pass the summer.

Mr. Charles W. Drowne and Mr. Benjamin Russell went to Boston on Monday to attend the celebration of "Bunker Hill day," as has been the custom of both gentlemen for many years past.

William L. Conlon on Monday resigned as clerk with the Portsmouth Trust & Guarantee Co., to accept a simular position in the New Hampshire National bank. Wm. C. Johnson takes Mr. Conlon's late position with the Trust & Guarantee Co.

Mr. B. F. Mugridge, who recently purchased the house on State street formerly occupied by the late Dr. J. F. Hall, commenced moving his furniture into it on Monday.

Mrs. Arthur W. Walker. of Middle street, who has been passing several weeks at her former home in Elyria, Ohio, has returned to this city.

Deaconess Ransford, for some time past matron of the Cottage Hospital, left on Monday for Manchester, Mass., to take charge of the Convalescents' Home there. Miss Brown, a graduate of the Massachusetts General Hospital, has assumed the duties of matron of the Cottage Hospital.

Mr. A. Brackett Trefethen, who was roughly treated on Deer street a couple of weeks ago in consequence of a depression in the street throwing him out of his wagon, has so far recovered as to be able to attend to business.

Judson P. Marvin and Thomas O. Marvin graduate from Tuft's Divinity school this week.

Mr. Smith R. Treadwell, wife and family, of Brooklyn, N. Y., arrived in Portsmouth on Monday morning, the 18th inst., on a visit to Mr. Treadwell's parents.

Mr. Woodbury H. Wingate, wife and children, of State street, started on Monday morning for New Bedford, Mass., where Mr. Wingate takes charge of a hotel for the summer. The boarding house in this city will be managed by Mr. Wingate's mother till their return.

MATRIMONIAL.

The marriage of Miss Helen W. Batchelder, daughter of Mr. John Batchelder of Hampton Falls, to Mr. Charles J. Polland, of Dover, occurred on Wednesday afternoon of last week at the residence of the bride's parents, in the presence of a select number of guests. The ceremony was performed by Prof. Joseph Kimball of Andover, Mass. The floral display was profuse and beautiful, and the gifts numerous and elegant, including a richly engraved silver service from friends in New York. An elegant entertainment was served, after which the wedded pair started south on their bridal trip, and on their return will reside in Dover, where Mr. Polland is a foreman in connection with the machine works there.

The marriage of Mr. S. Arnold Grant, postmaster at Limerick, Me., and Miss Lizzie E. Moulton of that town, has been announced. The groom is well and favorably known at York and in this vicinity, and was associated with his father, Mr. Stephen E. Grant, in the management of the Cape Neddick house at the time it was burned some years ago.

Mr. Editor: I don't want to dictate to any one, but I would like to suggest that if any fireworks are to be displayed in this city on the 4th of July that no bot-pond. This would give a range of vision from Eldredge's brewery all along the opposite side of the pond to the north mill bridge, with nothing to obstruct the sight.

Most of Ald. Urch's maples which were bought and set out last fall on different streets, have either not leaved out at all or are now shrivelling up from the hot weather. Farmers say they must have grown in swamps or in the shade of larger trees, and consequently wilt when they get more sun or less rain than they were originally accustomed to. Accordingly, Elm street, now known by the euphonious appellation of Maplewood avenue, would have best retained its old name. The parties who sold the trees to the city declared them to be sturdy and sure to live.

The mercury indicated ninety degrees above zero in the shade at the navy yard at noon on Monday. The almanac announces that on "Tuesday, June 20th, summer begins," but Monday gave it a good start.

Jackson & Co's express teams are wearing handsome new harnesses, heavy and apparently very strong.

A night-blooming cactus of a variety we never saw before, displaying a handsome and very fragrant flower about five inches across, attracted much attention in the window of Mr. H. C. Locke's store on Market street, Monday evening.

Rev. Edward Robie, D. D., of Greenland, is to deliver an address to the graduating class of the high school of that town in the Congregational church on the afternoon of Sunday, June 24th, to which the parents and friends of the pupils are invited. The graduating exercises of the school will take place on Wednesday evening, June 27th; the following are the names of the graduates: Abbie Brackett, Josie Dodge, Grace Furber, Ella Haines, Anna Lynch, Marcia W. Locke, Lilian Odell, Mamie Simpson and Ruth Simpson. The salutatory is to be delivered by Miss Grace Furber, and the valedictory by Miss Ruth Simpson. The Music hall orchestra of this city will furnish music for the occasion.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly. Do not be induced to buy other preparations, but be sure to get the Peculiar Medicine,

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture of these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.

$22 TO $900.

Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogues free.

PIANOS Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos, that they are superior to all GRAND & UPRIGHT pianos. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN PIANO STRINGER," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.

A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and tuners, sent, together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant.

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of its customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do claim that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

☞ Price 25 cents per bottle.

MASTEN & WELLS,

"IT WAS INHERITED."

The Fearful Effect of Heredity Upon the Lives of Men and Women—A Striking Case.

"The man or woman does not live who is free from hereditary influences." This remark was made by the celebrated Dr. Vanderville, of New York, to the Rev. Dr. Brooks, at a recent convention of scientists.

"I agree with you, doctor," said the divine.

"Pure blood," continued the doctor, "is the great cause of health; impaired blood the source of most diseases. It may even go back to the grand or great grand parents."

"I have in mind a prominent man," said the reverend gentleman, "General Alfred C. Monroe, of No. 1 Pemberton Square, Boston. He inherited kidney troubles from both parents, one of whom died with it. He suffered terribly from pains in the back and head, and at times when walking the dizziness became so bad that he was compelled to lay hold of some convenient post for support. He was in a most desperate condition."

"And is he so still?" asked the doctor.

"No, he is in perfect health. Dr. McGregor, I believe of Maine, who had amputated an arm for the general, cured him."

"Do you know what medicine he used?"

"I understand it was Hunt's Remedy."

"Oh, Hunt's Remedy. I know it very well," said Dr. Vanderville. "I consider it the best remedy for kidney, liver, heart troubles, and female difficulties in the world. It is in no sense a patent medicine, but a standard remedy, which deserves to be used by all intelligent people. The fact is, no blood-taint can exist when the kidneys are in perfect order, and there is where Hunt's Remedy shows its marvelous superiority."

"I only reply," said Rev. Dr. Brooks, "that all people who inherit a tendency to disease could know of this remedy of which you speak so highly and use it. I am positive it would greatly lessen suffering and death."

A DISTRESSING COUGH.

How many, especially during the Fall and Winter months, are troubled with a Cough, sometimes dry and hacking, sometimes loose causing the sufferer to raise a large amount of offensive matter; this can soon be cured by using Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs.

Cured her Cough.

Mrs. JEREMIAH CLARK, Lowell, Mass., says: "Twelve years ago I first took a bottle of your Throat and Lung Specific. I had been troubled with a very bad Cough for months. A 50-cent bottle cured my Cough. Since then I have not been without it. I can heartily recommend it to any one who has a bad cough."

Saved his Life.

CHAS. A. WAITT, says: "No language can express the value I attach to your Specific. I believe it saved my life."

We would cite other testimonials did we think it necessary, but a trial bottle will convince you that it is all we represent. Give it a trial.

from my second Baron Boroth, whom I think I neglected to say was named George. There is a paper published in Hungary called the "Budapesti Koezloeny." It is the organ of the aristocracy, in its columns the movements of the best people are noted, and all sales of real estate are noticed therein. I was a constant reader of this paper, not on account of any special interest in the aristocracy, but in the hope that I might some day discover a paragraph clearing up the mystery of the Boroth family.

But I searched in vain!

Finally I was enabled to take a short vacation a month ago, and my curiosity was so excited by the strange reception I had met twice at Castle Boroth that I determined to visit the place once more. From that visit I have just returned.

When I reached the gates of the building I was conscious of some mild excitement going on within, and the action of the servants indicated the absence of a master. Looking through into an open court I discovered my halberdier, he whom I had considered deaf and dumb, to be talking earnestly with a fellow servant, and exercising his tongue as though he were a woman rather than a mute.

So I approached him with some show of feeling, and I said:

"You recovered your missing senses, I find?"

The man stared in undisguised confusion for a moment, as if considering what excuse 'twere best to make. Then he said:

"I am entirely at your service, madam; how can I serve you?"

I realized that I had the fellow in my power, and I answered sharply:

"By truthfully replying to all my questions."

Then, with the severest frown at my command, I pursued my questioning:

"First of all, then, where is your master?"

"What master?"

"Baron George von Boroth."

"I have no master."

"How so, what do you mean? Ain't the baron here?"

"No, madam."

"Well, where are they? What does it mean? I insist upon knowing."

"To tell the truth, madam, we will have a new master in a short time."

"How so?"

"The Boroths, madam, you probably do not know, are Solhaks. This castle is their only possession and belongs to the family, not to any individual member, but to them all collectively. Every member uses it to deceive his father-in-law and as a pleasant spot to spend his honeymoon. Having dazzled their victims and the various fathers, and the marriage being performed, the bride is shortly made acquainted with the peculiarities of this mode of living, and at the end of six months the couple take their departure, turning the castle and its contents over to a successor, another cousin or brother of this extensive family, who has caught the susceptible heart of an heiress. I have have had nine new masters during the past ten years."

I returned to Vienna a wiser woman. Here was a scheme worthy a place in history, and so worthy both from its originality and its success, a scheme that was novel to me, and, I trust, will be entertaining to you.—La Baronne in New York Star.

Mexico's Excellent Schools.

"What is the present status of the educational interests of Mexico?" was asked of Mr. Talbott, of The Railway Age.

"In answering this question I am compelled to admit that herein I experienced the most agreeable surprise of the many by which my long journey was marked. In most of the states education is compulsory, the public schools in these constituting one of their chief glories: colleges and seminaries supported wholly or in part by the state governments exist in all the principal cities and are in a flourishing condition; poor boys are instructed in the various trades, such as carpentry, cabinet making, tailoring, shoemaking, printing, spinning, saddlery, etc., along with their spelling, reading, writing and mathematics; poor girls are taught to sew, to knit, to cook, to embroider and, in short, to creditably discharge all the duties of a housewife at the same time that music and the common branches of our own American education are being taught them; and all at the public expense.

"If any one supposes that education is a neglected question in our sister republic, let him visit its capital or either of the cities of Chihuahua, Aguascalientes, Queretaro, Guanajuato, Guadalajara, Puebla, Morelia, Orizaba, Vera Cruz, Jalapa or Cuarnavaca on the occasion of any public examination of students. He will experience great surprise and equal delight. He will find the children of Spaniards, of mixed races and of pure Indians, sitting side by side and nobly struggling for the same prizes. And the same is true of the towns, villages and great farms."—Chicago Journal Interview.

Dress and Social Etiquette.

Those clubs and sociables which agree to meet without "dressing up" do not generally last long. When people come together for any rational object they ought to "dress up." It is possible to overdress, and to attach an unreasonable importance to externals; but, surely, this is an extreme less to be deplored than a boorish indifference to the impression we make on others. It is not well to put on clothes which are costly beyond our means, or splendid beyond the occasion; but it is highly proper to express our respect for the company we enter by making ourselves as pleasing to the eye as we reasonably can.

The great enemy of social enjoyment in this age is the spirit of show-off. In order to be agreeable, after the first five minutes, we must possess a certain amount of good natured interest in others. We must, in some way, suppress the troublesome and impertinent Ego within us, and put forth benevolent efforts to gratify the Ego of our companion.—Youth's Companion.

A New Forage Plant.

A new forage plant, called the asperset, from Germany, which is said to thrive on the dry, sandy locations, where but little rain falls, and which is highly relished by all classes of stock, is expected to be introduced into this country.—Chicago Times.

Steel Direct from the Ore.

The Russian iron masters are reported to have invented a method of producing iron and steel direct from the ore. The whole secret of the process is the construction of the furnace, which is simple and inexpensive. Iron ore, after being submitted to the smelting process, is taken direct to the rolling mill and turned into sheet iron. Three furnaces in that country are now in operation. It seems certain that a perfect revolution is to be wrought in the manufacture of Importance of a Good Handwriting.

Every lady, and indeed every man, should acquire a good handwriting. It used to be much more indispensable than now. Our ancestors (look at John Hancock's signature; some one said it was written so that it could be read across the Atlantic) wrote better than we. A cramped, poor, slovenly, uneducated, uninformed handwriting is sure to produce a bad impression on him who receives the letter. There is a beautiful, long, sweeping, legible hand, which we call the English hand. This hand ornaments a note, so that we keep specimens of it long after the note has done its service. A neat, flowing, graceful hand, a sheet free from blots and erasures—this letter is always agreeable to the eye.—M. E. W. Sherwood.

A Hearty Laugh.

There is nothing that will help digestion like a hearty laugh. But how can a billious man laugh? What warmth is there in a dyspeptic's smile? And how can a man be mirthful when his liver is out of order? We recommend all such persons to use Ingalls' Mandrake Compound. It acts directly on the liver and stomach, stimulating the one and strengthening the other. A single bottle will convince one of its efficacy.

It has been thought necessary in Chicago to display the American flag in the public schools in the "foreign quarter" of the city—which is about three-quarters of it—in order that the pupils may discoverer what the Stars and Stripes are like. This is in truth an odd country with an odd people.

Everybody Likes

To be called handsome, especially the young ladies. But that is simply impossible as long as their faces are covered with pimples, blotches and sores. ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. won.wed.frl.0tjal

Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam for coughs and colds does, is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The large bottles are 50c. and $1. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption. tje23

Clinging to the Last.

The virus of rheumatism often remains in the system through life, when it does not cut the thread of existence suddenly, as it is always liable to do by attacking the heart. Ere the grip of this tenacious disease tightens, it should be loosened by that beneficent liberator from disease, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which will free the sufferer at the outset from subsequent pain and danger. No purer or more agreeable blood depurent exists, as multitudes of the rheumatic and neuralgic have ascertained by certified experience. It is through the medium of a regular action of the kidneys and bladder that an outlet is afforded for the escape of impurities which beget not only rheumatic, but gouty ailments, and dropsical effusions. To these organs the Bitters gives an impulse, never verging on the bounds of irritation, but sufficiently vigorous to cause them and the bowels to perform their functions with clock-like precision. Use it also for dyspepsia, biliousness, fever and ague and debility.

The Vermont prohibitionitts, at their state convention, endorsed woman suffrage.

Peculiar

In the combination, proportion, and preparation of its ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures where other preparations entirely fail. Peculiar in its good name at home, which is a "tower of strength abroad," peculiar in the phenomenal sales it has attained, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most successful medicine for purifying the blood, giving strength, and creating an appetite.

Beneath melodious trees,
How wrens with redbreasts over talk
What tuneful words they please!

THE PORTRAIT.

If all the visitors who were present on the opening night of the great art exhibition had been as constant in their after attendance as was Mr. Horace Temple, the managers would have made money out of it.

The fact was, Mr. Temple had strolled in rather listlessly that first night, but before he had traversed many yards in his tour of inspection his attention had been caught by a picture which had so fascinated him that he found it almost impossible to get his own consent to move on and make way for others, and in a very short time he was back again, gazing with rapt absorption. The picture represented an Italian garden, where, beneath a dense shade of palms and flexes, a hammock was swung, in which a lovely young girl, in a limp, white gown, was lying at ease, her right hand dawdling with a great fan, and her left thrown up behind her head, the loose sleeve falling back and revealing a beautiful, rounded arm. One foot was hid in the meshes of the hammock, and the other, from which the tiny slipper had slipped off at the heel, hung over the side in a posture of absolute ease and inertia. The white robe, made in classic design and decorated with a Greek border, hung over the hammock side and trailed along the dense, green grass. The details of the picture were exquisitely portrayed, but its matchless charm was in the beauty of the young girl's face, which had so marked an individuality that Temple convinced himself at once that it was no creation of an artist's fancy, but a faithful likeness of some living human being. As day after day passed by and the picture grew into his consciousness more and more, he got to know every detail of feature, form and dress, even to the three little spots on the left arm near the elbow, which he at first took to be specks on the canvas, but afterward found were three cleverly painted little moles which must have been on the arm of the model.

One evening when he had stood a longer time than usual before the object of his adoration, lost in thought concerning the original of this lovely portraiture, and wondering where the artist, whose name was given as Carlo Guizi, had seen and painted her, he was aroused by the silvery strokes of a magnificent clock which stood near, which reminded him that he must tear himself away from present enjoyment, and go home and answer a letter. The letter was in the form of an invitation, and this was a reply to it:

"DEAR AUNT SARAH—No one certainly has a kinder or more considerate female relative than I am blessed with, and your delightful letter is one more proof of this truth. My gratitude, however, strong as it is, does not enable me to do the impossible, and I cannot come down, according to orders, and fall in love with your charming friend, for the reason that I am in love already, and the object of these pre-engaged affections of mine defies the thermometer and remains in the city.

"On the whole, I hope this will prove not altogether unsatisfactory to you, as I understand your object concerning me to be, not so much that I shall be—in the abstract—enshared, and that I conscientiously assure you that I am.

"I am not too fast bound, however, to admit of my coming down for a cursory glance at you, so you may expect me to stay over next Sunday.

"Yours affectionately, H. T."

When Mrs. Leaton received this letter she happened to be seated near an open window in conversation with her most intimate confidential friend, to whom she proceeded to read the letter aloud, interrupting herself with various complaints of the provokingness of her favorite nephew, who, in spite of all her affectionate indulgence of his whims and foibles, was constantly serving her in this kind of style.

As she finished reading and laid the letter down, there was a faint rustling under the window, unregarded by the two ladies, and a young girl, who had been sitting very still sketching the pretty view of wood and river visible from this point, collected her implements together and quickly glided away.

Mr. Temple arrived at his aunt's on Sunday morning too late for the regular breakfast, and when he emerged from the dining room after his tete-a-tete meal with the hostess, he was immediately hurried off to church by that enterprising lady, who had kept her carriage waiting that she might enjoy his companionship.

"All the rest have gone," she said, "and we shall be a little late. Gertrude Sevelion walked with Tom Jerome." This was the only allusion she deigned to make to the young lady who had formed the whole subject of her letter.

Mr. Temple had been some time in church before he caught sight of the familiar figure of Mr. Tom Jerome, and when, with a feeling of lazy interest, he leaned forward a little so that he might get a glimpse of the lady standing next to Mr. Jerome and singing out of the same book with him, the delicate, clean cut profile startled him with a sense of familiarity. His heart gave a bound as he connected it with the face in the picture and saw the resemblance. This girl wore a little close bonnet and a trim dress, which incased her charming figure in neat compactness—but face and figure were the same.

When the service was ended he leaned forward and whispered to his aunt:

"Make Tom Jerome go home with you and let me walk home with Miss Sevelion."

This was a coming to terms that Miss Leston highly appreciated, though her nephew exhibited no underbred eagerness. The first excitement of his discovery had worn off, and he had resolved upon his course.

It was a wonderful thing to find himself, the next moment, actually being presented in formal style to the houri of the hammock. Just how Aunt Sarah managed it he did not know, but before long Tom Jerome had gone off in the carriage, and the houri and himself were strolling along together on a shady little woodland path, and he was saying:

"Have you ever been in Italy, Miss Sevelion?"

"Oh, yes; mamma and I spent almost a year there," was the quick response.

"Have you ever had your portrait painted?" was the next abrupt question.

"Never," said Miss Sevelion, coldly, as if she observed and disapproved the bad taste of this informal catechism.

"Nor ever posed for an artist?"

"Never," in a tone grown positively icy.

Mr. Temple looked at her with a gaze of uncontrollable surprise.

"Most extraordinary!" he said, half under his breath. His exclamation was not so low, however, but that Miss Sevelion heard it, and it did not serve to modify her expression. She walked along at his side as stately as a white pigeon, her head alert and her manner distant and cool.

"You'd have no motive in misleading me, I suppose," Temple went on, after a momentary pause, "and I can't help believing you are playing a trick on me."

"Playing a trick on you, Mr. Temple?" said Gertrude, indignantly, "how could such an extraordinary notion ever enter into my head, or yours, either?"

Temple saw he had given offense, and when he was forced to recognize the possibility that he might be mistaken in his surmise, the fact was not hard to account for. It was very hard indeed, however, to believe in that possibility, and it was only by dismissing the subject from his mind as far as possible that he could carry on the perfectly conventional conversation that he knew to be the only one which his slight acquaintance with his companion warranted.

He made a great effort to be entertaining, and by the time they reached the house he was able to feel that he had done something toward obliterating the disgraceful impression of his first style of address.

When the early Sunday dinner time arrived, and Miss Sevelion appeared without her bonnet, having changed her church dress for a more relaxed style of garment, the likeness to the picture was stronger than ever. It was not likeness, it was positive identity; and when, during the afternoon, Horace found himself near Mrs. Savelion, in spite of all good resolutions he had made, in defiance of every instinct of good taste, his intense interest in this matter led him on until he had contrived to turn the conversation on Italy, and he then asked Mrs. Sevellon if none of the Italian artists had never prevailed on her daughter to allow herself to be painted.

Mrs. Sevellon had just responded in the negative, and was going on to say something more, when he became aware that her daughter was standing near them in the recess of the window, and that she heard his question. And this was not all! He saw by the impetuous flush that came to her face, and the look with which she glanced directly at him for an instant, and then away, that she resented as well as heard.

One evening Mrs. Leaton's guests got up some tableaux for the amusement of the company, and Mr. Temple, who had declined to act, found himself seated on the front seat beside his aunt, a very listless spectator, except when Miss Sevellon figured in the scenes, which was very often, as she was the acknowledged beauty of the party.

He had left his seat and had strolled over to a corner very near the stage, when the curtain went up for the last scene. It was fortunate for him that every eye was fixed on the stage, for otherwise the great start and smothered exclamation he gave vent to must have been observed. And no wonder he was startled, for just below his very eyes, in a hammock ingeniously swinging in the midst of a clump of large shrubs that admirably simulated a garden, was Miss Sevellon in an attitude and costume that exactly reproduced the picture. He almost held his breath in the absorption of his attention as his eager eye took in every detail, even to the Greek pattern in the border of her dress and the silver coins in the bracelet on her arm, and—yes! there in a little group, near the rounded elbows, were the three little dark specks. Could circumstantial evidence go farther?

As soon as the tableaux were over he made his way to Miss Sevellon's side, eager yet timid. To his delight he saw that she seemed to welcome him, and he half fancied from her manner that she made a hasty resolution to let bygones be bygones, and to make friends with him. She was so flushed with pleasure and animation, and so surrounded herself by appreciative feeling and praise, that it seemed difficult to her perhaps to be severe upon another. She still wore the beautiful white costume, in which she looked far lovelier than the picture had portrayed her, and his delight knew no bounds when he found himself presently absolutely leading her to a quiet seat in the hall and supplying her with refreshments from the supper room. When they were seated together on a wicker sofa, eating their ices in a friendly tete-a-tete, the young fellow became so emboldened by his success as to commit a grievous faux pas. As his companion raised her arm to carry her spoon to her mouth, her sleeve fell backward and revealed again the three little beauty spots. It was too much for him.

"Oh, Miss Sevellon," he burst forth, "you really must let me explain to you now why it was that you must have been mistaken about not having your picture painted in it!"—

He stopped short. Miss Sevellon had risen to her feet with a motion of resentful anger, and, without giving him time for another word, had joined some people who were passing on to the ballroom, and left him alone, humiliated and full of self reproach. And he could scarcely wonder at her being resentful at having her word doubted again in this bold way; but how could he help it? What was he to do? He wandered away, feeling restless and miserable, and took no special note of his surroundings until

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

The convention which is to put in nomination the man who is to be elected president next November, convened promptly at noon on Tuesday, by Chairman Jones of the national committee. The hall was completely filled with delegates and spectators, while the walls and ceilings were covered with the stars and stripes, instead of the red bandana.

After prayer by Rev. Mr. Gunsaulus, the call for the convention was read by Secretary Fessenden. The reading being concluded, Chairman Jones read an address which was boiling over with sound republican doctrine, and paid his attention to President Cleveland and his free trade allies. Hon. John M. Thurston of Nebraska was chosen temporary chairman, and accepted the office in a speech that was closely listened to by the assembled delegates. The mention of Blaine's name set the whole convention hurrahing wildly.

The following are committees:

New Hampshire—Credentials, Hiram A. Tuttle; Permanent organization, Ed. H. Gilman; Resolutions, A. T. Batcheler.

Maine—Credentials, Fred Powers; Permanent organization, G. A. Wilson; Resolutions, C. H. Prescott.

AFFAIRS IN KITTERY.

KITTERY, ME., June 19th.

Fairfax Stimpson, employed in the Quincy market, Boston, passed Sunday with his parents, Melvin Stimpson and wife, of Love Lane.

The Hotel Park Field opened Monday, the 18th inst., with a complement of guests. The report that Dr. Pennoyer has engaged rooms is now contradicted by Mr. Frisbee.

Mr. William F. Bartlett and wife, who left town a few months ago, are now located in a pleasant little town a few miles from Hartford, Conn. He has a lucrative position with an electric light company, and has just commenced housekeeping under most favorable circumstances. Their many friends in this vicinity wish them life long happiness.

The steamer Mystic has had new and improved seats placed in her cabins and on her upper decks. The work was done by Mr. Lyman Spinney, a journeyman in the art.

Mr. Hartley W. Mason of Portsmouth, has purchased a lot of land of William H. Fernald, on the bluff near the Point bridge, and will erect a cottage on it. Fred Bradbury of Dover, has a cottage nearly ready for his occupancy on a lot near Mr. Mason's. Both sites command fine views of ocean and country.

Lewis & Spinney are contemplating a project to have hot brown bread and baked beans on sale Sunday mornings during the summer, at their new store at the Foreside.

The steamer James Sampson commenced her trips to Kittery Point and Hotel Pocahontas to-day, the 19th inst.

Mr. Perry C. Moore went to the Shoals on Monday to commence his duties as night watchman at the Appledore house. Mr. Moore has held the same position for several years past.

Some of our democratic friends seemed quite pleased at the meagre numbers which met recently to organize a republican campaign club; but they should not laugh too soon. Let us hear from our nominations first, and we will show them a club of as enthusiastic republicans as can be found. The democrats for many years made the statement that without the navy yard, Kittery would be as strongly democratic as Eliot once was; the result is, after nearly four years of "reform" administration, the republicans have been steadily gaining strength, and by the time the ides of November arrive they will be an innumerable host.

The Ancient Order of United Workmen fair will be held in Trefethen hall, Thursday and Friday evenings, the 21st and 22d insts. There are a few more tickets left, which may be had of the committee, or of J. Warren Davis, the Portsmouth jeweller. SUB ROSA.

The town farm of Eliot has been hired and carried on since the 17th day of last April by Mr. Frederick F. Shaw, formerly in the employ of Mr. Michael J. Vaughan of this city. The house, which ground, contains six furnished rooms, and an attic which is used as a dormitory when required. It is situated in a very pleasant locality on the Middle road, and in a good neighborhood. The farm comprises about ten acres; one acre is planted, a half-acre sown with grain, and the rest is grass land. There is at present but one town inmate, an invalid lady eighty-four years old, whose board is paid by the town authorities. Only two tramps have called at the farm during Mr. Shaw's occupancy; they were sheltered, and suitable food given them, by order of the selectmen, it being the rule in York county that a tramp may be received at a public institution only upon a written order from the town officers.

Landlord Frisbee of the Park Field hotel, Kittery Point, wishes to contradict the statement that Dr. Pennoyer is to be at his house this season. He has not applied, and his patronage would be declined did he apply.

Two churches in Biddeford, and one in Saco, all Congregational, were entered and burglarized Thursday night. In one church the missionary boxes were rifled, and five or six dollars taken, but in the other two no cash was available, and the thieves went away empty handed.

GOOD THINGS TO KNOW.

How to Treat Promptly the Poisonous Bites of Snakes, Insects, Dogs or Cats.

Dr. Dunning's patient, the New Jersey stonecutter, whose case has been attracting so much attention, was discharged from the hospital the other day entirely cured. His recovery is remarkable, and reflects credit on the house surgeon in charge of the Manhattan hospital. The young man was walking near a lake, and seeing a rattlesnake beside the path he put his foot upon it and reached down to seize it by the tail, intending to swing its head against the rocks. As he did so another snake, concealed in the grass, fastened its fangs in his hand between the middle and index fingers. The young man consulted a physician, who recommended the use of aqua ammonia, and later, when the pain became intense, chloroform was applied for relief. On the following day the arm became swollen to twice its natural size, very much inflamed and exceedingly painful.

At this time he presented himself at the hospital and submitted himself to Dr. Dunning's treatment, which consisted in making an incision in the wound allowing it to bleed freely, and removing the part touched by the snake's fangs. To quote the doctor's words: "I next proceeded to get the young man gloriously drunk, and to keep him so for several days. At first it required considerable whisky to produce the required intoxication, but later a smaller amount was sufficient. At the time carbonate of ammonia was constantly used to accelerate the action of the heart and counteract the effect of the poison. For some time after the man entered the hospital the arm continued to swell, the severe pains extended to the shoulder, head, and finally to the other arm, being most persistent and obstinate in the ears, and continuing there even after the wounded arm was free from pain, and a peculiar diffusive redness extended itself over the entire body, so marked that when a finger was drawn with slight pressure over the surface of the skin a white line was visible for a little time, and the wounded arm was very much inflamed. The patient remained in the hospital ten days before discharged."

"What is the proper treatment for a snake bite?"

"The wound should be opened with a knife, a ligature bound tight about the limb wounded between the wound and the body, and the blood from the cut be allowed to flow freely. The ligature, if very tight, should not remain on more than two or three hours, lest the death of the member follow from lack of circulation. The wound should then be cauterized with a red hot iron or citrate of silver, and treated with a carbolic dressing containing one part of carbolic acid to sixty parts water. If very severe a charcoal poultice, composed of powdered charcoal alone, or combined with flaxseed, should be bound on the wound. This treatment may be applied without calling a surgeon, if much time must elapse before the arrival of the surgeon, and if promptly and thoroughly done is very efficacious in saving life. There are no wounds so virulent and fatal as those caused by snake bites, for in their fangs is secreted an extremely poisonous substance, which is deposited in the wound through little grooves in the fangs. The fangs are jointed and fold back into the mouth when the animal is feeding, being used only as a means of defense when attacked.

"There are far more deaths from snake bites than from wounds given by dogs. If a dog is known to have hydrophobia, the person bitten by him should apply much the same treatment as in the case of snake bite, cauterizing the wound and applying the poultice of charcoal. Cats sometimes make ugly wounds, not from any inherent poison in themselves, but from venomous substances on their teeth deposited there by some food they have eaten or decayed meat. The virulence of these wounds usually is destroyed by an application of aqua ammonia, commonly called hartshorn, and a poultice of flaxseed. No more efficacious remedy is known for the sting of insects, spiders, musquitoes, etc., than ammonia or a poultice of common salt. If the sting is from a hornet, wasp or bee the salt poultice should be moistened with vinegar, and will relieve the pain almost instantly."

Copper Becoming Fashionable.

"Copper is coming into fashion. What do I mean? Well, look at this lot of canes and umbrellas that I have just imported. You will notice that each one of them has a piece of ordinary copper wire around the handle.

"Gold and silver has become so common as heads for these articles that people demand something new for a change, and you see the result before you. Just how great simplicity is affected in this respect, but I haven't the slightest doubt that when this metal becomes popular, as I believe it will, we shall see very elaborate personal ornaments made of it.

"Indeed, I have often wondered why copper was not more generally used before this among civilized people as a material for ornaments. Its peculiar color harmonizes perfectly with dark materials and complexions, and it is comparatively free from oxidation. Barbarous! Not a bit of it. True, the aborigines make use of copper to adorn their persons, and in that they showed excellent judgment. In matters of taste we might

NEWS AND NOTES.

G. Walton Goss, a very prominent citizen of the town of Clinton, Mass., and connected with the Lancaster national bank, died at his residence on the 18th inst., from the effects of a dose of poison administered by mistake by Dr. C. A. Brooks. Dr. Brooks is a regular practicing physician and feels his terrible mistake so greatly that he is completely prostrated. He has been a physcian 30 years.

August Kliner, whose neck was broken last Friday by falling out of a second story window at Greyly, Mass., is still alive, there being no signs yet of paralysis. From the first moment of his injury Kliner had been perfectly conscious and does not experience great pain. He has not the slightest control of his head, showing that the fracture of the arch of the fifth vertebræ is complete.

Mrs. Mary A. Livermore is to deliver the address at the Massachusetts State Normal school, on the 27th inst.

An inhuman physician of Gainsville, Texas, beat his wife unmercifully one day last week, and drove her naked through the streets. The brute barely escaped lynching.

John F. Mahoney of Manchester, who successfully passed the examination, s for admission to the United States Military academy at West Point, from the first congressional district, some weeks since, was rejected upon undergoing the required physical examination at West Point, by reason of alleged partial deafness. The alternate, Frank McQuesten of Reed's Ferry, has accordingly gone to West Point, and if he is successful in passing examination will receive the position.

Saturday night the post-office at Derry Depot was entered by burglars, the safe blown open, and $100 in postage stamps and money stolen. A gang of burglars visited Derry and entered several places about six months ago.

Sumner Wallace of Rochester says that his father, Edwin Wallace, would not accept the republican gubernatorial nomination if offered.

Prohibitionist State Convention.

The prohibitionist state convention met in Concord on the 19th inst. Rev. D. C. Babcock of Claremont was elected president, and vice presidents were chosen from each county. Dr. Edgar L. Carr of Pittsfield was nominated as candidate for governor, and Hon. Larkin D. Mason of South Tamworth, Col. Joseph Wentworth of Concord, John H. Goodall of Nashua, and George D. Dodge of Hampton Falls, were selected as candidates for presidential electors. There was a good attendance of delegates, among whom were several ladies.

Don't Wait

Until your hair becomes dry, thin, and gray before giving the attention needed to preserve its beauty and vitality. Keep on your toilet-table a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor—the only dressing you require for the hair—and use a little, daily, to preserve the natural color and prevent baldness.

Thomas Munday, Sharon Grove, Ky., writes: "Several months ago my hair commenced falling out, and in a few weeks my head was almost bald. Tried many remedies, but they did no good. I finally bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and, after using only a part of the contents, my head was covered with a heavy growth of hair. I recommend your preparation as the best hair-restorer in the world."

"My hair was faded and dry," writes Mabel C. Hardy, of Delavan, Ill.; "but after using a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor it became black and glossy."

OFFICIAL NOTICE!

— OF —

The Atkinson House Furnishing Co.

— FROM THE —

HEADQUARTERS AT PORTLAND, MAINE,

To those who are contemplating the purchase of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

GREETING:

On and after June 1st we shall STOP PREPAYING the FREIGHT on GOODS SOLD by us, and we respectfully request that those who have dealt with us, and who have been BENEFITED by the PAYMENT OF THIS FREIGHT which in itself in the past three years has amounted to some

30,000 DOLLARS,

Will order what GOODS they require for this SPRING, from us this month, and please order as early as possible. And to those who intend buying

Silver-ware, Window Shades, Drapery, Dinner Sets, Toilet Sets, Stoves and Ranges, Feathers, Spreads, Blankers, Chamber Sets, Parlor Suits, Carpets, Lounges, Easy Chairs, Mattresses, Springs, Feather Pillows,

And anything else in HOUSE FURNISHING, can be BENEFITED to the extent of the freight to their depot, by buying from us this month. We have always PREPAID THIS FREIGHT FROM OUR OWN PROFITS, as we have invariably made the price on the

Furniture, Carpets,

Etc., lower than could be bought for elsewhere. There has always been a great advantage derived by our prepayment of the freight because we in every instance GUARANTEE the SAFE DELIVERY of the goods, and if there has ever been a fight to make with the railroad, we have done it, or in other words if you have received a

CHAMBER SET, PARLOR SUIT, Chair, or Range,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

That was damaged by the railroad, we have replaced it with another piece, and taken our chances to get the breakage from the road. There are items worthy of our close consideration, and especially at this time of year, be wise and order during this month,

And Save Yourself the Freight from Portland to your Depot, no matter where it is located in the State of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

We believe we are the only HOUSE FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT IN NEW ENGLAND WHO HAVE ADHERED STRICTLY TO THIS PLAN OF PREPAYING THE FREIGHT ON EVERYTHING SHIPPED BY US. We mean by this that while some other houses have shipped the goods, and allowed you to pay freight and afterwards send them a bill and then dicker on it for some time, We have invariably paid out the cash before the article left our freight sheds at Portland. And now notwithstanding the fact that we expect to lose a great deal of business by this this year there seems to be no other way to convince some people of the difference between OUR PAYING THE FREIGHT before the articles leave here, AND OUR CUSTOMERS PAYING THE FREIGHT after the articles get to the depot, and then having to write backwards and forwards over the matter. We wish to deal with perfect fairness and frankness in this matter, consequently we give you another month to make your selection, and to fill orders that are already placed. Now if you want a

KITCHEN RANGE, or a CHAMBER SET, or PARLOR SUIT, or CARPETS, WINDOW SHADES, DRAPERY CURTAINS,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

Kindly come and see us at once, or if you can not come, please write us for Catalogues and Descriptions of these Goods, and we will do our very best to please you in every one. Remember we carry COMPLETE HOUSE FURNISHINGS. There is scarcely a thing that you require for your homes that we do not keep, and we sell the same and shall continue to sell the same for cash, or a quarter cash, and the balance by the week or month. This notice applies TO ALL OUR STORES, and we have written to each of our MANAGERS to this effect, consequently there will be no more freight prepaid from our Bangor Store, Rockland Store, Auburn Store, Bar Harbor Store, Biddeford Store, nor from the Headquarters at Portland, after the 31st day of May, 1888.

Kindly get your orders in before June 1st, if you wish to save this freight.

Respectfully, the Public's Ob't Servants,

THE ATKINSON HOUSE FURNISHING CO.,

Headquarters Cor. Pearl and Middle Streets, Portland, and Branches at Auburn, Rock-

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Tuesday, June 19th, Ald. Urch in the chair:

The hearing on the petition for laying out the horse railroad, postponed from last week, was resumed. City Solicitor Emery appeared for the petitioners, and Hon. Calvin Page and John S. H. Frink, Esq., for the remonstrants. A large number of persons living on the proposed line of the railroad appeared to approve or oppose it. The hearing lasted till late in the afternoon, when after hearing the arguments of the counsel on both sides the board adjourned to Thursday evening, June 28th, at eight o'clock.

A called meeting of the Board of Mayor and Aldermen was held in the city rooms on Tuesday evening, when the vote postponing action on the petition for laying out the horse railroad was reconsidered, and a resolution was unanimously passed that the prayer of the petitioners be granted, subject to such restrictions and changes as the board may consider necessary for the interests of the citizens. Aldermen Seymour, Conlon, Urch and Ayers were appointed a committee to supervise the construction of the road on behalf of the city, and adjournment was then taken to Thursday evening, June 28th.

BASE BALL.

The reconstructed Nashuas played a fine game of ball on the south end grounds Tuesday afternoon. Besides the Portland contingent the Nashuas have Jack Manning, the old league player, and Judd and Lovely of the defunct Haverhill club. The game was well worth seeing, and our boys were done up to the Queen's taste. The following is the score:

Conundrum for base ball cranks: If the Portsmouths can beat the Salems, eight to nothing; the Salems beat the Lynns, fourteen to nothing; the Lynns beat the New Yorks, seven to four; where will the Dovers be Thursday?

The Manchester Union says: "Saturday, the noted Portsmouth ball club will play with the East Northwood club on the ground of the latter."

The Lynn nine beat the New Yorks, of the National league, on Monday last. Black, who pitched for the Lynns in the Portsmouth game, was in the box against the New Yorks.

And now they say the Haverhills have disbanded. The Nashuas, who were scheduled to play in Haverhill on Monday, after playing one inning, left the field, not seeing any prospect of receiving the guarantee.

The Portsmouths play in Dover on Thursday.

BOARD OF INSTRUCTION.

At an adjourned meeting of the Board of Instruction, held on Tuesday afternoon, the following schedule of salaries $300; 2d year, $325; 3d year, $375; 5th year, $400; 6th, and subsequent years, $450.

OBITUARY.

Mary N. Prescott, the gifted and widely known author, died on Thursday evening of last week at the residence of her brother-in-law, Hon. Richard S. Spofford at Deer Island on the Merrimac river. Her father, Joseph N. Prescott, was a native of Portsmouth; her mother, Sarah Bridges, was a direct descendant of Sir William Pepperrell of Kittery Point; Mary was their third child, and was born in Calais, Me. She was a most valued contributor to several publications, notably "Scribner's," "Harper's" and "Our Young Folks."

POLICE COURT---BATCHELDER J.

TUESDAY, June 19th.

Horace Tetherly, arraigned for assault on his wife, Sarah A. Tetherly. The evidence showed that no assault of any consequence was committed, and that the wife slapped the husband, while the latter only seized the wife by the wrist. The respondent was discharged.

ENTHUSIASM FOR CLEVELAND.

A democrat of the old school, who says that under no circumstances will he vote for Cleveland and free trade, hands us the following:

Capt. John G. Moses, a retired merchant mariner of the old style of sailors when the sailing ships of Portsmouth and New York were in vogue, says that he shall probably not vote at all at the next presidential election. The reason the captain ascribes for his course is that he does not wish the pauper labor of Europe crowded upon the United States agreeably to the message of the president. The opinions of Capt. Moses are entitled to considerable weight, because he has travelled extensively in Europe, and brought over thousands of passengers. Besides, in making up the lists of the voters by the democratic canvassers of ward one, he has always been set down as a democrat, and when at home he never failed to come to the polls and vote without scratching.

Ex-Councilman Michael J. Griffin of ward two expresses his intention of voting for the next republican electoral ticket. Mr. Griffin has been a life-long democrat, and says that there are a great many more like himself. The reasons which Mr. Griffin ascribes for his course are a general opposition to the measures of President Cleveland's administration.

Joseph S. Hoyt, Esq., of Newington, well known in this city, expresses his intention of voting for the next republican candidates on the electoral ticket. Mr. Hoyt, like almost all the Hoyts, has been during his life an ardent democrat. He says he is glad there was a change in the last administration, but that he thinks that there is need of still another change.

Asa Ham, Esq., an octogenarian and approaching to be a nonagenarian, and still active farmer in charge of the landed estate of the late Hon. Levi Woodbury, announces himself as ready to support the election of the next candidates of the republican party for president and vice president. Mr. Ham was a disciple of Governor and Judge Woodbury, and an active supporter of Andrew Jackson in his famous political campaign for the election of president. The grandfather of Mr. Ham was one of the patriot soldiers of George Washington who left the bloody prints of their bare feet at Valley Forge during the war of the Revolution, and his father was a soldier in the war of 1812.

Howe Call, Esq., the "silver tongued orator" who was considered by the National Democratic Committee, four years ago, to be smart enough to stump the west in favor of the election of Grover Cleveland, now announces himself to be a republican unreservedly and in toto.

MASONIC.

Haverhill commandery, Knights Templar, of Haverhill, Mass., with about one hundred Sir Knights, and accompanied by the Haverhill cornet band, are expected to arrive in this city to-day, on the train which is due at about twelve o'clock, on their way to the Shoals. On their arrival in this city they will be met by a delegation from De Witt Clinton Commandery, and proceed to the Rockingham for dinner. At four o'clock in the afternoon, De Witt Clinton Commandery, accompanied by the Portsmouth flute and drum band, will march to the Rockingham, and escort the visiting Sir Knights through some of the principal streets to the banquet hall in Masonic building; and from thence to Jones' wharf, where the Haverhill commandery will take the steamer Oceanic for the Appledore house. They will return on Thursday afternoon in season to take the train for home.

The Italian grand lodge of the Orient has sent a message of condolence to the grand lodge of Berlin, saying: "The death of Emperor Frederick is a heavy loss to Free Masons, the principles of which order he adopted with such enthusiasm."

PERSONAL.

Mr. Frank Mason of this city, who is now a Pullman car conductor, running from Montreal to Fabyan's, is passing a few days with his parents in this city.

Mr. Walter Vaughan, of Boston, formerly of this city, who came down to visit friends here on Sunday last, and was struck in the eye with a stone thrown [illegible] home on Tuesday, his eye being in a bad condition.

George Brooks Brewster, and family, have taken possession of a house on Smutty-nose island, Isles of Shoals, for the season.

NEW HAMPSHIRE MEDICAL SOCIETY.

The 98th annual meeting of the New Hampshire Medical Society convened at Concord on the morning of the 19th inst., for a two-days session, with a large attention of delegates. After transacting the usual preliminary business, President Dr. W. S. Roberts of Wakefield delivered an address.

MARITIME NOTES

The schooner Edith T. Gandy, from Perth Amboy, with coal for Augusta, Me., arrived at this port on Tuesday, to deliver the soldiers' and sailors' monument, which she took on board at Bridgeport, Conn.

Messrs. Robinson and Haley, have hauled up their lobster pots at Duck island, becoming discouraged at the poor outlook; in six nights they caught only 200 lobsters.

Mackerel have been exceedingly rare on the Maine coast for two years, but they are reported to be coming Maine way and the mackerel fishermen are hopeful. Lobster packers say that the lobster laws passed by the Maine legislature make lobster packing in Maine unprofitable, and that industry will therefore suffer a decline this summer.

Capt. William A. Andrews sailed from Point of Pines in the sixteen foot dory, the Dark Secret, on its journey across the Atlantic on the 18th inst. The boat is stocked with provisions for 100 days, but the captain expects to reach Queenstown in seventy days.

A large number of our citizens went to Boston on Monday to witness the celebration of Bunker hill day, and also to take in the base ball games between the Chicago and Boston clubs.

Rev. Mr. Harrington, pastor of the Free Will Baptist church, baptized three converts at Noble's island, on Sunday last.

Mr. George H. Biddle of Dover has been awarded the contract for furnishing the collation on July 4th.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, has no other preparation ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

WOMEN sustain this loss every time they wash clothes, clean house, or allow others to do this work for them, without the aid of PYLE'S PEARLINE WASHING COMPOUND; an honest, straightforward article, which does better work in less time and with less labor than anything else known. PEARLINE is economical, but beware of imitations.

HONESTLY PREPARED

We cannot afford, nor do we wish to make false statements. We do not claim that our preparations are the best before the people, but we do maintain that

PRESTON'S FLAVORING EXTRACTS

Are in every way worthy of general confidence. Carefully chosen Oils are employed in their preparation, and the result is, that we have a line not excelled by any in the world. The following flavors are offered in 2, 4 and 8 ounce packages, Vanilla, Lemon, Orange, Rose, Peach, Almond, Nutmeg and Celery.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS.

$22 TO $900.

The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture of these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.

Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogues free.

PIANOS.

Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos, that they are superior to all others. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN PIANO STRINGER," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with a greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities, gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

ADAMSON'S BOTANIC COUGH BALSAM

More than twenty years ago Adamson's Botanic Balsam was introduced generally throughout New England as a remedy for Coughs, Colds and Pulmonary complaints. Since its introduction it has constantly won its way into public favor, until now it is the universal decision that ADAMSON'S BOTANIC BALSAM is the best remedy for curing Coughs, Colds and Asthma.

WAS INSANE

The Fearful Effect of Heredity Upon the Lives of Men and Women—A Striking Case.

"The man or woman does not live who is free from hereditary influences." This remark was made by the celebrated Dr. Vanderville, of New York, to the Rev. Dr. Brooks, at a recent convention of scientists.

"I agree with you, doctor," said the divine.

"Pure blood," continued the doctor, "is the great cause of health; impure blood the source of most diseases. It may even go back to the grand or great grand parents."

"I have in mind a prominent man," said the reverend gentleman, "General Alfred C. Moore, of No. 1 Pemberton Square, Boston. He inherited kidney troubles from both parents, one of whom died with it. He suffered terribly from pains in the back and head, and at times when walking the distresses became so bad that he was compelled to lay hold of some convenient post for support. He was in a most desperate condition."

"And is he so still?" asked the doctor.

"No, he is in perfect health. Dr. McGregor, I believe of Maine, who had amputated an arm for the general, cured him."

"Do you know what medicine he used?"

"I understand it was Hunt's Remedy."

"Oh, Hunt's Remedy. I know it very well," said Dr. Vanderville. "I consider it the best remedy for kidney, liver, heart troubles, and female difficulties in the world. It is in no sense a patent medicine, but a standard remedy, which deserves to be used by all intelligent people. The fact is, no blood-taint can exist when the kidneys are in perfect order, and there is where Hunt's Remedy shows its marvelous superiority."

"I only wish," said Rev. Dr. Brooks, "that all people who inherit a tendency to disease could know of this remedy of which you speak so highly and use it. I am positive it would greatly lessen suffering and death."

A DISTRESSING COUGH.

How many, especially during the Fall and Winter months, are troubled with a Cough, sometimes dry and hacking, sometimes loose causing the sufferer to raise a large amount of offensive matter; this can soon be cured by using Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs.

Cured her Cough.

MRS. JEREMIAH CLARK, Lowell, Mass., says: "Twelve years ago I first took a bottle of your Throat and Lung Specific. I had been troubled with a very bad Cough for months. A 50-cent bottle cured my Cough. Since then I have not been without it. I can heartily recommend it to any one who has a bad cough."

Saved his Life.

CHAS. A. WAITT, says: "No language can express the value I attach to your Specific. I believe it saved my life."

We would cite other testimonials did we think it necessary, but a trial bottle will convince you that it is all we represent. Give it a trial.

Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific is sold by all Druggists. Price 50 cents and $1. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

Emerson's Weapon.

Is a wonderfully expert [illegible] which serves every [illegible] of a grave to [illegible] in tree eighteen inches in diameter. The machete differs in length and form according to the section of the country and the main object for which it was originally designed. In the cane growing regions of the west coast it is about thirty inches long. The edge of the blade is slightly convex, and increases in width near the end, which is rounded and flared very similar to the eastern scimitar. On the Caribbean coast it is a little longer, but the blade is not so convex and of less width. Years ago it was the national weapon of the country, and in many bloody revolutions the sight of a regiment of Indians with these murderous blades sparkling in the sunlight caused more than one stampede among the soldiers.—Cor. New York Herald.

A Hearty Laugh.

There is nothing that will help digestion like a hearty laugh. But how can a billious man laugh? What warmth is there in a dyspeptic's smile? And how can a man be mirthful when his liver is out of order? We recommend all such persons to use Ingalls' Mandrake Compound. It acts directly on the liver and stomach, stimulating the one and strengthening the other. A single bottle will convince one of its efficacy.

Miss Rose Cleveland has stopped teaching in Mme. Reed's school for girls in New York.

Everybody Likes

To be called handsome, especially the young ladies. But that is simply impossible as long as their faces are covered with pimples, blotches and sores. But wait, there is no need of this; one or two bottles of Sulphur Bitters will remove all such disfigurations, and make your face fair and rosy.—Fannie Bell, Editress.

Toronto, Ont., policemen recently arrested a Methodist minister for standing on the street, waiting for a car.

From Mrs. I. N. Gammon, 5 Maverick St., E. Boston, Mass.:

F. W. Kinsman & Co.—Gents: I would say to my friends, and all who chance to read this, that I have used Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam in my family for a long time, and consider it a very valuable medicine. It cures when all other remedies fail, and I would cheerfully recommend it to those afflicted with coughs, colds, asthma, etc. I have just made a purchase of two large bottles to send to a friend in Central City, Col.

M. A. Kelley's Thirty Thousand Dollars.

Much interest has been shown in various ways in the tax receiver of Pittston, Mr. M. A. Kelley's fortunate investments and it has been deemed of public interest to find out what he thinks about it. Learning that Mr. Kelley had received $30,000 through the Miners' Savings Bank, a reporter interviewed him. He said he simply bought one-fifth of ticket No. 55,315 which drew the Capital Prize of $150,000 in the May Drawing of the Louisiana State Lottery, for which he paid $2, just as he would have put up a margin on stock, and he was surprised to learn that there were men in town who knew the value of the ticket a week before he was advised.—Pittston (Pa.) Gazette, May 26th.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WHY WORK FOR ANOTHER, or on small salary? Why continue working on a worn-out farm? Why try to secure a living from such high-priced or heavily-mortgaged farms? Why work on rented land? Why not start for yourself? Why not secure at once some of the low-priced but very fertile and well located lands adjacent to railroads now to be obtained by those going to Northern Dakota and Minnesota, where you can make a larger net profit per acre than on the high-priced or worn-out land you now occupy? OH! MY HEAD!

The pain from Neuralgia and its companion disease Rheumatism is excruciating. Thousands who could be quickly cured are needlessly suffering. Athlophoros will do for others what it did for the following parties:

Williamsport, Ind., Oct. 5, 1887.

Having been afflicted with neuralgia for the past four years, and trying almost everything, but in vain, I finally heard of Athlophoros. After taking one bottle I found it to be helping me, and after taking four bottles of Athlophoros and one of Pills, I found that I was entirely well. I think the medicine is positively a sure cure.

CHAUNCEY B. REDDICK.

Mt. Carmel, Ill., Dec. 26, 1887.

I have used Athlophoros in my family and find it to be the greatest medicine for neuralgia in existence, and having had the faceache opposite me for the past 30 years I know whereof I speak. MRS. JULIA CHILTON.

Clinging to the Last.

The virus of rheumatism often remains in the system through life, when it does not cut the thread of existence suddenly, as it is always liable to do by attacking the heart. Ere the grip of this tenacious disease tightens, it should be loosened by that beneficent liberator from disease, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which will free the sufferer at the outset from subsequent pain and danger. No purer or more agreeable blood depurent exists, as multitudes of the rheumatic and neuralgic have ascertained by certified experience. It is through the medium of a regular action of the kidneys and bladder that an outlet is afforded for the escape of impurities which beget not only rheumatic, but gouty ailments, and dropsical effusions. To these organs the Bitters gives an impulse, never verging on the bounds of irritation, but sufficiently vigorous to cause them and the bowels to perform their functions with clock-like precision. Use it also for dyspepsia, biliousness, fever and ague and debility.

The sentiment in favor of a co-operative distributive movement seems to be growing among the Boston Knights of Labor.

Peculiar

In the combination, proportion, and preparation of its ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures where other preparations entirely fail. Peculiar in its good name at home, which is a "tower of strength abroad," peculiar in the phenomenal sales it has attained, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most successful medicine for purifying the blood, giving strength, and creating an appetite.

A vigorous boycott is being pushed by the Cigarmakers' union against some Boston cigars, which the cigarmakers say are scab made.

Don't Despair.

If you are weak and weary from some so-called chronic disease, don't give up. Sulphur Bitters have given hope to many invalids, where hitherto there was nothing but despair. It will build up and renew your whole system. — Editor Weekly American.

We take much pleasure in recommending the use of Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer as safe and reliable for estoring gray hair to its natural color.

Strikes seem to be very prevalent in England, France and Germany in many different occupations, judging from the accounts published in the foreign papers.

I have had catarrh for twenty years, and used all kinds of remedies without relief. Mr. Smith, druggist, of Little Falls, recommended Ely's Cream Balm. The effect of the first application was magical, it allayed the inflammation and the next morning my head was as clear as a bell. One bottle has done so much good that I am convinced its use will effect a permanent cure. It is soothing, pleasant and easy to apply, and I strongly urge its use to all sufferers.—George Terry, Little Falls, N. Y.

LOVE, DID I NOT WAIT?

Love, did I not wait for many a day
To hear the old yet ever novel words
Mingle sweet repetition with the birds'
Rehearsal of birds' own sweet passion play?
Yes, yes! until o'er bough and bloom did stray
Afternoon shadows, and from pasture herds
Came barnward, lowing, urged by farm boys girds,
Whereat I knew that Evening trod her way.
Then sudden joy the gloaming glorified,
Joy that no mortal tongue could tell aright,
When to my dwelling place you, love, did ride
To clasp my hand with love's most loyal might;
Then, then, when your eyes' silence beamed, "My bride!"
God's whisper seemed to breathe it on the night.

—William Struthers in Home Journal.

THE GHOST OF THE SHIP.

Eight years ago I shipped on board the Enrique, Capt. James. Our voyage was to Hilo, Sandwich Islands, and back to Puget sound, whence we sailed. The captain, officers and crew were, when I joined, Americans and West Indiamen; but, as another hand was wanted besides myself, I persuaded Tom Martyn, an Englishman, with whom I had become friendly, to fill the vacancy. Tom was a fine looking fellow, very jovial, and had lots of information, which he knew how to use; but, though he dressed and talked like a sailor, he had not been long on board ship before it became plain that he had not been brought up a salt.

Our captain was a Tartar, and no mistake; and, as he had the eye of a hawk, no fault committed by man or boy escaped him. This was specially unfortunate for my English shipmate. He had shipped on able seaman's wages, but his deficiencies were so many and glaring that our captain, who seemed to watch his movements more carefully than the rest of the crew, often inflicted upon him punishments painful to witness. I had a strong attachment for Martyn, and stood his friend whenever I could by taking some of his duties along with my own; but I was not always on hand to help him, so he fell oftener than others beneath the captain's displeasure.

One night when I was at the wheel the wind rose into a gale. The captain came on deck and set all hands to reef topsails. The men were manning the halyards to hoist away when poor Martyn, instead of letting go the reef tackle, let go the weather foretopsail brace, and away went the yard, fore and aft. By luffing up smartly, however, we managed to get checked without carrying anything away. But Capt. James, frothing at the mouth, swore he would tan the foolish lubber's hide who had done so clumsy a thing. Saying which he rushed at poor Martyn with a piece of ratline, which he brought down upon his head and shoulders, giving them a fearful cut. He was in the act of raising it again, when a voice from aloft roared out:

"Stay your hand!"

The voice was wonderfully loud and clear, seemingly coming from the maintop. The captain fell back, and, looking up, cried in a great rage:

"Aloft there!"

"Hello!" was the answer back.

"Come down on deck," was the captain's imperious order.

"Come up here and see how you will like it," was the contemptuous response.

"Come down, I say, on deck!" foamed the captain.

"Come up and fetch me," returned the voice from aloft.

"Who is up there, Mr. Scott?" cried the captain, appealing to the first officer.

"No one, sir," was the reply, "so far as I can see. All seem present on deck."

The captain's rage was terrible to witness.

"All seem present, Mr. Scott? What do you mean by that, sir? I ask you again, who is up there?"

"No one known to me," returned the mate. "All are present; all are on deck."

Such was the case. But the second mate, without awaiting orders, sprang up the rigging and looked over the top rim, then made the circuit of it, looking all around the masthead, and then reported himself alone.

"Then the ship must be haunted!" cried the chief mate.

The captain thereupon dropped the rope's end which he held in his hand and went below. It was evident that he was strangely affected by what had occurred. And so my fellow countryman escaped further punishment that night.

But in a few days our skipper had forgotten his fears and looked about for another object upon which he could vent his spleen. I had the ill fortune to feel his wrath. He ordered me to make a knot in the end of an old jagged rope to be used in making a lashing. In a little while I returned, saying I had made the best job I could out of a rope which was quite fagged out.

"Well," said he, "if that's your best you are as much of a lubber as your friend Martyn. But I'll dock you both to ordinary seaman's wages."

I tried to show him that the rope was too much worn to make a neat piece of work of it.

"Indeed," I said, "it is sadly fagged."

"Fagged, is it?" cried he, scornfully. "Then I'll finish it over your lubberly back."

"No, you won't!" roared out a voice from behind the longboat.

The captain rushed in the direction of the sound, but failed to discover the speaker.

"Who was that?" he cried in a storm of wrath. "Let me know who it is, and I'll thrash him within an inch of his life!"

"Will you? Ha! ha! ha!" was the mocking reply, dropping seemingly from the maintop.

It was broad daylight when this took place, so we could see that there was no one up there. I was as much startled and mystified by the occurrence as the captain; but neither he nor I, nor any of the crew to whom he applied, could throw light thereon. But whoever or whatever uttered the words, my purpose was served as was Martyn's on a previous occasion. The irate captain went below, filled more with fear than rage, throwing behind him, as he stepped upon the cabin ladder, the rope's end which had so vexed him.

Sailors, in general, are superstitious beings. Whatever cannot easily be made out or accounted for on natural principles is laid to the account of the supernatural. Our captain was no better in this respect than his crew, for he was as illiterate as they, except in the matter of navigation, and as rough and untutored. He evidently believed his ship was haunted, and that a spirit from the vast deep had a mind to torment him by its interferences. His fears were increased not many days after. On returning to rest at the end of his evening's watch his slumbers were disturbed by a loud and fearful cry, which seemed to enter the cabin by the side light, which was left open for ventilation. The cry was heard by the second officer on the quarter deck and by Martyn, who was at the wheel. Neither of them could throw any light upon the incident to the captain, who had rushed on to the deck in a state of terror and demanded in vain for the production of the offender.

From that day it was clear to all hands that Capt. James was tormented by apprehensions of coming disaster. An idea was fixed in his mind that his ship was visited by a spirit from the invisible world, which preferred to make itself heard rather than seen. And this idea was strengthened by the fact that when he was on deck and became angry at the conduct of any of the men, especially when his anger was made manifest by oaths or blows, the unseen but ever vigilant visitor from the afar world, perched apparently on top of the mainmast, utter the insolent laugh or solemn warning. On these occasions the poor man would rush off to his cabin with blanched cheek and tottering limbs, and there abide until the gale in his moral sensibilities should subside. That it was angry with no one else but the captain was clear, from the fact that it never took notice of the conduct of any other person. The mate or the boatswain might act as they liked, or the men might give or call each other hard names; no matter—the voice was not heard—neither laugh nor moan fell upon our ears.

But most of those who lived in the forecastle were far from being happy; many of them shared the fear of our skipper, and I saw that they would rather have braved his wrath than to be tormented as they were by the "voices of the night" or day. Martyn and myself were exceptions. What his opinion was I could not say; he met all my questions by adroit evasions. As for myself, I had no explanations to give. Thus matters went on until we were within two days' sail of the islands. All the while our captain had been kept from tyranny by his fears of the voice, but now, exasperated by some fault in seamanship on the part of Martyn, and being the worse for liquor, he hurled a belaying pin at him which struck him on the head. Clapping his hands to his head he rushed to the forecastle. It was evident that the skipper expected to hear the voice, for he looked nervously aloft, but all was silent in that direction. His courage returned and he desired the second officer to call Martyn back to the deck. Getting no answer to his call the mate went below, where he found the poor fellow delirious. Returning to the deck he reported him to be in a dangerous condition. This filled the captain with fear. He ordered that every attention be paid him, which was done. That night it became necessary to have all hands on deck to reef, and while we were on the yards an awful cry, like that of a maniac, arose from the bow of the vessel and the next moment several of us saw a human form on the rail near the forecastle and then a loud splash was heard in the water under our lee. The captain and chief officers who were on deck rushed to the side. A hat was seen for a moment bobbing on the crest of a wave, the maniacal cry was repeated, when Capt. James, himself uttering a loud cry, fell senseless on the deck. The mate then hailed us who were on the topsail yard: "Come down from aloft! Clear away the small boat!"

We thought he was as near beside himself as was the captain; and so he was for the moment, for when we gained the deck he was ready to countermand the order. Everything was awful beyond expression; the wind and water were raging wild; it was impossible for a boat to live in so rough a sea, so, making a virtue of necessity, the search for the poor, maddened fellow was abandoned amid vows of vengeance against the captain and tears for our poor, lost messmate. Forty-eight hours after this we entered Hilo. A vast change had come over the crew. The captain, knowing their peculiarities, had supplied them with money and copious libations of whisky; so, instead of reporting him to the consul, as they declared they would, they were ready to shout his praise all day long. In this, however, I did not agree; but, unable to bring the tyrant to justice single handed, I resolved to quit the Enrique. I did so. After hiding in the woods several days I was caught and brought back to the ship. As my adventures as a fugitive are not essential to the unfolding of my story, I pass them by and take up the thread of my narrative.

We set sail on our return voyage. Capt. James was an altered man. He abstained from liquor, he controlled his temper, and this, with the addition of a fine steady breeze, made our lives on board happy. But alas, we were doomed to a sad ending up of the voyage. Keeping near the land, and a squall laying hold of the ship, we were drawn on a lee shore. It was just after midnight when we struck, and the darkness was terrible, and leaping out of my hammock I ran on deck. I cried out to my shipmate, but got no answer. It was not possible to reach the after part of the vessel where the lifeboats were kept, so, acting on the impulse of the moment, I leaped into the sea. Catching hold of a friendly rock I was saved. Daylight came after a weary waiting. The first thing I saw was the ghasty corpse of Capt. James, and not far from it that of our Chinese cook. The rest were saved. We made our way to Portland, where we were paid off; thence proceeded to San Francisco.

I had often asked myself whence came those strange voices and fearful words, which had so alarmed our captain and put most of the crew in terror, and had so opportunely saved me from the captain's vengeance. But it was beyond my power to answer the inquiry; neither could the mate nor any of the survivors throw any light thereon. Had we known what ventriloquism was we might have had therein a solution of the mystery, but

CURES Nervous Prostration, Nervous Headache, Neuralgia, Nervous Weakness, Stomach and Liver Diseases, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, and all affections of the Kidneys.

WEAK NERVES

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is a Nerve Tonic which never fails. Containing Celery and Coca, these wonderful nerve stimulants, it speedily cures all nervous disorders.

RHEUMATISM

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND purifies the blood. It drives out the lactic acid, which causes Rheumatism, and restores the blood-making organs to a healthy condition. It is the true remedy for Rheumatism.

KIDNEY COMPLAINTS

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND quickly restores the liver and kidneys to perfect health. This curative power, combined with its nerve tonics, makes it the best remedy for all kidney complaints.

DYSPEPSIA

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND strengthens the stomach, and quiets the nerves of the digestive organs. This is why it cures even the worse cases of Dyspepsia.

CONSTIPATION

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is not a cathartic. It is a laxative, giving easy and natural action to the bowels. Regularity surely follows its use.

The convention effected its permanent organization on Wednesday, with Hon. M. M. Estee of California as permanent chairman, who made a brief but forcible address, after which a recess was taken to eight o'clock in the evening.

It is not thought the work of the convention can be completed before Saturday night.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufacturers. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultual, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its nfluence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manutures he supplies.—Benjamin Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

LAND OF THE DAKOTAS.

A Baltimore Woman's Graphic Description of Life Among the Indians.

Mrs. Abbie Thayer is visiting friends in this city during her vacation from government work in the "land of the Dakotas." She is head teacher in one of the government Indian schools on the Rosebud agency. Miles away from any white settlement, she has the charge of a camp of 100 Indians, her protecting police being savages also. Her duty is to look after the education, food, clothing and general furnishings of the entire camp. She has been very successful in her work, and her graphic descriptions of her experiences are exceedingly interesting.

The Indians are those known as the "Sioux," who were sent from Minnesota years ago to their present reservations in Dakota. They adhere to their ancestral customs, except so far as they can be individually persuaded to "go on the white man's road." The more fortunate among them live in wood or canvas "teepees" or tents, an entire family occupying the one room, which serves for all purposes, and sleeping on the ground floor. In fact, the word ground is also the word for bed, as they are generally unaccustomed to sleep on anything else. A chair, when they have one, is rather a matter of ornament than use. The dress of a squaw is, to begin with, a single calico garment, which after being put on is never taken off. When a new garment is received from the government it is put on over the old one, and so on with subsequent additions until the inner one drops off. Half a dozen dresses are sometimes worn over each other in this way, a squaw's wardrobe and wealth being almost literally "on her back." The dresses are loose fitting, but drawn together at the waist by a fancy girdle. They have no trunks.

The ears of both sexes are fairly riddled with holes as large as a pencil, from which hang many ornaments made of brass and bones. Both sexes wear the hair long, plaited and heavily ornamented—a full dressed squaw looks like an animated and moving junk shop, with all her rags, bones and brass about her.

Polygamy prevails and whenever a "brave" is displeased with his squaw he "throws her away." The marriage ceremony is mainly that of "capture." The brave covers himself with a large blanket, hiding all but one eye, which is painted beyond all recognition. He selects his girl and envelops her in his blanket. Being sure of his audience, he sings her a love song. If she submits to this the courtship is over and he takes her home. He regards his mother-in-law as his natural enemy and never deigns to either speak to her or to look at her.

Many of the Indians, especially the young ones, are handsome in figure and sometimes in face. Their complexion is about that of an Italian, hair and eyes uniformly black, teeth sound and white, even among the aged.

In school the children are bright in their studies and close observers of all that goes on around them. All kinds of deceptions are considered legitimate, and the better the lie the smarter the author. Among themselves all the work is done by the women, the men doing nothing until they are taught and compelled by the inroads of civilization. Alcoholic liquors in any form are not allowed on any of the reservations. All demands upon the government are made through the head teacher of the school, who naturally becomes the queen bee of the savage hive. The teachers are under superintendents, who report to their superiors in the department of the interior, Washington.—Baltimore Sun.

Queen Victoria's Personal Dislikes.

But if the queen's "likes" are freely manifested, so are her "dislikes," as Louis Philippe had cause to feel in 1848. Her majesty gave an asylum to the runaway Orleans princes, but she said openly that the revolution which sent them into exile was their punishment for the "disgraceful, dishonorable behavior of the Tuileries in the matter of the Spanish marriages." Another object of her antipathy is Mr. Gladstone, although he has been half a dozen times her prime minister and may be again. Yet her repugnance is nowhere so strongly manifested as toward the French, not so much perhaps as a nation as to their literature, fashions and customs, and above all their wom.... and theatres, which to her mind represent the abomination of indecorum and iniquity. She used to come here when Napoleon III was thought to be the arbiter of Europe's destinies, but it was always against her will, in obedience to reasons of state, and I remember the sullen looks which she cast at the crowd when, seated by the side of the Empress Eugenie, the two sovereigns passed in review the victorious troops of the Crimea. Victoria was as dowdy as her companion was elegant, and the crowd's comparisons were not flattering to the imperial guest.—Foreign Cor. New York Times.

Counting Years by Winters.

The Dakota Indians count their years by winters and say a man is so many snows old, or that so many snow seasons have passed since an occurrence. They have no divisions of time into weeks, and their months are absolutely lunar, only twelve, however, being designated, which receive their names upon the recurrence of some physical phenomenon. The Dakotas have a system of winter counts, which were formerly executed in colors on the hides of animals, but the present recorders make use of paper, books, pens, pencils and paints obtained from the whites. The figures used are extremely interesting. To represent the whooping cough, for instance, a head is sketched and the cough illustrated by lines issuing from the mouth. On one occasion food was very scarce, and they lived on acorns. They told the story with sketch of a crude oak tree and little dots below it representing the acorns.—Magazine of American History.

The Royal Crown of Prussia.

The royal crown of Prussia, which dates from the time of King Frederick the First, is lined with velvet, contrary to all heraldic rules. This fact has led to several discrepancies, more especially in matters of art. The painter, Professor Hildebrandt, a well known authority on points of heraldry, some years ago sketched a banner for a veteran association, strictly adhering to the heraldic rule in drawing the royal crown without a lining. On the sketch being sent to the minister of the interior the official objected to it, insisting upon the Prussian crown being lined, but finally yielded to the professor. It may be mentioned here that the crown of 1701 can no longer be worn nowadays. It was fitted at the time to be worn over a long wig, and therefore is far too large. The Emperor William, on the occasion of his coronation, had a new crown made for himself. When the court jeweler delivered it he requested the king to try it on, but the king declined, saying that he could not possibly consent to "try on" a crown which he was first to place upon his head on so solemn an occasion as a coronation. —The Argonaut.

DOWN THE RED SEA.

Between Two Untamable Deserts—Scenes at Sea—The "Gate of Weeping."

The famous epitaph: "Here lies Methuselah Tompkins, aged 12 months," was not more splendidly ironical than the complimenting of one of the most scorched and barren spots on the face of the earth (where water must be paid for at the rate of $3.25 per ton) with the name of the Garden of Eden. Aden or Aiden being only another form of the same word. But with all the inhospitable sternness of its outward aspect, England's renowned Arabian colony is a place well worth seeing, and forms a very appropriate climax to the long panorama of striking spots and picturesque landscapes which has kept pace with our five days' voyage down the Red sea.

In truth, despite its unfortunate position between two of the most savage and untamable deserts in existence, it is wonderful how many objects of interest the Red Sea has to show. The panorama begins with Suez itself, where, far away beyond the flat, lifeless waste of the Arabian sands, roll up in endless waves of shadowy purple the rocky hills that divide the Gulf of Suez from that of Akaba. Further on there looms darkly against the western sky the grim headland of Ras Attakah, which saw in dim prehistoric ages the whole chivalry of Egypt swallowed up by the hungry waves, and looked thousands of years later upon the rush of the advancing tide from which the first Napoleon (then on the very threshold of his wonderful career) extricated himself with a cool courage unparalleled in history.

The next sunrise kindles into living fire the stern gray barrenness of those craggy mountains, through a single gap in whose frowning rampart you may at times catch a passing glimpse of the mighty mass of Sinai. Then stretching gauntly along the opposite shore you see, blurred and broken by the quivering film of intense heat that hovers along the horizon, the jagged outline of the stony ridges of Nubia, among which lie moldering the bones of many a gallant fellow who died vainly in England's tardy effort to rescue her bravest man, "Chinese Gordon."

Little by little the shores on either side fade away, the clustering islands melt into the fast falling shadows of night, and by dawn on the following morning we were far out of sight of land, while around us, for nearly 100 miles on either side, the lonely brightness of the blue tropical sea lies outstretched in all its splendor. And then, for two days to come, it is all sky and sea, sea and sky—porpoises plunging and gamboling in the sparkling waters, seabirds sweeping down into the foam and darting off again with fish wriggling in their beaks, and wide winged vultures poised like hovering clouds far up against the warm, dreamy blue of the African sky.

Another day comes, and beneath the silent sunrise the long funeral train of the Zebayir Islands, grim and joyless amid the universal brightness that beams over sea and sky, cast the gloomy shadow of their black volcanic rocks far over the sunny waters. A little further, and the land reappears on either side, the African and Arabian coasts gradually converging toward the same point from east and west. Presently Mocha displays its tall, tapering minarets and flat roofs and small white houses and gray, crumbling ramparts, clustering along the flat, sandy shore of "Yemen the Happy." Then, far in the distance, the rocks of Bab el Mandeb (Gate of Weeping) loom ghost-like against the hot, cloudless sky, and the southern gateway of the Red sea opens before us.—David Ker's Abria Letter in New York Times.

OFFICIAL NOTICE!

— OF —

The Atkinson House Furnishing Co.

— FROM THE —

HEADQUARTERS AT PORTLAND, MAINE,

To those who are contemplating the purchase of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

GREETING:

On and after June 1st we shall STOP PREPAYING the FREIGHT on GOODS SOLD by us, and we respectfully request that those who have dealt with us, and who have been BENEFITED by the PAYMENT OF THIS FREIGHT which in itself in the past three years has amounted to some

30,000 DOLLARS,

Will order what GOODS they require for this SPRING, from us this month, and please order as early as possible. And to those who intend buying

Springs,
Feather Pillows,
Silver-ware,
Window Shades,
Drapery,
Dinner Sets,
Toilet Sets,
Spreads, Blankers,
Chamber Sets,
Parlor Suits,
Carpets,
Lounges,
Easy Chairs,
Mattresses,
Feathers,
Stoves and Ranges,

And anything else in HOUSE FURNISHING, can be BENEFITED to the extent of the freight to their depot, by buying from us this month. We have always PREPAID THIS FREIGHT FROM OUR OWN PROFITS, as we have invariably made the price on the

Furniture, Carpets,

Etc., lower than could be bought for elsewhere. There has always been a great advantage derived by our prepayment of the freight because we in every instance GUARANTEE the SAFE DELIVERY of the goods, and if there has ever been a fight to make with the railroad, we have done it, or in other words if you have received a

CHAMBER SET,

PARLOR SUIT,

Chair, or Range,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

That was damaged by the railroad, we have replaced it with another piece, and taken our chances to get the breakage from the road. There are items worthy of our close consideration, and especially at this time of year, be wise and order during this month,

And Save Yourself the Freight from Portland to your Depot, no matter where it is located in the State of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

We believe we are the only HOUSE FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT IN NEW ENGLAND WHO HAVE ADHERED STRICTLY TO THIS PLAN OF PREPAYING THE FREIGHT ON EVERYTHING SHIPPED BY US. We mean by this that while some other houses have shipped the goods, and allowed you to pay freight and afterwards send them a bill and then dicker on it for some time, We have invariably paid out the cash before the article left our freight sheds at Portland. And now notwithstanding the fact that we expect to lose a great deal of business by this this year there seems to be no other way to convince some people of the difference between OUR PAYING THE FREIGHT before the articles leave here, AND OUR CUSTOMERS PAYING THE FREIGHT after the articles get to the depot, and then having to write backwards and forwards over the matter. We wish to deal with perfect fairness and frankness in this matter, consequently we give you another month to make your selection, and to fill orders that are already placed. Now if you want a

KITCHEN RANGE, or a CHAMBER SET, or PARLOR SUIT, or CARPETS, WINDOW SHADES, DRAPERY CURTAINS,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

Kindly come and see us at once, or if you can not come, please write us for Catalogues and Descriptions of these Goods, and we will do our very best to please you in every one. Remember we carry COMPLETE HOUSE FURNISHINGS. There is scarcely a thing that you require for your homes that we do not keep, and we sell the same and shall continue to sell the same for cash, or a quarter cash, and the balance by the week or month. This notice applies TO ALL OUR STORES, and we have written to each of our MANAGERS to this effect, consequently there will be no more freight prepaid from our Bangor Store, Rockland Store, Auburn Store, Bar Harbor Store, Biddeford Store, nor from the Headquarters at Portland, after the 31st day of May, 1888.

Kindly get your orders in before June 1st, if you wish to save this freight.

Respectfully, the Public's Ob't Servants,

THE ATKINSON HOUSE FURNISHING CO.,

Headquarters Cor. Pearl and Middle Streets, Portland, and Branches at Auburn, Rockland, Bangor and Biddeford, also Bar Harbor for a short time.

ISAAC C. ATKINSON, Gen. Manager.

THE HORSE RAILROAD.

At the hearing upon the petition for the locating of the tracks of the proposed horse railroad, at the court house on Tuesday of this week, after listening to the evidence and the arguments of counsel on both sides, the Board of Mayor and Aldermen adjourned to Thursday evening, June 28th, at 8:00 o'clock.

After the adjournment, upon the representation to the mayor by the petitioners that they were anxious to commence work upon the proposed road at once, a special meeting of the board was called for the same (Tuesday) evening, at which meeting a resolution was ananimously passed granting the payer of the petitioners. This prayer as published in the Chronicle of May 26th, asked for the locating of the tracks of the road through the following-named streets: Deer, Vaughan, Congress, Islington, Middle, Cass, High, Daniel, State, Pleasant and South streets to Sagamore road. The supervision in behalf of the city of the construction of the tracks and their distance from the sidewalk in the above-named streets, was placed by the board under the direction of Aldermen Seymour, Conlon, Urch and Ayers. This action on the part of the board settles the matter as far as the city is concerned, and we understand that the directors propose to commence work immediately, so that the cars will soon be running through our streets for the accommodation of all who desire to ride and have the wherewithal to pay for the same.

A MUCH-NEEDED ENTERPRISE.

Mr. Editor: It has been currently reported that a plan was under consideration for forming a Young Men's Christian Association in our city. Let us hope that the project may be soon realized. Who can estimate the possibilities for good which such an organization might have, the helpful influences that would surround the youth, where so many snares are spread for their destruction? Our Christian and benevolent people may find in this direction a field for the exercise of their best sympathies and efforts. There should be secured a place where young men may spend their evenings in a social manner, with ample provision for innocent recreation, with as much freedom allowed as possible consistent with proper management, and where they would have Christian counsel and instruction. Above all, the element of personal sympathy should control the affair and enter into the details. Possibly it may be said that the churches ought to supply these needs. Admitted that they ought, the fact remains that they do not, as managed in our city, meet the social wants of the people. Outside of a certain coterie scarcely any provision is made for social gatherings in any proper sense of the term. The festivals, as usually conducted, are designed simply to raise money, and from a social point of view are decidedly unsatisfactory; introductions are difficult to be obtained, and the patron comes away with a feeling of relief. Such was our experience, and we are inclined to think that this accounts in some degree for the small comparative attendance of young men at our city churches. We are pleased to note that Rev. Mr. Baketel commends the plan in his paper, the "Seaside Methodist." OBSERVER.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Miss Ethel Johnson Davis, of No. 1 South Mill street, celebrated the anniversary of her birthday on the 20th inst. by a lawn party consisting of enough young people to make a dozen, counting the hostess. A number of presents were received by the young lady, and a very handsome cake, made by Robeck, was cut, after four wax tapers which were part of its ornamentation, and symbolized the number of years achieved by Miss Davis, had been lighted by her, and allowed to burn until some of the visitors plainly expressed their opinion that it party, which was marked by its freedom from conventional restraint, broke up at an early hour. The only way we can work the "wee sma' hour" business in here is by saying that at that time, and long before, all the party were sound asleep.

LITTLE WANDERERS FIND A HOME.

On Monday forenoon of this week an immense swarm of bees, estimated at about half a bushel, came from some unknown quarter and settled upon a small tree on Mr. Pearson's premises on Broad street. Mr. Pearson, who for many years before engaging in business as a florist officiated as director of church choirs and other musical organizations, and hence regards an ordinary hornet's nest with an amused interest closely allied to contempt, looked around the corner of the greenhouses at this mammoth swarm of bees, and then like the good Samaritan passed by on the other side and as far away on the other side as he could possibly get. During Tuesday forenoon Mr. Robert H. Pickering of Newington came along, his milk route ending on Broad street, and proceeded to capture the mass of uncomfortable insects. Mr. Pickering has been all his life accustomed to handling bees, and probably knows that they can sting when they choose; at any rate, seeing that this huge swarm was in a very bad position to "hive," he took the sensible precaution to cover his face and neck with a veil in such a way that it was an inch or two from him at all points, protected his hands with heavy buckskin gloves, tied his coat sleeves and the bottoms of his trowsers' legs down with strings so that a bee the size of an ant couldn't find an entrance anywhere, and then went for the swarm; and at the end of several hours of hard work had the satisfaction of hiving the wanderers in good shape. Mr. Pickering says the swarm is by far the largest he ever saw, and offered $10 for it as soon as it was hived; but the offer was declined.

KEARSARGE VETERANS' REUNION.

The annual reunion of the survivors of the original crew of the U. S. S. Kearsarge, who participated in the battle which resulted in the sinking of the confederate cruiser Alabama on Sunday, June 19th, 1864, was held on Tuesday of this week, the 24th anniversary of the famous naval duel.

The reunion was held at Gloucester, Mass., by invitation extended at the meeting the previous year by Councilman John F. Bickford of that city, one of the crew at the time of the fight, and now a prosperous fish merchant in Gloucester. Owing to the non-connection of trains, it was about half-past twelve o'clock before the party arrived at the Gloucester station, when they were piloted to the rooms of Col. Allen Post, G. A. R., where light refreshments were served during the time of waiting for a special horse car engaged by Shipmate Bickford to convey the party to his pleasant home on Rocky Neck, facing the outer harbor, where an excellent dinner was sat down to by the following-named veterans:

Charles A. Poole, Waltham; L. T. Crowley, Charlestown; Andrew G. Rowley, John F. Bickford, Gloucester; J. T. Stackpole, Hyde Park; Wm. B. Poole, Jos. O. Stone, Lynn; P. McKeever, Malden; Wm. Wainwright, Lawrence; Austin Quimby, Salem; J. C. Woodbury, Beverly; Wm. H. Badlam, Dorchester; Joel L. Sanborn, South Boston; George W. Remick, Newburyport; A. Littlefield, Dover; Lyman P. Spinney, Kittery; Martin Hoyt, True W. Priest, John W. Young, Portsmouth. I. P. Miller, Portsmouth, honorary member.

The viands were disposed of after the usual custom of hungry seamen, and then for an hour pipes and cigars, jokes and reminiscences made the time pass quickly. Then a photographer took the party in a group, and following this a business meeting was held. A shipmate enquired of Martin Hoyt, secretary and treasurer of the association since its inception, how the money in the treasury was holding out. The treasurer replied that there was plenty left yet, and he was prepared with a detailed account of all expenditures when the association would listen to it. A unanimous if not exactly formal vote was instantly passed to the effect that no detailed account was desired or would be listened to; all that was wanted was to know that there was a shot in the locker yet. The death of a worthy and respected member of the association was announced, and the following preamble and resolutions passed:

Whereas, Since our reunion one year ago to-day one who then met with us has embarked on that broad sea known to us only by faith, therefore

Resolved, That we, survivors of the Kearsarge crew, assembled to-day to give each other once again a kindly greeting, are saddened by the thought that he will attend our gatherings no more.

Resolved, That in the death of John E. Brady of New Bedford, one who was a brave and patriotic defender of his country, a good and faithful seaman, and a cheerful and pleasant shipmate, has passed from among us.

Resolved, That the secretary be requested to express to the family and friends of our deceased shipmate our sorrow at his loss, and our sympathy with them in their bereavement.

The question of the place of meeting next year being brought up, a Massachusetts member remarked that the eastern men had for three years in succession come to Massachusetts, and he moved that on Wednesday, June 19th, 1889, the association meet in Portsmouth, at as early an hour as train accommodations would permit; and this vote was unanimously passed.

The necessity of catching trains to reach home caused the party to leave Shipmate Bickford's hospitable home other visit to Grand Army hall, where a short time was passed in leave-takings, the veterans separated for another year.

The occasion was one of the pleasantest in the experience of the association, and not the least pleasant of its features was the evident desire of the ladies of Shipmate Bickford's family to make the visit of his guests as agreeable as possible, and their successful efforts to secure this result. The ancient mariners, in the vote of thanks they passed for the day's entertainment, recognized this by putting Shipmate Bickford's name after their mention of the ladies.

COME DOWN, PLEASE.

The price of beef has gone up; for all kinds of fresh beef, about two cents a pound; and for corned beef, about one cent a pound, on the average. Sirloin steak, which before was so high that a step-ladder and boathook were needed to reach it, is now so high that a telescope is required to observe its altitude. The reasons for the advance are said to be the ending of the freight-rate war among the western railroads, and the warm weather in the east, necessitating much more care and the use of more ice in its preservation. Let the railroads commence another war immediately.

PERSONAL.

It is announced that Mrs. John J. Pickering, who has been ill in Paris for some months, will sail for home on Saturday.

Hon. Frank Jones and Col. Charles A. Sinclair and family are in Colebrook, where they intend making a lengthened stay.

Mrs. Fendall and Miss Marion Fendall returned home from Annapolis, Md., on Tuesday of this week.

Miss Lizzie Eastman of Washington, D. C., is visiting in this city.

Prof. Charles A. Davis, of Alma college at Alma, Mich., and wife, are visiting at Mr. Lewis G. Davis', corner of Highland and Broad streets.

Miss Florence Laighton, daughter of Mr. Charles M. Laighton, arrived home on Tuesday of this week from a boarding school in New Jersey.

Mrs. George B. French and daughter are passing a week in Boston; they have taken a cottage at Newcastle for the summer.

MARITIME NOTES

The soldiers' monument, which was brought here on Tuesday of this week by the schooner Edith T. Gandy, was on Wednesday unloaded from the schooner upon the navy yard anchor hoy, so that the schooner could proceed on her way to a Maine port with a cargo of coal.

The steamer Harrisburg, while leaving the Concord railroad wharf on the afternoon of the 19th inst., carried away the jibboom and part of the fore rigging of the schooner Seth W. Smith.

Beginning on Monday, June 25th, the trains of the Boston & Maine railroad, both divisions, of the Maine Central and of the Portland and Ogdensburg roads will hereafter run to and from the new union station in Portland.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly. Do not be induced to buy other preparations, but be sure to get the Peculiar Medicine,

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS. The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture of these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.
Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogues free.
PIANOS. Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos, that they are superior to all GRAND & UPRIGHT pianos. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN PIANO STRINGER," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.
A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and owners, sent, together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant.
Pianos and Organs sold for cash or easy payments; also rented. my10

GLYCEROLE!
A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

"IT WAS INHERITED."
The Fearful Effect of Heredity Upon the Lives of Men and Women—A Striking Case.

"The man or woman does not live who is free from hereditary influences." This remark was made by the celebrated Dr. Vanderville, of New York, to the Rev. Dr. Brooks, at a recent convention of scientists. "I agree with you, doctor," said the divine.

"Pass a block," continued the doctor, "is the great cause of healthy impaired blood the source of most diseases. It may even go back to the grand or great grand parents."

"I have in mind a prominent man," said the reverend gentleman, "General Alfred C. Monroe, of No. 1 Pemberton Square, Boston. He inherited kidney troubles from both parents, one of whom died with it. He suffered terribly from pains in the back and head, and at times when walking the dizziness became so bad that he was compelled to lay hold of some convenient post for support. He was in a most desparate condition."

"And is he so still" asked the doctor.

"No, he is in perfect health. Dr. McGregor, I believe of Maine, who had amputated an arm for the general, cured him."

"Do you know what medicine he used?"

"I understand it was Hunt's Remedy."

"Oh, Hunt's Remedy. I know it very well," said Dr. Vanderville. "I consider it the best remedy for kidney, liver, heart troubles, and female difficulties in the world. It is in no sense a patent medicine, but a standard remedy, which deserves to be used by all intelligent people. The fact is, no blood-taint can exist when the kidneys are in perfect order, and there is where Hunt's Remedy shows its marvelous superiority."

"I only wish," said Rev. Dr. Brooks, "that all people who inherit a tendency to disease could know of this remedy of which you speak so highly and use it. I am positive it would greatly lessen suffering and death."

A DISTRESSING COUGH.

How many, especially during the Fall and Winter months, are troubled with a Cough, sometimes dry and hacking, sometimes loose causing the sufferer to raise a large amount of offensive matter; this can soon be cured by using Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs.

Cured her Cough.

Mrs. JEREMIAH CLARK, Lowell, Mass., says: "Twelve years ago I first took a bottle of your Throat and Lung Specific. I had been troubled with a very bad Cough for months. A 50-cent bottle cured my Cough. Since then I have not been without it. I can heartily recommend it to any one who has a bad cough."

Saved his Life.

CHAS. A. WAITT, says: "No language can express the value I attach to your Specific. I believe it saved my life."

We would cite other testimonials did we think it necessary, but a trial bottle will convince you that it is all we represent. Give it a trial.

Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific is sold by all Druggists. Price 50 cents and $1. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

Growth of American Railways.

The evolution of the railway and of its rolling stock follows the same laws which govern the rest of the world: adaptation to circumstances decides what is fittest, and that alone survives. The scrap heap of a great railway tells its own story.

Our railways have now reached a development which is wonderful. The railways of the United States, if placed continuously, would reach more than half way to the moon. Their bridges alone would reach from New York to Liverpool. Notwithstanding the number of accidents that we read of in the daily papers, statistics show that less persons are killed annually on railways than are killed by falling out of windows.—Thomas Curtis Clarke in Scribner's.

A Hearty Laugh.

There is no "digestion will help digestion like a hearty laugh. But how can a billious man laugh? What warmth is there in a dyspeptic's smile? And how can a man be mirthful when his liver is out of order? We recommend all such persons to use Ingalls' Mandrake Compound. It acts directly on the liver and stomach, stimulating the one and strengthening the other. A single bottle will convince one of its efficacy.

Predictions are made that trouble will soon break out between the Plymouth county, Mass., district of Knights of Labor, and the Brockton assemblies of the shoemakers' national assembly.

Everybody Likes

To be called handsome, especially the young ladies. But that is simply impossible as long as their faces are covered with pimples, blotches and sores. But wait, there is no need of this; one or two bottles of Sulphur Bitters will remove all such disfigurations, and make your face fair and rosy.—Fannie Bell, Editress.

The girls who do housework in Lewiston and Auburn, Me., propose to form a Union and to hold a county convention to consider the wages question, to ask for better pay and better treatment.

From Mrs. I. N. Gamison, 5 Maverick St., E. Boston, Mass.:

F. W. Kinsman & Co.—Gents: I would say to my friends, and all who chance to read this, that I have used Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam in my family for a long time, and consider it a very valuable medicine. It cures when all other remedies fail, and I would cheerfully recommend it to those afflicted with coughs, colds, asthma, etc. I have just made a purchase of two large bottles to send to a friend in Central City, Col.

The flags of the shipping in the harbor of Ellsworth, Me., were displayed at halfmast on Saturday, June 2d, as a mark of respect to the memory of Mrs. Mary A. Jordan, one of the largest shipowners in the place.

Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry cured my little girl of a severe attack of whooping cough, when her life was given over by the physician and all other remedies had failed. Josiah Hoff, Keyport, N. J.

Gen. Sheridan continues to improve in muscular health and mental energy.

The meed of merit for promoting personal comeliness is due to J. C. Ayer & Co., whose Hair Vigor is a universal beautifier of the hair. Harmless, effective and agreeable, it ranks among the indispensable toilet articles.

Removing Hair by Electricity.

"Removing hair by the new process is very simple. I take this needle," and here the operator produced a queer little tool that resembled a cobbler's awl, with a long narrow handle of black vulcanite and a tiny blade of polished metal, "and pass a current through it. It becomes white hot, but it is so small that the amount of heat it creates cannot be felt except where the point touches. You insert the needle in the sac out of which the hair grows down to the bottom, turn the current on, let the needle stay less than the fraction of a second and then take it out. The heat and current together have destroyed the cells which make the substance of the hair and have also changed their character, because not only does the hair come out, but no new hair ever grows from that sac.

"After destroying as many hairs as the patient has enough strength to endure, we wash the part of the face, arm, neck, breast or back with a cooling lotion, and the operation is over for the day. After one, two or three days' rest they come back for a second treatment, and so keep on till all the objectionable hair is removed. Some women are nervous and can't stand more than ten hairs at an operation; others are braver than men, and will sit there and suffer uncomplainingly as long as you'll let them."—New York Cor. Buffalo News.

OH! MY HEAD.
The pain from Neuralgia and its companion disease Rheumatism is excruciating. Thousands who could be quickly cured are needlessly suffering. Athlophoros will do for others what it did for the following parties:

Williamsport, Ind., Oct. 8, 1887.
Having been afflicted with neuralgia for the past four years, and trying almost everything, but in vain, I finally heard of Athlophoros. After taking one bottle I found it to be helping me, and, after taking four bottles of Athlophoros and one of Pills, I found that I was entirely cured. I think the medicine is positively a sure cure.
CHAUNCEY B. REDDICK.

Mt. Carmel, Ill., Dec. 28, 1887.
I have used Athlophoros in my family and find it to be the greatest medicine for neuralgia in existence, and having had its fangs fastened upon me for the past 3 years I know whereof I speak. MRS. JULIA CRAWFORD.

WHY WORK FOR ANOTHER, or on small salary? Why continue working on a worn-out farm? Why try to secure a living from such high-priced or heavily-mortgaged farms? Why work on rented land? Why not start for yourself? Why not secure at once some of the low-priced but very fertile and well located lands adjacent to railroads now to be obtained by those going to Northern Dakota and Minnesota, where you can make a larger net profit per acre than on the high-priced or worn-out farms you now occupy? Clinging to the Last.

The virus of rheumatism often remains in the system through life, when it does not cut the thread of existence suddenly, as it is always liable to do by attacking the heart. Ere the grip of this tenacious disease tightens, it should be loosened by that beneficent liberator from disease, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which will free the sufferer at the outset from subsequent pain and danger. No purer or more agreeable blood depurent exists, as multitudes of the rheumatic and neuralgic have ascertained by certified experience. It is through the medium of a regular action of the kidneys and bladder that an outlet is afforded for the escape of impurities which beget not only rheumatic, but gouty ailments, and dropsical effusions. To these organs the Bitters gives an impulse, never verging on the bounds of irritation, but sufficiently vigorous to cause them and the bowels to perform their functions with clock-like precision. Use it also for dyspepsia, biliousness, fever and ague and debility.

The Phrenological Journal says, "In choosing a wife, be governed by her chin." A man is apt to be governed by the same thing after he gets a wife.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. We know of no remedy for dyspepsia more successful than Hood's Sarsaparilla. It acts gently, yet surely and efficiently, tones the stomach and other organs, removes the faint feeling, creates a good appetite, cures headach, and refreshes the burdened mind. Give Hood's Sarsaparilla a fair trial. It will do you good.

The Labor Leader has raised the standard of eight hours to be put in force May 15th, 1889.

Don't Despair.

If you are weak and weary from some so-called chronic disease, don't give up. Sulphur Bitters have given hope to many invalids, where hitherto there was nothing but despair. It will build up and renew your whole system. — Editor Weekly American.

Charles H. Tupper, the new Canadian minister of marine and fisheries, was elected to parliament by acclamation, for Pictou, Nova Scotia.

For chronic catarrh, induced by a scrofulous taint, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the true remedy. It stoops catarrhal discharges, removes the sickening odor, and never fails to thoroughly eradicate every trace of the disease from the blood. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

The new Unitarian church at Milford, was dedicated June 19th.

We take much pleasure in recommending the use of Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer as safe and reliable for estoring gray hair to its natural color.

Many persons have been drowned by the rising of the river Leon in Mexico.

I have had catarrh for twenty years, and used all kinds of remedies without relief. Mr. Smith, druggist, of Little Falls, recommended Ely's Cream Balm. The effect of the first application was magical, it allayed the inflammation and the next morning my head was as clear as a bell. One bottle has done so much good that I am convinced its use will effect a permanent cure. It is soothing, pleasant and easy to apply, and I strongly urge its use to all sufferers.—George Terry, Little Falls, N. Y.

Apply Balm into each nostril.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 50c. and $1. Trial size free. At all Druggists.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. A FAIR IN ENGLAND.

Leading Features of an Old Custom Which Is Becoming Obsolete.

The annual or semi-annual fair still held in many towns in England is an old custom which is becoming obsolete. Its only practical usefulness would seem to be the market portion of it held in the morning, in the case of one day fairs, when cattle, sheep, etc., are sold and farmers exchange views and greetings. Some larger fairs extend over three or four days, the last being sometimes called "pack and penny day." The marketing business over, the remainder of the day is spent in visiting the shows (with exaggerated exterior), shooting galleries, fancy stalls, etc., where the country rustics especially, who have for some time dwelt in pleasant anticipation of the sights coming to town, can meet old friends and enjoy the sweetmeats and wonders in store for them.

The owners of the different objects of amusement appear to be something of the gypsy kind and move about with their belongings from place to place, paying a certain "royalty" for standing room, the showmen being placed away from the main streets to prevent their noisy clamor from frightening horses. The cracking of rifles and smaller weapons, noisy rivalry of the showmen, music of the merry go rounds, make up one unceasing "pandemonium." Here one may be invited to try his skill with a small gun which fires a dart propelled only by a percussion cap, with the assurance that it is "the very gun that killed Bonaparte;" up and comments to emigrate in dead earnest; in which it took a good "bear team" to stop him, and Pete was a team by himself. I have known him to seize a bear by the ham and hang his hold, with legs stiffly braced, until he was dragged more than 100 yards at a stretch. He had a very creditable score on bear scalps, as I subsequently learned, though we only got after three bear while he was with me, two of which got away. These two were wary old pig thieves who knew all about dogs and would sooner die than be treed. In each case they wore the dog out and left him on the trail in a half day's run, while the hunter, with his best efforts, could not get near enough for a shot.—Forest and Stream.

An Amateur Champion on Walking.

The fundamental principle of fair walking is that one foot must be on the ground all the time; this is imperative, as can be easily demonstrated by trial. A violation of this rule must result in a run; another idea on which judges should lay great stress is that the knees must not be bent when the feet strike the ground and remain rigid until after they leave it. This is absolutely necessary in fast walking, although a man can walk fairly with his knees bent if he tries to, but nothing can be more awkward or unnatural. This rule necessitates a third, which is that the heel of the forward foot strikes the ground simultaneously as the toe of the rear foot leaves it. This gives rise to the popular expression, "heel and toe walking." Any one who observes the three foregoing rules will walk fairly.

Now, to attain the speed which is to bring fame to the candidate for pedestrian honors, he will have to acquire the "hip motion." It is a well known axiom that "a straight line is the shortest distance between two points," and therefore quite patent that if the feet strike the ground exactly in a straight line the greatest possible distance will be covered.

This is accomplished in walking by crossing the feet in front of each other, which brings the weight of the body alternately on each hip, producing the "hip motion." This should be exaggerated at first until the principle is thoroughly familiar, and should then be modified to suit the style of the individual.—F. A. Ware in New York Mail and Express.

The Beginning of Steel Pens.

The earliest notice of steel pens that I have met with is by Wordsworth. In 1806 he and his family were occupying the house at Colecorten during the absence of Sir George and Lady Beaumont, and in the month of December the poet wrote to the latter what he calls "the longest letter I ever wrote in my life," and with reason, as it fills eighteen pages. He begins, "My Dear Lady Beaumont: There penmanship for you! I shall not be able to keep it up to the end in this style, notwithstanding I have the advantage of writing with one of your steel pens, with which Miss Hutchinson has just furnished me."

The next mention that I have noted is by Dr. Kitchiner in 1824, when speaking of a friend above 60 he says: "This strain of the eye and occasion for spectacles of a high magnifying power is particularly found in mending pens, so that he has a sufficient number of pens to prevent the necessity of mending any of them until he has finished writing." To this there is appended a note: "To those who find the mending of pens rather a difficult job I recommend the occasional use of a steel pen, especially when they wish to write very small and neatly." The steel pen seems to have been still a rarity at that time, and my own schoolboy experience tends to show that it was. From about 1824 to 1834 I do not remember the use of steel pens in school, and in the earlier years 1825 to 1830 I have a distinct recollection of our using quills.—Notes and Queries.

Life Amid Beautiful Surroundings.

No one who enters the homes throughout the country can fail to notice what rapid strides have been made in beautifying them. It is not a question of a great expenditure of money, as a small amount will buy a quantity of material, and, as a matter of course, much depends on the taste of the designer. There has been a marked progress in this, and also an improving one. Whoever lives amid beautiful surroundings cannot fail to be impressed by them, and such influence tends to uplift and elevate.—Woman.

Army of the Emancipated.

Within the life of a woman who is not yet 30 years of age there have been set at liberty in this world 34,000,000 human beings. A vast army of emancipated mortals, set free in different lands — in Russia, 23,000,000; in Poland, 5,000,000. in the United States—through the great war and martyred Lincoln—4,000,000, and quite recently, nearly

The Dog and the Bear.

Before the hunt was over I had a chance to try him on bear, and he was the best bear dog of his size I have ever been out with. His hunting weight was about forty pounds, but at times he weighed five pounds less. When an able bodied bear has been thoroughly frightened and has made up his mind to leave the country rather than climb a tree, it takes a pretty smart dog to stop him until the hunter can catch up for a shot; but Pete would often do it. Not always, though. For the bear has a shrewd way of dragging his enemy through the worst possible tangles of brier and laurel brake or knocking him loose against fallen timber, rocks, etc. But his most effective ruse is to drag the dog into a tangle of undergrowth and then throw himself over with a sudden back flop, reaching out and striking savagely with his fore paws; or, to reverse the operation, he will suddenly drop his nose between his forelegs and change ends, which draws the dog over and within reach of his claws; and it is a wise and wary dog that escapes all these tricks. Whence it sometimes happens that Pete was left on the trail so utterly beaten and exhausted that he had to be helped into the camp. This, however, was rarely the case.

The bear, when suddenly attacked and sharply bitten, would usually take the nearest large tree he came to, where, with coolness and skill, he could be easily approached and shot. If only a slight wound were inflicted he was apt to come down with a heavy thump, gather himself up and commence to emigrate in dead earnest; in which it took a good "bear team" to stop him, and Pete was a team by himself. I have known him to seize a bear by the ham and hang his hold, with legs stiffly braced, until he was dragged more than 100 yards at a stretch. He had a very creditable score on bear scalps, as I subsequently learned, though we only got after three bear while he was with me, two of which got away. Carelessness in Handling Infants.

If there is one piece of folly that excites my impatience more than another it is the methods pursued by the average nurse girl—and perhaps some mothers also—of lifting the 3-year-old or 4-year-old infant in their charge into a street car or other vehicle, or out of the same. The said method, with slight variations, according to the temper of the person in charge, is something like this: The luckless youngster is standing on the street by the side of its keeper; a second or so passes while the car comes to a standstill; the infant then finds itself grasped firmly by the arm somewhere below the elbow, lifted bodily into the air, and lugged like a sack of beans or bundle of old clothes to the desired altitude.

On reaching its destination it is yanked downwards in the same ruthless fashion, the victim landing on its little feet with a crash, after sailing through the air much after the style of a toy balloon at the end of a twenty-foot string on a windy day. Time and again have my sympathies been racked by this strangely horrible spectacle. In witnessing it my strongest emotion is a desire to strangle the person who is responsible for it, and my next strongest one of astonishment that the "kid" should have become sufficiently inured to the torture to stand it without bawling.—Chicago Journal.

Leprosy in the Land.

A few years ago leprosy was considered one of the impossible diseases in this land. It was held to be a peculiar development of unsanitary conditions incident to long past ages. It was, to be sure, known that in Africa, and possibly among the Chinese, leprosy still lingered. But now it has fairly located itself in America, and is one more evil that may reach enormous proportions. Dr. Allen, in the New York Medical Journal, concludes: "(1) Leprosy has existed in this country to some extent for twenty years; (2) the tendency for the disease to increase, not only from immigration, but from sporadic cases; (3) it is a contagious disease, and may also be transmitted from parent to offspring; (4) transmission takes place in some cases by inoculation; (5) segregation has been proved to be the only sure means of freeing a country from its ravages; (6) it is the duty of the government to establish leprosy hospitals or isolated settlements for the treatment of the afflicted."—Globe-Democrat.

A Silk Walk in Shanghai.

In one part of the walks the path, as so often in China, has been encroached upon, not for a rope walk, but a silk walk. A boy with two small shuttles seizes hold of the light weight attached at one end of the silken cord, and with a few dexterous turns sets the whole cord, composed of several fibres, spinning. Then the next, then the next, and so on till five silken threads are being spun by hand without the aid of machinery. At the other end there are weights hanging to keep them taut. But the other end is a long way off; and as we walk along it is hard to avoid brushing against the prettily colored silken threads. Here is a man winding them into skeins. He enters into conversation. It seems the soldiers make an honest penny by letting off some part of the walls for silk winding. They also let off the guard houses. St. James

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultual, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

Rockingham county, at the town hall, Exeter, Wednesday, Sept. 12th at 11:00 o'clock A. M.

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

The platform was reported on Thursday, and unanimously adopted. Its tariff plank is unequivocal, being square for protection to American industry. The states were then called for the nomination of candidates for president, but it was not expected a vote would be reached before Friday noon.

Men Change.

Hon. Allen G. Thurman, recently gummed on to the tail of the Cleveland procession in hope that his aid may suffice to push His Accidency once more into the White House, not long ago expressed decided hostility to the second term idea. On the 2d of September, 1882, in introducing Judge Trumbull to a democratic mass meeting in Columbus, Ohio, he said:

My friends, you will never have any genuine reform in the civil service until you adopt the one-term principle in relation to the presidency. As long as the incumbent can hope for a second term he will use the immense patronage of the government to secure his renomination and secure his re-election. The presidential office is no longer, in the estimation of many, a great "public trust," but is merely a personal privilege and a means of rewarding parasites and partisans and maintaining a party.

For the Whole Family.

A Treat for the Ladies and Girls and the Men and the Boys—Special to Firemen.

Boston, June 21.—Another astounding success was recorded by the Boston Sunday Globe last Sunday, and the circulation is still bounding upward.

Next Sunday's Globe will have a rich treat for every family in addition to the regular features and all the news. For the ladies and girls there will be a complete story by Edith Sessions Tupper, entitled "The Backsliding of Deacon Budge." A very entertaining, witty and instructive tale, which will interest all classes.

For the boys the next Sunday Globe will have a complete and thrilling story, by Horatio Alger, Jr., entitled "Charley Dean's Success." It is one every boy in New England should read.

For the men the Globe will have a very chaity and correct article on what sort of hats, collars, cuffs, neckties, etc., etc., men should wear.

Every fireman in New England will want the next Sunday Globe, because it will have illustrations of the fire apparatus used in the middle ages. File your orders to-day.

And, by the way, more than 5000 "Wants" are printed in the Boston Globe each week, making it the "Want" medium of New England. It pays to read the "Wants" in the Globe.

The assistant democrats, who call themselves the prohibition party, at their state "convention" arraigned the republican party for the non-enforcement of the prohibitory law because the executive branch of the government of the state is in the hands of the republicans. The democrats at the same time resolve that the enforcement of the nuisance act is unconstitutional and oppressive. Like good democrats, they are inclined to take two horns. No reference is made to the fact that in several counties the democratic party control the solicitor and sheriff and his posse. It is of no consequence what laws the republicans may enact, these men hold that the governor should travel around the state and start prosecutions for violations of the law against the sale of liquor. We sometimes think the democrats overdo this business of running prohibition annexes to their party. As the object however is to entice voters, perhaps they regard it as a fair thing in politics.

The following naval officers have been placed on the retired list: Lieutenant-Commander Socrates Hubbard, Paymaster C. D. Mansfield, Naval Constructor Thomas E. Webb, Passed Assistant Engineer J. C. Kafer, and Boatswain John A. Brisco. These retirements promote Naval Constructor Theodore D. Wilson from comander to captain; Lieutenant Joseph G. Eaton to lieutenant commander; Lieutenant William G. Cutler, junior grade, to senior grade; Ensign Frank M. Bostwiek to lieutenant, junior grade; Passed Assistant Paymaster J. W. Jordan to paymaster; Assistant Paymaster R. T. Mason Ball to passed assistant paymaster; Naval Constructor William L. Mintonye from lieutenant to commander Passed Assistant Paymaster Robert R. Leitch from lieutenant, junior grade, to senior grade; and Assistant Engineer Robert F. Reid from ensign to lieutenant, junior grade.

The national house on the 19th went into committee of the whole on the Sundry civil appropriation bill, and the time was spent debating the paragraphs relating to the congressional library building. A resolution was finally adopted, striking out the provision in the bill appropriating $500,000 for the continuation of the work on the building, and directing the senate and house committees on public grounds to invite plans for the library, the cost not to exceed three millions.

New Hampshire's first century of existence as a state of the American Union ended the 20th inst., and on the 21st the ratification by this state of the Constitution of the United States was celebrated in Concord by the New Hampshire Historical society. By the provisions of the Constitution, it was not to be binding until it had been ratified by nine states; New Hampshire made the ninth, June 21st, 1788, and on that day the United States became a nation.

Mr. Charles Dickens, the son of his father, was quite sorely disappointed because no one saw fit to waste time in interviewing him upon the presidential question. He hopes and predicts that Mr. Cleveland will be re-elected. As a genuine Englishman who favors free trade for English imports into the United States, Mr. Dickens of course is for Cleveland. So are his neighbors in England. The idea is quite English, of course.

"The Midnight Marriage," by Amanda M. Douglas. No. 1 of the "Manhattan Series" of popular American novel; spaper, 12mo. Price twenty-five cents. Published by A. L. Burt, 56 Beekman street, New York.

With good judgment a novel by Amanda M. Douglas has been chosen to inaugurate the "Manhattan Series." No writer is more popular with the general novel reader, and this first book, "The Midnight Marriage," has all the elements of her most successful stories which have placed her in the front rank of popular authors. It is intensely dramatic, and full of healthful excitement; its action is rapid, and its plot capitally mysterious. It is a book that will keep thousands of readers awake till the small hours of the morning with its stirring interest. "The Manhattan Series" certainly promises very well, and its encouragement solely of American authors deserves hearty support. It is for sale at Goodrich's.

Mrs. Josephine Marck, aged twenty-six years, of Allegheny City, Pa., poisoned her three children and herself on the 20th inst., because her husband drove from the house a boarder whom he suspected of criminal intimacy with the woman.

The four principal women's colleges in the United States are Wellesley, with 620 students; Vassar, with 283; Smith with 367 and Bryn-Mawr, with seventy-nine.

As an instance of the pay of men and women in the government department, it was shown not long ago that the men in the dead letter office receive on the average one dollar a day more than the women, and this notwithstanding the fact that the women do the most work.

THE PYRAMID OF CHEOPS.

Climbing to the Summit Where Forty Centuries Sit Enthroned.

We drove in the afternoon to the pyramids in a victoria, over a beautiful road shaded by a double line of fine trees. Old Cheops did not look the same. He looked small from this avenue of civilization. Years ago I waded to him through deep sands. The hot sun burned into my brain, and I wore a green veil to protect my eyes from the glare and the driving sands. Now green fields run nearly up to Gezeeah. Said and Ismail Pashas have left Egypt covered with debt, but they done much to improve the material of the land. As we drove up the two pyramids looked small to me, but before I reached the top of Cheops, though I had two stalwart Arabs to lift me up the rocky steeps, I reached the conclusion that they were mighty mountains of stone, and that over 310 pounds of solid flesh and 63 years were a heavy load to carry up to the summit where forty odd centuries sit enthroned. I looked in vain for two sets of initials coupled in brackets, which I cut in the cold stone thirty-six years ago. They are lost among masses of others. It is well. She is fat and nearly 60; I am fat and over 60. One flame burned out, another burning. She did not even wait to learn from me if I fulfilled my promise to grave our names upon the pyramid's highest stone. I wonder if in these thirty-six years she has ever thought of that promise made under the softest of skies, and which one of us thought could never be forgotten? What a boon it is to man that his heart is made of malleable material rather than of adamantine and brittle steel!

By the way, sensible men justly inveigh upon the habit of "vanity" in carving its name upon monuments and thereby defacing them. But there is some sense in cutting one's name upon imperishable rock which does not deface it. Some one may come afterward, and, seeing it, feel like meeting an old friend. My heart was warmed up here in Egypt when seeing the names of some old acquaintances now dead. I felt we were living over again a long dead past. I saw Jenny Lind's name upon the pyramid. Did she have it cut or did some of her lovers do it? I do not know. But for a moment there came from the west over the dead desert a trill of perfected harmony which I never heard but once and will never hear again until an angel solo shall come to my ear from the white robed ones hovering around the throne of the eternal. I can almost fancy that Bayard Taylor had the name cut. I have a vague recollection of his telling me of his cutting it somewhere. He almost worshiped the Swedish nightingale.

We watched the sun sink beneath the western sands on his tireless voyage around the world. We were glad our path did not carry us across those bleak sands. We have not abandoned our race with him, but we have much to see before we can gird our loins for the home-stretch. My old legs enabled me to descend Cheops' ribbed sides quite rapidly, so as to look upon the sphinx as the shades of evening should gather around it. I wished the boys to see it first when the broad glare of the day should not too much reveal its defacement.

We then loitered about until the full moon came up from the east. One should see this famous monument first by moonlight. Then there is one point from which it can be seen, when it is not all fancy and sentiment, which can pronounce it the calmest and most original monument of the world. We were fortunate in being here during the full moon. One visit at such time repays the long trip to Egypt. There is a quiet grandeur about the pyramids by moonlight which one cannot conceive who sees them only in the broad glare of sunlight. We walked around them so as to see them in deep shade, and then again in the silvery light. I think the boys will remember it as long as they live.—Carter Harrison in Chicago Times.

The Vampire Not a Myth.

The vampire bat, which at night sucks the blood of people who are asleep, has been said to be a myth. But the experience of Rev. Mr. Clough, a missionary in South America, is to the effect that the ugly creatures are a reality. He was in the Furo de Uraria district, north of the Amazon river. Some of his companions had been bitten at night, and found themselves bloody on waking in the morning. Mr. Clough stayed awake one moonlight night to watch for vampires. Two of them came and hovered over him, fanning him with their leathery wings. Having provided himself with a club and a net he caught one of them, which proved to be twenty-three inches across the wings. This specimen was sent to the South American Missionary society of London, and is now in that society's museum.—New York Press.

The Biddeford Times says: "The report of the Biddeford liquor agent for the year ending January 31st, 1887, is published in the city report for that year, which is just out. It shows that during the time stated the agent received 'from the sale of liquors, bbls., jugs, bottles, etc.,' the sum of $11,750.99. It is not surprising, is it, that Dame & Co., from whom the greater part of this liquor was bought, should be willing to come down to the tune of $500 or so, to retain in power the party which established and maintains so good a customer as this Biddeford agency? The average daily sales of liquors at the place last year were about $40."

The officers of the National Fishery association and American Fishery union have passed resolutions commending the action of the United States senate on the fishery treaty.

Don't Wait

Until your hair becomes dry, thin, and gray before giving the attention needed to preserve its beauty and vitality. Keep on your toilet-table a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor—the only dressing you require for the hair—and use a little, daily, to preserve the natural color and prevent baldness.

Thomas Munday, Sharon Grove, Ky., writes: "Several months ago my hair commenced falling out, and in a few weeks my head was almost bald. Tried many remedies, but they did no good. I finally bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and, after using only a part of the contents, my head was covered with a heavy growth of hair. I recommend your preparation as the best hair-restorer in the world."

"My hair was faded and dry," writes Mabel C. Hardy, of Delavan, Ill.; "but after using a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor it became black and glossy."

OFFICIAL NOTICE!

— OF —

The Atkinson House Furnishing Co.

— FROM THE —

HEADQUARTERS AT PORTLAND, MAINE,

To those who are contemplating the purchase of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

GREETING:

On and after June 1st we shall STOP PREPAYING the FREIGHT on GOODS SOLD by us, and we respectfully request that those who have dealt with us, and who have been BENEFITED by the PAYMENT OF THIS FREIGHT which in itself in the past three years has amounted to some

30,000 DOLLARS,

Will order what GOODS they require for this SPRING, from us this month, and please order as early as possible. And to those who intend buying

Springs,
Feather Pillows,
Silver-ware,
Window Shades,
Drapery,
Dinner Sets,
Toilet Sets,
Spreads, Blankers,
Chamber Sets,
Parlor Suits,
Carpets,
Lounges,
Easy Chairs,
Mattresses,
Feathers,
Stoves and Ranges,

And anything else in HOUSE FURNISHING, can be BENEFITED to the extent of the freight to their depot, by buying from us this month. We have always PREPAID THIS FREIGHT FROM OUR OWN PROFITS, as we have invariably made the price on the

Furniture, Carpets,

Etc., lower than could be bought for elsewhere. There has always been a great advantage derived by our prepayment of the freight because we in every instance GUARANTEE the SAFE DELIVERY of the goods, and if there has ever been a fight to make with the railroad, we have done it, or in other words if you have received a

CHAMBER SET,

PARLOR SUIT,

Chair, or Range,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

That was damaged by the railroad, we have replaced it with another piece, and taken our chances to get the breakage from the road. There are items worthy of our close consideration, and especially at this time of year, be wise and order during this month,

And Save Yourself the Freight from Portland to your Depot, no matter where it is located in the State of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

We believe we are the only HOUSE FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT IN NEW ENGLAND WHO HAVE ADHERED STRICTLY TO THIS PLAN OF PREPAYING THE FREIGHT ON EVERYTHING SHIPPED BY US. We mean by this that while some other houses have shipped the goods, and allowed you to pay freight and afterwards send them a bill and then dicker on it for some time, We have invariably paid out the cash before the article left our freight sheds at Portland. And now notwithstanding the fact that we expect to lose a great deal of business by this this year there seems to be no other way to convince some people of the difference between OUR PAYING THE FREIGHT before the articles leave here, AND OUR CUSTOMERS PAYING THE FREIGHT after the articles get to the depot, and then having to write backwards and forwards over the matter. We wish to deal with perfect fairness and frankness in this matter, consequently we give you another month to make your selection, and to fill orders that are already placed. Now if you want a

KITCHEN RANGE, or a CHAMBER SET, or PARLOR SUIT, or CARPETS, WINDOW SHADES, DRAPERY CURTAINS,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

Kindly come and see us at once, or if you can not come, please write us for Catalogues and Descriptions of these Goods, and we will do our very best to please you in every one. Remember we carry COMPLETE HOUSE FURNISHINGS. There is scarcely a thing that you require for your homes that we do not keep, and we sell the same and shall continue to sell the same for cash, or a quarter cash, and the balance by the week or month. This notice applies TO ALL OUR STORES, and we have written to each of our MANAGERS to this effect, consequently there will be no more freight prepaid from our Bangor Store, Rockland Store, Auburn Store, Bar Harbor Store, Biddeford Store, nor from the Headquarters at Portland, after the 31st day of May, 1888.

Kindly get your orders in before June 1st, if you wish to save this freight.

Respectfully, the Public's Ob't Servants,

THE ATKINSON HOUSE FURNISHING CO.,

Headquarters Cor. Pearl and Middle Streets, Portland, and Branches at Auburn, Rockland, Bangor and Biddeford, also Bar Harbor for a short time.

ISAAC C. ATKINSON, Gen. Manager.

For New England to-day:—
Warmer, fair weather, followed by local rains, variable winds.

THE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT.

We shall publish in the Chronicle to-morrow (Saturday) an official list of the subscribers to the Monument fund, and a description of the monument, with other matter of special interest in the same connection. Persons desiring extra copies should give us early notice this morning, in order to insure getting what they wish.

GETTING READY.

A very handsome pole, standing fifty-one feet above the curbstone, was on Thursday erected on the opposite side of Congress street from the rooms of the Republican club, in readiness for the prompt displaying of a campaign flag as soon as the names of the nominees of the Chicago convention should be received. A short pole on top of the building in which the club room is situated, gives the necessary elevation to the halliards block on that side. The tall staff, which is as handsome a stick as we ever saw used for such a purpose, was placed on end by a gang of men under direction of Mr. Pinkham, formerly foreman of riggers at the navy yard, and Mr. Mark H. Fernald of this city.

REPUBLICAN CLUB.

At a well attended meeting of the Republican club, held Thursday evening, Charles E. Batchelder, Esq., declined the election as president, on account of ill health and intended absence from the city. William H. Moore was chosen to fill the vacancy and took the chair.

THE SAVINGS BANK REPORT.

We issue next week, as a supplement to the New Hampshire Gazette, the statements of all the savings banks in the state coming under the provisions of Chap. 34, Pamphlet Laws of 1887, giving the amount of deposits on hand on the 1st of April, 1888, which had not been added to or drawn from for twenty years or more previous, with the depositors' names and places of residence, and the sum due each one. By far the longest list of all is that of the Portsmouth savings bank, whose total of such sums is $75,641.93. The largest sum down in the list is $2,485.37, due to Sylvester Dixon of Tilton. There are thirty-three depositors credited with $1000 or more each; four with over $2000 each; and upward of 225 have less than a dollar each to get, Catharine Kelley, Mary Elizabeth Adams and Rufus M. Adams having three cents each to take, and Sarah H. Pray ninety-nine cents. In the entire list of 500 or more names of depositors who have made no change in their bank account for twenty years, not one is credited with being entitled to exactly one dollar, while no less than twelve are credited with $1.89 each.

NOT MUCH ENTHUSIASM LEFT.

The Times of Thursday evening said:
There was very little enthusiasm shown at the erection of the republican flag pole on Congress street to-day.

That was about so. Neither was there much enthusiasm displayed that day over the discharging of coal at the Concord railroad wharf, or by the city men engaged in relaying sidewalks. The fact is, most of the enthusiasm there was on hand was expended in cheering when Hon. Frank Jones and Hon. Daniel Marcy raised their Cleveland flags, so that there was none left to use over the merely mechanical operation of setting up a pole.

THE CADETS.

It will be remembered that the company of Cadets recently formed is composed of the lads who assisted at the entertainment so successfully given in Franklin theatre for the benefit of local charities. They now ask their friends to assist them in procuring muskets, which will cost, complete, about $4.25 each. Money sent to First Serg't Herman Sides will be appreciated and acknowledged.

RIOT IN DOVER.

There was a lively fight in Dover on the 21st inst., between a large gang of Italians employed on the water works, and two bosses named Alphonso Smith and Thomas C. Collins. Smith was first attacked, and was struck with a pick handle, but escaped after slightly wounding two of the assailants, who then attacked Collins. The latter fired fourteen shots, but killed no one; he had an arm broken and was hurt internally, before getting away. Alexander Priestley, eight years old, standing in his father's yard, was hit by a stray bullet, and fatally hurt.

BASE BALL.

A game was played between the Northend club, Capt. Gray, and the Southend club Cap. Cox, on the afternoon of the 20th, and was won by the former, nineteen to eleven.

The Portsmouth club went to Dover on Thursday, and beat the Dover club, nine to one.

The Manchesters, of the New England League, play the Portsmouths at the South end grounds this afternoon; game called at 3:30 o'clock. A first-class game of ball may be expected.

PERSONAL.

Mr. S. R. Niles and wife and Mr. Edward G. Niles and wife, of Boston, are passing a few days with Mrs. Frank W. Miller and sisters at Lincoln Hill cottage, and are then going to the Shoals and beaches for a short stay.

Mr. Andrew Walden, a gallant soldier in Capt. George W. Towle's company during the war of the rebellion, and now an inmate of the Soldiers' Home at Togus, Me., is visiting relatives in this city.

Mrs. Marston of Brockton, Mass., is visiting her neice, Mrs. H. Fisher Eldredge of Merrimac street.

Mr. Willis G. Myers and family are at Harwichport, Mass., for several weeks.

Mrs. Edward Moses of Court street will leave to-day for New York, for a stay of several months.

Mrs. J. G. Knights and Mrs. V. K. Jones of Lynn, Mass., are visiting friends in Northwest street, in this city.

Horace E. Scudder, the author of Boston Town, the Bodley books, etc., will as usual spend the summer on the North Hampton shore.

Charles Bradbury, his wife and wife's mother, of Boston, are at S. L. Chesley's, Rye beach, for the summer, having driven down from Boston in their own team.

The family of Hon. James W. Locke, United States district judge for the southern district of Florida, have arrived in Kittery from Key West, and are stopping with Mr. John Neal, Mrs. Locke's father.

Hon. H. O. Houghton of Cambridge has taken the Fowler cottage at Little Boar's Head for the season. Mr. Merrill of Exeter occupies the cottage of Mrs. S. E. White Hills. The Peppers of Philadelphia have taken Mr. John Bachelder's cottage, occupied for many years by Hon. Geo. M. Robeson. The cottage purchased a few years ago by the late N. G. White, is rented for the season to a family from the west. The Salter cottage, and Mrs. Philbrick's cottage adjoining, are to be occupied by new tenants this season. Several families have arrived at Albert Bachelder's at Little Boar's Head; all the rooms in Mr. Bachelder's new annex are rented for the season. Mrs. Frank W. Hackett, from Washington, is at Sawyer's for the season.

MARITIME NOTES

The schooner Frances Ellen arrived at this port on the 20th inst., from Boston, light, and on the 21st hauled to the head of the dock at Union wharf, to have her bottom examined at low water. It is rumored that she was towed into Salem, Mass., waterlogged, on a recent trip from a Maine port to Boston with lumber, but no notice of the matter has ever appeared in the marine reports.

The schooner Mary Langdon, K. C. Emery master, arrived at York on the 17th inst., from Hoboken, N. J., with a cargo of coal for F. Varrell.

The fishing vessel Charles Levi Woodbury, owned by R. I. Cunningham of Gloucester and modelled by J. J. Merritt, Jr., was launched at Essex, Mass., June 19th. She is a beautiful craft, about the size of the "Burgess fisherman" Carrie J. Phillips, and is expected to be a dangerous rival to that vessel in a race. Her name is a deserved compliment to one of the sturdiest defenders of the rights of American fishermen from the encroachments of Canadian officials and the pusillanimous concessions of the Cleveland administration.

During a great gale on the coast of Iceland last month, thirty French fishing vessels were wrecked, and 400 lives lost.

It was reported on Thursday that the horse railroad company would commence laying rails in Deer street, near the railroad station, Monday morning.

Two Gypsey teams from the camp at Sagamore drove into the city on Thursday forenoon, and had with them for sale about as fat a mare as ever was seen in these parts. The animal was black as a coal, shined as though just polished with Trumbull's blacking, had a luxuriant mane and tail and a bright, intelligent eye, was gentle as a sheep, having evidently been a pet, and attracted a great deal of attention. She was about as nearly square as any horse ever seen on the Parade, and "horse men" said they could see no defects about her. The Gypseys valued her at $300.

Captain Marcy, Captain Marcy, what in the world are you doing? Here are you, a democrat of the old school, flying a handsome flag bearing the portrait and the name of Grover Cleveland, who isn't a democrat at all, and you don't say a word about Thurman and his red bandana! "What kind of conduck are those?"

The engine Major Rice, which started from Boston with the three o'clock train Thursday afternoon, broke down on one side at Hampton Falls; the machinery was disconnected on that side, and the engine drew the train the rest of the way to this city with one side only, arriving about an hour late.

One or two families who have sufficiently enjoyed (?) the fog and unpleasant seasons at Bar Harbor for a few years past, have returned to Rye beach this season, where more comfort and better air can be found, and as they say, decidedly better living.

The Portland Transcript remarks: "More poles are going up on our business streets, poles to the right of them, poles to the left of them, and soon we suppose there will be a row in the middle of the road, compelling teams and pedestrians to dodge about among them as though they were in a wood—and a dead one at that. There is little encouragement to put up buildings of architectual beauty if they are to be disfigured by these cooked sticks stuck up in front of them." Guess there is no help for it. Once the pole-planters get a foothold in in the street, they do pretty much as they please afterward. That is the experience of Portsmouth.

Sunday next is St. John's day—name-day of St. John's Parish, and the eighty-first anniversary of the laying of the corner-stone of the present church. The day will be duly kept as such by festival service, and historical sermon by the rector at St. John's at 10:30 A. M.

The Marshall house at York Harbor opened on Saturday, the 16th inst. Among the other improvements made to the interior of the house this spring has been the painting of the parlors in colors, the mixing of which was done by Mr. Frank L. Pryor, of Pryor & Matthews of this city.

In the Dover police court, June 20th, James Hughes of Dover and James Hughes of South Berwick were up for drunkenness. Both pleaded guilty. The imported James was sent to jail for not having $7.72 to pay his fine and costs, but the home product was allowed to depart on signing the pledge for a year.

Sally Pratt McLean, the author of "Cape Cod Folks," has taken up her abode in Washington territory with her husband.

The Arkansas W. C. T. U., at its recent state convention, took ground for the first time in favor of municipal suffrage for women.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly. Do not be induced to buy other preparations, but be sure to get the Peculiar Medicine,

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS.

$22 TO $900. The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture of these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.

Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogues free.

PIANOS.

Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos, that they are superior to all GRAND & UPRIGHT, others. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN PIANO STRUNGS," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.

A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and tuners, sent, together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant.

Pianos and Organs sold for cash or easy payments; also rented.

GLYCEROLE!
A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

"IT WAS INHERITED."

The Fearful Effect of Heredity Upon the Lives of Men and Women—A Striking Case.

"The man or woman does not live who is free from hereditary influences." This remark was made by the celebrated Dr. Vanderville, of New York, to the Rev. Dr. Brooks, at a recent convention of scientists. "I agree with you, doctor," said the divine.

"Pure blood," continued the doctor, "is the great cause of health; impaired blood the source of most diseases. It may even go back to the grand or great grand parents."

"I have in mind a prominent man," said the reverend gentleman, "General Alfred O. Monroe, of No. 1 Pemberton Square, Boston. He inherited kidney troubles from both parents, one of whom died with it. He suffered terribly from pains in the back and head, and at times when walking the dizziness became so bad that he was compelled to lay hold of some convenient post for support. He was in a most desperate condition."

"And is he so still?" asked the doctor.

"No, he is in perfect health. Dr. McGregor, I believe of Maine, who had amputated an arm for the general, cured him."

"Do you know what medicine he used?"

"I understand it was Hunt's Remedy."

"Oh, Hunt's Remedy. I know it very well," said Dr. Vanderville. "I consider it the best remedy for kidney, liver, heart troubles, and female difficulties in the world. It is in no sense a patent medicine, but a standard remedy, which deserves to be used by all intelligent people. The fact is, no blood-taint can exist when the kidneys are in perfect order, and there is where Hunt's Remedy shows its marvelous superiority."

"I only wish," said Rev. Dr. Brooks, "that all people who inherit a tendency to disease could know of this remedy of which you speak so highly and use it. I am positive it would greatly lessen suffering and death."

A DISTRESSING COUGH.

How many, especially during the Fall and Winter months, are troubled with a Cough, sometimes dry and hacking, sometimes loose causing the sufferer to raise a large amount of offensive matter; this can soon be cured by using Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs.

Cured her Cough.

MRS. JEREMIAH CLARK, Lowell, Mass., says: "Twelve years ago I first took a bottle of your Throat and Lung Specific. I had been troubled with a very bad Cough for months. A 50-cent bottle cured my Cough. Since then I have not been without it. I can heartily recommend it to any one who has a bad cough."

Saved his Life.

CHAS. A. WAITT, says: "No language can express the value I attach to your Specific. I believe it saved my life."

We would cite other testimonials did we think it necessary, but a trial bottle will convince you that it is all we represent. Give it a trial.

TO LEARN A LANGUAGE.

A New Method—The Child's Way is the Best Way.

The baby comes into the world without any language to talk with. Not a word can it say to its father or mother its beguiling nurse or admiring visitors. Yet with plenty of voice, "as nobody will deny," for any language under the sun, and an equal capacity for all. At this blessed period, which never comes again, in its natural life, it is all the same whether it begins to say, "I you it have given," as in French; or, "I have it you given," as in German; or, "I have given it to you," as in English.

In this regard it is fortunate that the baby does not bring with it into the world a language from the celestial sphere, whence all mothers think it came, to bewilder and confuse it in the acquisition of its terrestrial mother tongue. No obstacle of construction, sound of vowels, even the tune of the language.

So that in the matter of learning a foreign language it were evidently better that we had no mother tongue at all—that, at least, we could, pro tem., utterly forget it, and be practically children again.

The older methods of learning a foreign language are afflictively known to all of us. It was dug out of a dictionary and framed with a grammar. The outcome of all this laborious work was at best to read a language; but for every day practical purposes, and to converse in it, so as to be at all intelligible to a native ear, was a failure.

And, after all, we never poke a dictionary and grammar at young children to learn their mother tongue. Why should we do so with children of a larger growth in learning a new language? Nature's method is to learn to talk first, and then confirm and complete, intellectually, what we already know practically.

Even this latter, albeit, was resented by the boy, who, after being prodded and punished through the English grammar, was disgusted to find that all he had suffered was to teach him what he knew before—how to talk.

The fundamental principle of this method is to learn a language out of itself—just as a child learns its mother tongue. Therefore, the instruction given is entirely in the language studied. The vernacular is ignored. Every other language is ignored, but just as much so as though there were no other language in the world.

You enter a class room, or a small room for private instruction, and you are at once in France, in Germany, or wherever, and there stands a foreign gentleman who neither speaks nor understands anything but the language of his country. Every child, man and woman is practically back in the nursery again without a language to talk with.

Now, the first nursery lore, if any of us can think back so far, was learning the names of material objects immediately around us. These were our playthings, our edibles, a table, a chair, the carpet, the floor, the wall, or whatever. The names of these things we learned as they were given us, or touched, or our attention drawn to them. Our child wants stimulated us to know the names of things we wanted.

Meantime, people all around us were talking, and the ear, though perhaps not seemingly so, was ever listening. Some words, perhaps, we understood, and the meaning of others we learned by context. Expressions and phrases were caught, and though not understood fully, parrot-like repeated. Gradually the language opened to us. We were learning it by hearing it spoken, like a tune.

In imitation of this, the first instruction given is object teaching. To facilitate this, the teacher is provided with a text book, carefully thought out, containing a vocabulary of words most needed in conversation—which is the first thing aimed at.

But meantime the teacher goes on talking, his articulation being very slow and accentuated, each word and each syllable of a word clean cut and distinct. Similarly as with the child, some words are understood, some learned by context, expressions and phrases caught by ear and the vocal inflexion, or tune to which they are set, equally caught—this last an important requisite in speaking intelligibly to native ears.

The maturer mind of a more advanced period, however, offers a certain advantage over the capacity of childhood, and even with these first lessons the rudiments of grammar are casually introduced, as occasion comes up for them; and these occasions are sought in the skillfully framed text book or the conversation of the teacher. Something is learned of construction and inflexional endings.

By this method of teaching, condensed and abbreviated, both as to elemental knowledge and time, it will readily be seen that the progress is vastly more rapid than that of the child who learns in a desultory way, and with whom considerable time is necessary; and by the end of the first term the student has a command of the language sufficient for shopping and traveling purposes.

A second term succeeds, in which the vocabulary is enlarged by further conversations, anecdotes, correspondence, literary selections, etc. As to the conversations, they are not all questions and an immediate answer. But an answer is given to which the pupil must frame the question, and a question to which he must form the answer. Many pupils, otherwise taught, may be able to answer a question in a foreign tongue, but are puzzled to ask one.

The third and last term introduces the pupil to the higher walks of literature and, conversationally, to the phraseology and finish of an educated person.—Detroit Free Press.

Music by Electricity.

Accounts reach of us of an invention now being exhibited in Liverpool, by means of which an Italian named Carlo Bozza cannot only give—without other aid than electricity—performances upon a variety of musical instruments at the same time, but can also reproduce the music at any distance. Signor Bozza has also invented a new musical instrument, playable only by electricity. It is made of porcelain, and from it he is said to produce music, unique in sweetness and penetration.—Electrical Review.

Luxuriating in the Shade.

City Versus Country Lads.

Gen. W. T. Sherman is quoted by a western newspaper as saying the late war demonstrated that city boys could stand more fatigue and hardship and marching than country boys could. The irregularity of army life weakened the farmer lads, who were uniformly used to regular

Not So Much Food Needed

As a matter of fact, the quantity of flesh forming food required for the bodily wants is small, beyond all the ordinary prevailing conception on the subject. Most people would wonder if they could see the enormous amount of work an Indian can do on a mere handful of rice and a few dates. But their wonder would be increased if in the physiological laboratory they were shown and made to understand three facts. 1. The exceedingly small amount of flesh forming matter that is called for to make up the waste of the muscular organs. 2. The enormous amount of wasted material which is thrown off or laid by without ever having been applied to any useful purpose in the body. 3. The tremendous measure of living energy that has been expended in throwing off from the body substances which ought never to have been put into it.

In very plain words, yet very true, whenever we add dead flesh to living, beyond the bare necessity, we are imposing a tax on our own active existence.—Benjamin Ward Richardson in Longman's.

A Hearty Laugh.

There is nothing that will help digestion like a hearty laugh. But how can a billious man laugh? What warmth is there in a dyspeptic's smile? And how can a man be mirthful when his liver is out of order? We recommend all such persons to use Ingalls' Mandrake Compound. It acts directly on the liver and stomach, stimulating the one and strengthening the other. A single bottle will convince one of its efficacy.

Three hundred children died in New York last week, and considering the heat and dirt of that vainglorious metropolis, many of them were lucky little creatures to leave for a better world.

Everybody Likes

To be called handsome, especially the young ladies. But that is simply impossible as long as their faces are covered with pimples, blotches and sores. But wait, there is no need of this; one or two bottles of Sulphur Bitters will remove all such disfigurations, and make your face fair and rosy.—Fannie Bell, Editress.

OH! MY HEAD.

The pain from Neuralgia and its companion disease Rheumatism is excruciating. Thousands who could be quickly cured are needlessly suffering. Athlo-pho-ros will do for others what it did for the following parties:

Williamsport, Ind., Oct. 3, 1887.

Having been afflicted with neuralgia for the past four years, and trying almost everything, but in vain, I finally heard of Athlophoros. After taking one bottle I found it to be helping me, and after taking four bottles of Athlophoros and one of Pills, I found that I was entirely well. I think the medicine is positively a sure cure.

Clinging to the Last.

The virus of rheumatism often remains in the system through life, when it does not cut the thread of existence suddenly, as it is always liable to do by attacking the heart. Ere the grip of this tenacious disease tightens, it should be lessened by that beneficent liberator from disease, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which will free the sufferer at the outset from subsequent pain and danger. No purer or more agreeable blood depurent exists, as multitudes of the rheumatic and neuralgic have ascertained by certified experience. It is through the medium of a regular action of the kidneys and bladder that an outlet is afforded for the escape of impurities which beget not only rheumatic, but gouty ailments, and dropsical effusions. To these organs the Bitters gives an impulse, never verging on the bounds of irritation, but sufficiently vigorous to cause them and the bowels to perform their functions with clock-like precision. Use it also for dyspepsia, biliousness, fever and ague and debility.

It Won't Bake Bread.—In other words, Hood's Sarsaparilla will not do impossibilities. Its proprietors tell plainly what it has done, submit proofs from sources of unquestioned reliability, and ask you frankly if you are suffering from any disease or affection caused or promoted by impure blood or low state of the system, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. The experience of others is sufficient assurance that you will not be disappointed in the result.

I have had catarrh for twenty years, and used all kinds of remedies without relief. Mr. Smith, druggist, of Little Falls, recommended Ely's Cream Balm. The effect of the first application was magical, it allayed the inflammation and the next morning my head was as clear as a bell. One bottle has done so much good that I am convinced its use will effect a permanent cure. It is soothing, pleasant and easy to apply, and I strongly urge its use to all sufferers.—George Terry, Little Falls, N. Y.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Study of a Queer People.

The stories that are told of Cushing, who is now in New Mexico making a study of Zuni traditions, are quite romantic. I met last night a gentleman who has just returned from a visit to Cushing. He says: "You know when Cushing went down to New Mexico first he attempted to make a study of the Zunis, but found out that he could make no progress with them unless he himself turned an Indian. Cushing addressed himself to this task with his usual zeal, and after a short time the transmogrification was complete. He tells me that the Zunis have a hut in which they keep the scalps of their enemies, and so long as this hut has a certain number of scalps the Zunis say that the god of war is satisfied, and that he does not want war.

But unfortunately for the peace of the Zunis the hut, which was built on the banks of the river, was swept away by a sudden flood. The Zunis were desperate. There were no scalps, and the god of war demanded at least two to avert an outbreak. Cushing saw a chance to prevent this war. He telegraphed for two scalps, which he knew to be in Washington, and which arrived in due time. The Zunis were still in great agitation when the two scalps arrived. Cushing formally presented them to the chief priest, and the war was averted. When the chief priest and the other priests had recovered from their surprise they began to think that Cushing was a man who could accomplish any wonder. They looked upon him as a god, and, nothing being too good for him, they immediately admitted him into the priesthood, and he is now one of their head priests.

This securing of the scalps turned out more fortunate for Cushing than one would at first suppose. For it saved him from matrimony. So pleased were the Zunis with Cushing that they had determined to find for him a wife. A stout Zuni maiden was found for him, and Cushing was told to prepare for his marriage. Needless to say that Cushing did not relish this proposition, and he fought against the coming of the evil day. He would have surely been married had it not been for the opportune arrival of these scalps, and his being made a priest excluded him from marriage. Cushing has not as yet made public any of his researches, and it will probably be some time before he does. The money that has been given him for this important work has been subscribed by a very enthusiastic lady, who has set no limit upon his time. Cushing was lately on a visit to this city, and he said that he traced a relationship between the Chinese signs and the Zuni signs; and, in fact, he said that the only part of San Francisco which interested him was Chinatown, and he spent most of his time there.—San Francisco Post.

Success Lies in Specialism.

Let, therefore, the man who is bent upon entering the arena of mental combat think well what weapon he will choose before he arrives in the midst of the fray and it is too late to turn back. Having once chosen his arm, however, he should perfect himself to the best of his ability in its use, never relaxing until he has mastered every detail which may possibly conduce to his competency. Above all things, let him eschew that pernicious vacillation of the mind which is both detrimental to the intellectual faculties themselves and fraught with imminent danger of ultimate failure.

Though forty or fifty years ago a man might, at different times in his career, pursue with success various employments, such a course is much more difficult today, on account of the hold which modern specialism has gained in all phases of human industry. If, however, in addition to competency in his special line of work, a man succeed in acquiring that broad insight into human affairs which renders his judgment of value to his kind, such a man may be pretty certain that the world will recognize his capacity for leadership, and confer upon him those rewards which have ever been the emoluments of first class capacity in all ages of the world.—Dr. J. Leonard Corning.

What the "Coming War" Means.

Why is this "coming war" so craved? Because it may improve our trade abroad, fill the papers with exciting news, one-half at least of which will be contradicted next day, and wear to death a few more war correspondents in the arduous train to furnish it.

Undoubtedly these are among the reasons. This is an age of Christian civilization. At least we call it so. Yet the preparatory steps for beating swords into pruning hooks do not seem taken as yet. Perhaps it is because there are so few prunes to prune. And any one who should stand forth in this busy Christian world of ours and ask our excited war talkers, war desirers and war agitators if they were aware that war meant killing, murdering, burning, plundering, disease, hardship and agony for thousands of the poor simple creatures arrayed to confront and shoot each other for they know not what—after an experience more or less prolonged of dirt, vermin, starvation and worn out bodies—why, the unspoken sentiment regarding such a man from many of his fellow Christians would be: "Get thee to a nunnery, a Sunday school, a woman's social conventicle, or a milk and water peace convention, with all that sort of talk."—New York Star.

Elephants as Executioners.

Elephants were kept by the kings of Burmah as executioners. When criminals condemned to die for treason—often innocent persons who were wealthy and the monarch desired their treasures for himself—were brought out of prison to make a public spectacle for the populace, and so strike terror to the hearts of the king's enemies, they were executed by these elephants. Each one would catch hold of a condemned man by the neck with his trunk, lift him off the ground, give a sudden jerk like flicking a whip, then tread him to a jelly beneath his great feet. Sometimes the elephants knelt upon the criminals and kneaded them to pulp.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Sweet Analogous to Sound.

Professor Leclerc, writing in Cosmos, maintains that odors are due, not to the emanations, as such, of so called odoriferous bodies, but to the vibratory movement among such emanations, due to processes of oxidation. Sweet, on this theory, is analogous to sound.—Boston Budget.

THE SENSES OF ANIMALS.

Sir John Lubbock's Black Poodle "Van." Bees' Sensibility to Sound.

Sir John Lubbock recently delivered a lecture to the members of the Edinburgh Philosophical institute on "The Sense and Senses of Animals," in the course of which he said that there had been so many important recent works published relating to his subject that he thought it would be more interesting were he to deal, for the most part, with his own observations. Different ideas prevailed regarding the question of the intelligence of animals. Some people regarded a dog as an animal almost as wise and clever as themselves; but, on asking them if they thought a dog could realize that two and two made four, he generally found a good deal of doubt on that point.

Sir John Lubbock then described the system which he had adopted in the training of his own black poodle dog, "Van." He had placed two pieces of cardboard, on one of which was printed in large letters the word "food," the other being blank, on two saucers. In one of the saucers was food, and the card with the word upon it. In the other, the blank card and no food. In about ten days the dog began to distinguish the card with the letters from the plain card, and would go at once to the printed one. The lecturer then related in some detail his successful efforts in inducing the dog to bring him the proper card when he wanted food, in teaching him to know other cards containing the words "out," "tea," "bone," "water." On bringing the card marked "out" he would rush to the door. The cards were not put in the same places, but in different positions; and in order that the dog might not be guided by scent, other cards with the same markings were used.

No one who saw him look down the row of cards, and pick out the one wanted, could doubt that he sought a particular card for a particular object. He had found, at the end of three months' experiments, that he could not get the dog to realize the difference of colors, and it was just possible that the dog might be color blind. He had also failed to get the dog to distinguish among one, two, three, or four broad bands upon the cards. In order to ascertain if bees were sensible to sounds, he had placed some honey on a musical box on his lawn. The box played for ten days without stopping, and then he removed it to a window sill on the first floor of his house. Not a bee came to it. He again placed it on the lawn, and they again returned to the honey. He next brought it into the drawing room on the ground floor, about ten yards from its former position, but they did not follow; but on his bringing two or three bees into the house and putting them on the honey, they began to feed, and, flying off, returned with their companions. It seemed as if they did not hear the tune.

Regarding the old idea that bees would not swarm unless they were "tanged" by the creation of sounds, he was under the impression that it was the "over tones" which the insects heard, and which were inaudible to our ears. The sounds were so low as to be beyond our range of hearing. Man, he said, had five senses, and fancied that no others were possible; but it was obvious that we could not measure the infinite by our own narrow limitations. Even within the penetration of our own senses there might be endless sounds which we could not hear, and colors of which we have no conception. There was also the other question still remaining for solution, that the familiar world which surrounded us might be a different place altogether for other animals, in which there was music we could not hear, colors we could not see, and sensations which we could not conceive. The pursuit of such studies gave a clew to senses and perceptions of which we had no conception.—Mechanical World.

Caught a Pickpocket.

A strange experience of the pocket picking world occurred some twenty years ago. It was at Naples. People generally in those days carried silk pocket handkerchiefs instead of the scraps of muslin which are affected nowaday. An American then at Naples, from whom five silk pocket handkerchiefs were abstracted in as many days, sewed strongly into the interior of his pocket a large fish hook. The result which he anticipated followed. The thief's hand was caught, and the American, turning sharply, seized him by the wrist and held him in a grasp like a vise till he could hand him over to a gendarme. But within a fortnight that American was stabbed to the heart as he was going home one night from the theatre.—The Argonaut.

Mice and Margarine.

An English analyst recently received twelve specimens of supposed butter, which he was supposed to analyze to discover which was pure and which was oleomargarine. After taking what he wanted he set the twelve plates in his laboratory. Next morning the butter had disappeared from ten and on two it remained. These two were adulterated and the others pure. Suspecting mice, he set out other plates, some containing pure and some adulterated in various degrees. Again the pure butter was cleared away, the slightly adulterated half eaten and the much adulterated only nibbled. —New York Sun.

Germany's Potato Crop.

Germany, in her crop worn fields and her clumsy, old fashioned agricultural way, raises six times a many potatoes as the United States, and, though she consumes enormous quantities, has a large share to dispose of, much of which comes to the United States. American farmers are not potato raisers; they seem to think the crop takes too much work to the acre. But the yield is comparatively heavy, and so long as not enough can be produced to meet the demand there is money in potato culture.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

The Perspiratory System.

According to Richard A. Proctor, the scientist, there are twenty-six miles of sweat tubes in the body of an ordinary man, and an average theatre audience perspires a ton of water every hour.—New York Evening World.

Paine's Celery Compound

CURES Nervous Prostration, Nervous Headache, Neuralgia, Nervous Weakness, Stomach and Liver Diseases, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, and all affections of the Kidneys.

WEAK NERVES

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is a Nerve Tonic which never fails. Containing Celery and Coca, those wonderful nerve stimulants, it speedily cures all nervous disorders.

RHEUMATISM

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND purifies the blood. It drives out the lactic acid, which causes Rheumatism, and restores the blood-making organs to a healthy condition. It is the true remedy for Rheumatism.

KIDNEY COMPLAINTS

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND quickly restores the liver and kidneys to perfect health. This curative power, combined with its nerve tonic, makes it the best remedy for all kidney complaints.

DYSPEPSIA

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND strengthens the stomach, and quiets the nerves of the digestive organs. This is why it cures even the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

CONSTIPATION

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is not a cathartic. It is a laxative, giving easy and natural action to the bowels. Regularity surely follows its use.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

"American wages for American workmen."—Republican motto.

Rockingham county, at the town hall, Exeter, Wednesday, Sept. 12th at 11:00 o'clock A. M.

The Republican Tariff Creed.

The following are the planks in the Republican National Platform, as passed by the Chicago convention:

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.

We denounce the Mills bill as destructive to the general business, the labor and the farming interest of the country, and we heartily indorse the consistent and patriotic action of the republican representatives in Congress in opposing its passage. We condemn the proposition of the democratic party to place wool on the free list and we insist that the duties thereon shall be adjusted and maintained so as to furnish full and adequate protection to that industry.

I have had catarrh for twenty years, and used all kinds of remedies without relief. Mr. Smith, druggist, of Little Falls, recommended Ely's Cream Balm. The effect of the first application was magical, it allayed the inflammation and the next morning my head was as clear as a bell. One bottle has done so much good that I am convinced its use will effect a permanent cure. It is soothing, pleasant and easy to apply, and I strongly urge its use to all sufferers.—George Tew, Little Falls, N. Y.

Don't Wait

Until your hair becomes dry, thin, and gray before giving the attention needed to preserve its beauty and vitality. Keep on your toilet-table a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor—the only dressing you require for the hair—and use a little, daily, to preserve the natural color and prevent baldness.

Thomas Munday, Sharon Grove, Ky., writes: "Several months ago my hair commenced falling out, and in a few weeks my head was almost bald. Tried many remedies, but they did no good. I finally bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and, after using only a part of the contents, my head was covered with a heavy growth of hair. I recommend your preparation as the best hair-restorer in the world."

"My hair was faded and dry," writes Mabel C. Hardy, of Delavan, Ill.; "but after using a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor it became black and glossy."

OFFICIAL NOTICE!

— OF —

The Atkinson House Furnishing Co.

— FROM THE —

HEADQUARTERS AT PORTLAND, MAINE,

To those who are contemplating the purchase of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

GREETING:

On and after June 1st we shall STOP PREPAYING the FREIGHT on GOODS SOLD by us, and we respectfully request that those who have dealt with us, and who have been BENEFITED by the PAYMENT OF THIS FREIGHT which in itself in the past three years has amounted to some

30,000 DOLLARS,

Will order what GOODS they require for this SPRING, from us this month, and please order as early as possible. And to those who intend buying

Springs,
Feather Pillows,
Silver-ware,
Window Shades,
Drapery,
Dinner Sets,
Toilet Sets,
Spreads, Blankers,
Chamber Sets,
Parlor Suits,
Carpets,
Lounges,
Easy Chairs,
Mattresses,
Feathers,
Stoves and Ranges,

And anything else in HOUSE FURNISHING, can be BENEFITED to the extent of the freight to their depot, by buying from us this month. We have always PREPAID THIS FREIGHT FROM OUR OWN PROFITS, as we have invariably made the price on the

Furniture, Carpets,

Etc., lower than could be bought for elsewhere. There has always been a great advantage derived by our prepayment of the freight because we in every instance GUARANTEE the SAFE DELIVERY of the goods, and if there has ever been a fight to make with the railroad, we have done it, or in other words if you have received a

CHAMBER SET, PARLOR SUIT, Chair, or Range,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

That was damaged by the railroad, we have replaced it with another piece, and taken our chances to get the breakage from the road. There are items worthy of our close consideration, and especially at this time of year, be wise and order during this month,

And Save Yourself the Freight from Portland to your Depot, no matter where it is located in the State of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

We believe we are the only HOUSE FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT IN NEW ENGLAND WHO HAVE ADHERED STRICTLY TO THIS PLAN OF PREPAYING THE FREIGHT ON EVERYTHING SHIPPED BY US. We mean by this that while some other houses have shipped the goods, and allowed you to pay freight and afterwards send them a bill and then dicker on it for some time, We have invariably paid out the cash before the article left our freight sheds at Portland. And now notwithstanding the fact that we expect to lose a great deal of business by this this year there seems to be no other way to convince some people of the difference between OUR PAYING THE FREIGHT before the articles leave here, AND OUR CUSTOMERS PAYING THE FREIGHT after the articles get to the depot, and then having to write backwards and forwards over the matter. We wish to deal with perfect fairness and frankness in this matter, consequently we give you another month to make your selection, and to fill orders that are already placed. Now if you want a

KITCHEN RANGE, or a CHAMBER SET, or PARLOR SUIT, or CARPETS, WINDOW SHADES, DRAPERY CURTAINS,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

Kindly come and see us at once, or if you can not come, please write us for Catalogues and Descriptions of these Goods, and we will do our very best to please you in every one. Remember we carry COMPLETE HOUSE FURNISHINGS. There is scarcely a thing that you require for your homes that we do not keep, and we sell the same and shall continue to sell the same for cash, or a quarter cash, and the balance by the week or month. Official list of subscriptions to Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument fund. C. M. GIGNOUX, Treasurer Finance Committee.

DESCRIPTION OF PORTSMOUTH SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.

The Base is 12 ft. square, 3 ft. 10 inches high. This is followed by the Plinth, which is 9 ft. 7 inches square and 4 ft. 7 1-2 inches high. On each side of this section is a buttress which projects 17 3-4 inches. Standing on the front and back buttresses are pyramides of cannon balls, with a life-sized statue of an infantryman at "parade rest" on the right buttress, and same size statue of a sailor resting his right hand on an anchor, on the left. On the face of the front buttress is the City Seal of Portsmouth, on the right face a stack of muskets, on the left a capstan, and on the back the United States Coat of Arms, all in bold-raised bas-relief. Beneath these and on the face of each side of the plinth are the battle names, Gettysburg, Fredericksburg, Kearsarge and Antietam.

The Die, which is octagonal in shape, is 5 ft. 2 1-2 inches in diameter and 7 ft. 4 inches in height. On its front tablet is the dedicatory inscription. On the right tablet is the bas-relief of a mounted Parrot gun, on the left the sinking of the Confederate States cruiser Alabama by the United States ship Kearsarge, and on the back a list of twenty-three battle names, commencing with Williamsburg and ending with Sherman's March to the Sea.

The Upper Die is also octagonal and is 3 ft. 3 inches in diameter and 6 ft. 6 inches in height. On the front tablet of this section is a medallion of New Hampshire's War Governor Goodwin, on the right tablet the Crossed Swords, on the left the G. A. R. Badge, and on the back a medallion of Abraham Lincoln. Surrounding the top of this section is a beautiful frieze in bold relief.

The Spire, which is of the same general shape as the dies, is 2 ft. 8 inches in diameter and 9 ft. 10 inches in height. At the top the United States Flag is gracefully festooned. The spire is surmounted by a beautiful floriated Cap which is 3 ft. 8 inches in diameter and 1 ft. 11 inches in height. This section is broken by four raised tablets, upon each of which is a raised five-pointed star.

The whole is surmounted by the statue of America, which is 8 ft. 6 inches in height. She is resting her left hand on the United States shield and sheathed sword, and is bestowing a laurel wreath with the right hand.

The whole structure is 42 feet 6 1-2 inches in height.

THE CHIEF MARSHAL'S STAFF.

HEADQUARTERS CHIEF MARSHAL, Dedication Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, July 4.

June 22, 1888.

GENERAL ORDER, NO. 1.

The Chief Marshal makes the following announcements:

Chief of Staff, Capt. James A. Sanborn.

Aids, Frank L. Benedict, William L. Conlon, Macdonald Douglas, Morris C. Foye, Wallace Hackett, John Hatch, Horace P. Montgomery, Gustave Peyser, Frank J. Philbrick, William H. Preston, Frank L. Pryor, Joseph A. Randall, James M. Salter, Charles E. Wadham, Arthur W. Walker.

Marshal 1st Division, Capt. N. T. Belton.

Marshal 2d Division, Col. Simon H. Marston.

Marshal 3d Division, Major David Urch.

Marshal 4th Division, Chief Engineer Fire Department, Herbert A. Marden.

Marshal 5th Division, Stephen Decatur.

Remarks: The organization of Divisions will be announced as soon as all replies to invitation have been received. By order of ANDREW P. PRESTON, Chief Marshal.

CAPT. JAMES A. SANBORN, Chief of Staff.

About forty Grand Army posts have already signified their intention of taking part in the fourth of July parade in this city. Louis Bell Post, of Manchester, will bring with them the War Veterans' drum corps.

The soldiers' monument was on Friday being hauled from the wharf where it was landed, to Goodwin park.

The pupils of the public schools met in Music hall on Friday afternoon, to rehearse the national hymns which they are to sing during the dedicatory exercises.

A. O. U. W. FAIR.

Polar Star Lodge, No. 55, A. O. U. W., of Kittery, Me., held their first anniversary fair at Trefethen's hall in that town on Thursday and Friday evenings, June 21st and 22d. On the night of the 22d there was a drawing for prizes, every ticket being entitled to a prize of some kind. The tickets were drawn from the wheel by Miss Annie Hill, in presence of a committee. The principal prizes were taken by the following numbers:

Horse, by ticket No. 2104, held in Greenville, Me.; gentleman's gold watch, No. 1240, Globe village; lady's gold watch, No. 3406, Kittery; silver ice-pitcher, No. 2373, Lakeside, Me.; marble clock, No. 1871, Berwick; toilet set, No. 2367; lady's writing desk, No. 2630.

The hall was packed, and the heat was intense. The room was handsomely decorated with flags, the ice cream and other refreshments went off rapidly, and the affair was a success.

The New Hampshire national bank will again pass its dividend this year.

The railroad station at Newmarket was burglarized on the morning of the 22d, the safe blown open, and about $60 stolen.

A few shares of the New Hampshire National bank were sold in this city this week for $113 per share.

A flagstaff sixty-five feet high was put up on Congress street, opposite the Penny Post office, Friday, and the big rooster "Jingo", which surmounted the flagstaff in front of Franklin block four years ago, is on its top.

The Rockingham county expenditures for the past year were $63,125.48. The debt was increased $4,033.47, and is now $15,366.28.

The rate of taxation in Portsmouth this year is $17.40 on $1000, against $17.50 on $1000 last year.

Capt. Duncan's new steamer, the Undine, arrived at this port from Kennebunk at eleven o'clock Friday forenoon, and in the afternoon she took a tow up the river.

The Thompson house and property at York beach were sold on Thursday, the 21st inst., to J. L. Ramsdell of Dover, for $9000.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly. Do not be induced to buy other preparations, but be sure to get the Peculiar Medicine,

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS

The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture of the reed instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.

$22 TO $900.

Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogues free.

PIANOS.

Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos, that they are superior to all others. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1865, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN PIANO STRINGER," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.

GRAND & UPRIGHT.

A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and tuners, sent, together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant.

Pianos and Organs sold for cash or easy payments; also rented. tmy10

GLYCEROLE!
A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

Price 25 cents per bottle.

"IT WAS INHERITED."

The Fearful Effect of Heredity Upon the Lives of Men and Women—A Striking Case.

"The man or woman does not live who is free from hereditary influences." This remark was made by the celebrated Dr. Vanderville, of New York, to the Rev. Dr. Brooks, at a recent convention of scientists.

"I agree with you, doctor," said the divine.

"Pure blood," continued the doctor, "is the great cause of health; impaired blood the source of most diseases. It may even go back to the grand or great grand parents."

"I have in mind a prominent man," said the reverend gentleman, "General Alfred C. Monroe, of No. 1 Pemberton Square, Boston. He inherited kidney troubles from both parents. One of whom died with it. He suffered terribly from pains in the back and head, and at times when walking the dizziness became so bad that he was compelled to lay hold of some convenient post for support. He was in a most desperate condition."

"And is he so still?" asked the doctor.

"No, he is in perfect health. Dr. McGregor, I believe of Maine, who had amputated an arm for the general, cured him."

"Do you know what medicine he used?"

"I understand it was Hunt's Remedy."

"Oh, Hunt's Remedy. I know it very well," said Dr. Vanderville. "I consider it the best remedy for kidney, liver, heart troubles, and female difficulties in the world. It is in no sense a patent medicine, but a standard remedy, which deserves to be used by all intelligent people. The fact is, no blood-taint can exist when the kidneys are in perfect order, and there is where Hunt's Remedy shows its marvelous superiority."

"I only wish," said Rev. Dr. Brooks, "that all people who inherit a tendency to disease could know of this remedy of which you speak so highly and use it. I am positive it would greatly lessen suffering and death."

A DISTRESSING COUGH.

How many, especially during the Fall and Winter months, are troubled with a Cough, sometimes dry and hacking, sometimes loose causing the sufferer to raise a large amount of offensive matter; this can soon be cured by using Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs.

Cured her Cough.

MRS. JEREMIAH CLARK, Lowell, Mass., says: "Twelve years ago I first took a bottle of your Throat and Lung Specific. I had been troubled with a very bad Cough for months. A 50-cent bottle cured my Cough. Since then I have not been without it. I can heartily recommend it to any one who has a bad cough."

Saved his Life.

CHAS. A. WAITT, says: "No language can express the value I attach to your Specific. I believe it saved my life."

We would cite other testimonials did we think it necessary, but a trial bottle will convince you that it is all we represent. Give it a trial.

Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific is sold by all Druggists. Price 50 cents and $1. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

WHY WE GROW OLD

Ignorance and Misspent Energy—Take the World a Little Easier.

If at 30 or 35 you expect to be an old man or woman at 55, you will be one, because the mind makes the material correspondence of whatever it sets itself permanently upon. Any person continually in fear of something will bear the marks of such fear graven in his or her face. If you so look forward to such decay of the body as a thing that must come, it will come. People who keep young in their minds show it in the condition of their bodies. Three-fourths of our people look the old man or old woman at 60 because they have always received it as an inevitable necessity, from which there was no possible escape, that they must be on the downhill side of life at that age. It is to them a "law of nature."

It is for them only the law of ignorance. There are still a great many "laws of nature" of which we know little or nothing. To say "impossible" to the idea that people cannot live longer than the present average of life, and at the same time be strong and healthy at a "great age," is to put ourselves in the long catalogue of past dunces who said it was impossible for steam to propel cars and ships, or for electricity to carry news. Every generation finds out some new power in nature, and all of nature's unrecognized powers are not confined to the propelling of machinery.

It is a great aid to the preservation of youth and vigor to be able to sit still and keep still in mind as well as in body when there is really nothing to do, because in such condition mind and body are recuperating and filling up with new vigor. The body is not fed with material food alone. There are other elements, now little recognized, which act upon it and give it strength, and the grand source and means for receiving these lie partly in that mental and physical quietude of mind which acts only when it has full power to act. If, then, wisdom guides action either by brain or hand, a great deal more is accomplished, and a balance of life's forces is kept in reserve.

In this age of rush, hurry and tumbling over each other thousands imagine it's necessary to be doing something all one's waking, or, we will say, business, hours to attain success. Leisure is almost a sin. This is a great mistake. Thousands on thousands are so "doing" all the time. What does their "doing" amount to? A pittance, a bare subsistence, and why?

Because there is no discretion as to what the person's force is put upon. One woman wears her body out at 40 in polishing stoves, scrubbing tinware and hundreds of other little jobs. Her mind is all absorbed in these details. Another one sits quietly and an idea comes to her whereby all this work may be accomplished without any physical effort on her part, and by those who can do nothing else. She is the more likely to preserve her health and vigor. Health and vigor are the belongings of a relatively perfect maturity, and that is even more attractive than what is generally called youth.

It is this habit of mind which keeps people perpetually swinging their legs and feet or beating tattoos with their finger nails. All this is useless outlay of force, as much as sawing wood. To sit still and center yourself on what is going on around or, if you can, when there is nothing to do, think as nearly nothing as possible, and if you can doze or go into a waking dream, is to store up strength for future effort, be that effort mental or physical.—Prentice Mulford in New York Star.

Facts About Kid Gloves.

"Out of 650,000 dozen gloves imported last year from France and Germany, only about 100,000 were genuine kid," said a well known Broadway dealer in gloves. "An expert, however, can readily tell the skin of a kid by the veins which run through it on the unfinished side. In preparing skins for the glove manufacturers a remarkable fact has been discovered which science has not been able to explain. The first process is to soak them in lime water, to take off the hair. This takes from ten to fifteen days, according to the nature of the skin. Locality is the chief thing to be considered. Skins from one district drop their hair sooner than those from another. After the hair has been removed the skins are placed in a small square vat, filled with a preparation of bran water, and shaken violently to take out the grease. This is called the fermentation of the skin.

"A mixture of eggs, salt and flour is next applied. The kid is then ready to receive the color. This is spread on with a brush and the hue fixed with ammonia. In the case of light colored gloves," continued the dealer, "the kid is placed in a large tank filled with the coloring material, and trodden upon by bare legged men in the same manner that grapes are trodden in the process of making wine. Most of the gloves used in this country are of domestic manufacture. They are made in Gloversville and Johnstown, in this state. Fully 25,000 people derive their living from this industry in this locality. Almost every family for miles around is engaged in the manufacture of gloves. The parts are cut up and distributed among the people for sewing in the same manner that trousers are sent out to people living in tenements in this city. Gloversville and the surrounding district is one of the most prosperous communities in the state. There are few poor people to be found, and the distribution of wealth is remarkably even."—New York Sun.

Eskimo Sorcerers and Conjurers.

The Eskimo calls the medicine men angekoks, which is wise men. The Indians, like other people, are subjected to the ills of body and mind, and are, therefore, dependent upon medical protection to help them in the hours of pain. Blindness, arising from the smoke of the lodges, uncleanliness, the habitual use of paint, and hereditary diseases are very prevalent among the tribe. Sitting in a lodge a short time ago with twelve persons, a missionary named Rev. John McLean, B. A., counted no less than five blind individuals. There are numerous cases of scrofula, consumption, rheumatism, immoral diseases, bronchitis, etc.

Th medicine men are the priests and doctors of the camp, uniting religion and medicine in their practice. Generally there are grades of distinction, the lower resorting to the use of herbs and other medicines only, the higher relying upon supernatural influences to aid them with the dispensing of their materia medica. Shrewd and intelligent, they are revered by the occupants of the lodges and become instructors of the youth and the guardians of the sacred legends. Occasionally medicine women are found, generally aged persons, who become famous through the numerous cures wrought by their skill. "Medicine" has a two fold meaning, the one referring to the charms and incantations, the supernatural part of the work and the other to the use of physic, the natural part.—St. Paul Globe.

FRIENDSHIP BROKEN.

We chose the faint chill morning, friend and [illegible]
Facing the twilight out beneath an oak
Soul calling soul to fellowship, and close spoke
Strange thoughts as Jew as ever need be uttered.
Such truth as never truth again can mend.
Whatever art we win, what gods invoke;
Not wrath's indignity nor strife and smoke;
He what it may, it had a solemn end

Farewell in peace. We, of the selfsame throne,
Are foeman vassals, pale astrologers,
Each a wise skeptic of the other's star.
Silently, as we went out we wave alone.
The steadfast sun, whom no prayer deters,
Drew nigh between us his majestic bar

Mine was the mood that shows the learest face
Through a long avenue, and voices kind,
Idle and indeterminate, and blind.
As rumors from a very distant place.
Yet, even so, it gathered the first cease
Of the first swallows where the lane's inclined;
An ebb of wary wings to serve my mind.
For round spring's vision Ah, some equal grace

The calm sense of seen beauty without sigh
Fell on thee, honorable heart, too late,
In patient stupor waking from the dawn;
Albeit thou wert the loser of love's light,
Like fallen Adam in the wilderness
Aware of naught but of the thing withdrawn.
—Louise Imogene Guiney in The Independent.

A Hearty Laugh.

There is nothing that will help digestion like a hearty laugh. But how can a billious man laugh? What warmth is there in a dyspeptic's smile? And how can a man be mirthful when his liver is out of order? We recommend all such persons to use Ingalls' Mandrake Compound. It acts directly on the liver and stomach, stimulating the one and strengthening the other. A single bottle will convince one of its efficacy.

The women of a Knights of Labor local assembly in Toledo, Ohio, have established a co-operative association for the sale of home products, clothing, knit goods, etc. Should it prove successful, they contemplate providing a home for disabled and homeless women.

Everybody Likes

OH! MY HEAD.

The pain from Neuralgia and its companion disease Rheumatism is excruciating. Thousands who could be quickly cured are needlessly suffering. Athlophoros will do for others what it did for the following parties:

Williamsport, Ind., Oct. 8, 1887.

Having been afflicted with neuralgia for the past four years, and trying almost everything, but in vain, I finally heard of Athlophoros. After taking one bottle I found it to be helping me, and after taking four bottles of Athlophoros and one of Pills, I found that I was entirely well. I think the medicine is positively a sure cure.

CRAWFORD S. RENDICK.

Mt. Carmel, Ill., Dec. 28, 1887.

I have used Athlophoros in my family and find it to be the greatest medicine for neuralgia in existence and having had its fangs fastened upon me for the past 10 years I know whereof I speak. MRS. JULIA CHILTON.

The Cost of Royalty.

Taking the royal family together, it is found that the present sovereign, the good Queen Victoria, with her aunts and her numerous progeny, has cost the British nation $85,000,000, or in the neighborhood of $175,000,000. In the 100 years of their national life, closing with the present administration, the American people have paid their presidents as salaries $2,900,000.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Brittleness of Bones.

An English chemist has shown that the brittleness of the bones of the aged is not due, as is generally supposed, to an increase of the proportions of mineral salts with advancing years. From a section of the femur of fifty subjects of different ages no difference in the proportion of ash could be determined.—Arkansaw Traveler.

Concerning Pleuro-Pneumonia.

Some of the heavenly bodies are inclined to be fast. Meteorites sometimes attain a velocity of 180,000 feet per second. When passing through the air at this rate the friction is so great that the air is heated up to a temperature of 10,800 degs. F.—New York Mail and Express.

The names for money in the language of the Ogallalla Sioux are interesting. Gold is mases-ska-zi, literally, "yellow white iron;" silver is mases-ska-ska, or "white iron," and greenbacks are minnehuapimases-ska, or "paper that talks white iron."—New York Evening World.

At His Post Day and Night,

The vigilant imp, indigestion, goads us with his many-lashed scourge. Each lash is a diabolic symptom. No comfort in eating, misery afterwards, little or broken rest at night, visitations of the nightmare during fitful intervals of sleep, an uprising unrefreshed and without appetite, sleepiness and yawning during the day, nervousness and irritability of temper, even monomania in extreme cases. Hard to bear, all this. Necessary? No! a thousand times no, so long as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the nation's specific for indigestion, acute or chronic, is procurable. The commencement of a course of this medicine is the commencement of a cure. Prompt relief first, absolute eradiction subsequently. The truth of this statement, backed up by irrefragable testimony, is well known to the American people. So are others, viz.: that the Bitters averts and cures fever and ague and billious remittent, and removes nervousness, billiousness, constipation, and kidney and bladder troubles.

The Delaware and Jersey peach growers report a prospective crop of 5,000,000 baskets. As the boys say, this is some peaches!

Unable to Tell.

Yes, that was so. For years I suffered with scrofula; sores broke all over my body, and I am unable to tell one half that I suffered. I was not able to obtain relief until I used Sulpher Bitters, which completely cured me.—C. B. Dale, 17 Allston street, Boston.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. THE HOMELY GIRL'S DAY.

Handsome Typewriters No Longer Popular in the Metropolis.

At one of the principal typewriting schools in town you often see as many as eight or ten young women on the benches in the outer office, waiting to see the proprietor, of whom they want to get employment as pupils or secretaries to business men. When he comes in you will always notice that he sees them without regard to the order in which they came, picking out one here and one there, taking them into his office each by herself until only one or two remain on the seats. If you studied the subject day after day you would soon discover that the more prepossessing a young woman is the less time she has to wait, and that it is always the plain ones who are left to the last. Poverty, especially when it entails the necessity for a young girl to go out and earn her living, is hard and bitter, and many a time and oft you will see that the homely girls, left sitting on those benches, have unfathomed the proprietor's secret and are biting their lips and even suffering moisture to flood their eyes as they note how certainly a beautiful face and stylish attire command attention.

The other day I went to that school, and I witnessed the neglect of a plain girl who evidently found it difficult to conceal her mortification. I was in the room with the proprietor when he asked her to come in.

"I suppose there is no use my asking you, sir," she said; "but since I have waited I will say that I am seeking occupation as a typewriter."

"Do you understand the business?" he asked.

"I am said to be very rapid," said she; "I have been five years at the calling."

"Will you accept $15 a week to act as stenographer and typewriter to vice president so and so of the —— oil company?"

Her eyes changed color. They brightened almost into flame.

"Fifteen dollars!" she said; "I only got $10, sir, and then only for a year before the firm I was with failed."

The arrangement or bargain was quickly made. Before she left the girl asked, "Will you tell me why you saw me last though I was the first to come?"

"I'd rather not," said the employer.

"Did all the others secure places?" she asked.

"No one but you was taken," he said.

She went away wondering. When she had gone the proprietor turned to me and said: "That is both a sensitive and a sensible girl. She thought she was left to the last because her face and dress are plain. She is right. This is the day of the homely girl. The beauty, the belle, the dressy girl, are all at a discount in this business, and we have resolved never to employ another pretty girl if we can get a homely one.

"There's no mystery about it," he continued. "It's plain business. There are now 6,000 or 7,000 girls at work in men's offices down town, and while their entree into commercial life is always spoken of as a feminine revolution, the truth is that it has created a social stir deeper than either one sex has felt. When girls were first made use of on account of their quickness with their hands, the suitability of the work and the low price at which they could be got by reason of the large number seeking work, the craze was for pretty girls. Every man wanted a belle to sit at his desk and take down his letters and memoranda. It was natural. There were plenty of pretty girls, and who on earth does not prefer beauty to plainness. Men who are in my business naturally tried to get only pretty pupils and beautiful adepts. We scanned the girls' dresses, judged them by their stylishness and insisted on general attractiveness. If we ever took up a plain girl we were apt to be sorry for it, for we had hard work to place her. Now all that is changed. I can show you scores of letters in which business men ask me not to send a pretty girl. In fact, the only offices where we can place a pretty girl are very large ones where the employer chooses the girl and details her to go with others in some department or to assist a male chief clerk or private secretary. Those and the offices of the bachelors in business are the only places where we can get work for pretty girls.

"The reason is as plain as the nose on your face," he continued; "the wives have interfered. Every married man is visited at his office by his wife more or less frequently. If she finds him elbow to elbow or face to face with a pretty coquette every time she comes, she is certain to make life more or less unpleasant for him. Some women in such cases 'take it out' at home as the saying goes, but I have had men tell me that their wives were forever popping in on them and practically never missed a day without a call at their offices. These business men, nearly all men pick up a bouquet, or box of candy, or some little knicknack now and then to gladden the life of the girl at their elbow. Imagine the state of the wife who finds that the flowers she sees on her husband's desk were put there by him when he has told her ten thousand times that he has hated flowers from infancy! Oh, no; there is no show for the pretty girl in business in New York today. Those who got places long ago are now being crowded out and no new ones are now taken on."—"Clara Belle" in New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Baby Beaver's Dam.

A college professor in Maine tells how he convinced a friend who did not believe that beavers could build dams. He bought a baby beaver off a hunter one day and sent it to his skeptical friend. The beaver became a great pet in the house, but showed no signs of wanting to build dams until one Monday morning a leaky pailful of water was put on the floor in the back kitchen. The beaver was there; he was only a baby then, too, but the moment he saw the water oozing out of a crack in the pail he scampered into the yard, brought in a chip and commenced building his dam. His owner was called, and watched the little fellow, very much astonished by what he saw. He gave orders to have the pail left there, and the industrious beaver kept at his work four weeks, when he had built a solid dam all around the pail. The professor's friend believes now that beavers know a thing or two about dam building.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

GLIMPSES OF ALL NIGHT LIFE.

In Paris' "American" Restaurant—A Bloodless Spanish Duel.

At 3 o'clock we find an American restaurant fairly decorous. Between it and the closed cafe on the entresol we shall soon hear rival pianos issuing complex melodies, and, if we went through the richly furnished rooms, we would see many a devil's dance, danced humorously enough, too. The restaurant is one of the richest, as go the trappings, in the city. It has the incandescent light, which is only intermittently discharged, after the idea of the galvanic battery. When conversation ebbs or the spirits of the guests are evidently oozing, the watchful guardian of the plant touches the electric key, and instantly the immense room, with all its scintillating objects, is ablaze like a fairy palace. The exhilaration produced begins with a chorus of awakening, long drawn "Ah's!" breaks into a tempest of talk, and immediately there are renewed orders for refreshments, and a replenishment of the frappe decanters all around. Then the light is graded imperceptibly to its minimum, insensibly carrying the hilarity of the crowd off with it into the dynamo, and exploded again with the same result, repeated and repeated, until the night's indulgence is finished.

Meanwhile, as the hours grow on, there are certain sputterings like to quarrels. Two obstreperous Frenchmen, at different times, are thrust down the stairs, persuasively. Rarely does a downright fisticuffs occur, the garcon tells us. The tables are occupied, except two at the door. Near us, on one side, is an actress from the Comedie Francaise, enjoying lunch with three critics and a deputy. To disconcert eavesdroppers the conversation is chopped up into French, Russian, English, German and Italian. Could some of the Parisian stars listen their fingers' ends would itch. On the other side, at a double table, are three young Spaniards, two Spanish women, and two French women, the latter plainly distressed at their inability to keep pace with the liquid cross fire of their companions. Frequently we hear "Antonio" appealed to—a handsome youth, dreamy-eyed, though active, who is evidently the host, for he is circling the empty champagne bottles about the table in a most lavish way. Another lad, of Morocco cast, small as a church mouse, and fussy, has been crushed by Antonio so often, in his fits of generosity, that between his wounded vanity and his want of brains, he is dangerously irritated.

At this moment two black bearded men and two sallow women enter and take seats near the door. Instantly, like a gunpowder flash, the two Spanish groups have flared up. An old feud! The women cling, while the men fire volley upon volley at one another—of words. This is exactly what the Morocco warrior pined for. Up he goes on to the table, and down crash the bottles and glasses, he after them. Nothing short of a duel will do. He rushes over to our table. Are we his friends? Of course we are. Will we second him? Nothing would give us greater pleasure, unless, perhaps, his fall. His card! He searches frantically, but to no purpose, for one of the women pushes him away, and they all implore us not to encourage a duel, which we assure them we hadn't the remotest intention of doing. And during this little negotiation something very singular has come to pass, for as we look off into the room, behold there in the center is the aspiring duelist and his intended opponent hugging in a hysterical, tearful friendship, and Antonio playing a similar engagement with the other enemy. Bah! they even fall to kissing, and then the two belligerent parties, all wet smiles now, seat themselves in one group and resume pleasantries.—E. D. Cowen's Paris Letter in Chicago News.

The Nutriment in Oysters.

Speaking roughly, a quart of oysters contains, on the average, about the same quantity of actual nutritive substance as a quart of milk, or a pound of very lean beef, or a pound and a half of fresh codfish, or two-thirds of a pound of bread. But while the weight of actual nutriment in the different quantities of food material named is very nearly the same, the quality is widely different. That of the very lean meat or codfish consists mostly of what are called, in chemical language, protein compounds, or "flesh formers"—the substances which make blood, muscle, tendon, bone, brain and other nitrogenous tissues. That of the bread contains but little of these and consists chiefly of starch, with a little fat and other compounds which serve the body as fuel and supply it with heat and muscular power. The nutritive substance of oysters contains considerable of both the flesh forming and the more especially heat and force giving ingredients. Oysters come nearer to milk than almost any other common food material as regards both the amounts and the relative proportions of nutrients and their food values, of equal weights of milk and oysters—i. e., their values for supplying the body with material to build up its parts, repair its wastes, and furnish it with heat and energy would be pretty nearly the same.—Professor W. O. Atwater.

Another Prodigious Sham.

For "sweet charity's sake" covers another prodigious sham. If a woman desires to become a shining light in society charity is made the ladder for such an ambition. She finds the poor orphans and the nameless women and children very interesting and pitiful, and offers her services and her dollars for their relief. The patrons of the institution find her assistance useful. By and by, through such companionship, madam's name is added to their visiting list. It was a woman of this kind—an arrogant, unconventional, and tasteless person, who, after earning her own bread, became the wife of a millionaire and edged herself into society through various charities—that snubbed a young author in her own house, who had gone there by invitation to read or recite. The occasion was for a charity. The poor fellow's shoes were dusty and his clothing of an unfashionable cut, so madam, not being acquainted with literary folk, eyed the young man with distrust and asked him to take a back seat. Ah! who of us can forget how his eyes fairly flamed and his cheeks burned when he was called forward to recite "Misunderstood," a genuine touching little poem of his own.—Brooklyn Eagle.

SULPHUR BITTERS

The Best and Purest Medicine EVER MADE.

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. These Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood-purifier, SULPHUR BITTERS. Why suffer with Boils? Why fret and fume with the terrible Headache? Why lie awake nights with Rheumatism? Why are you all run down, nervous and miserable? Why let your system remain in a state of Malaria, when a few bottles of SULPHUR BITTERS will remove the cause, and make you feel like a new person? Your nerves are all unstrung, your blood needs purifying, your system needs a good scouring, your appetite is poor, and you generally feel miserable. What you need is a good tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is not a cheap Rum concoction, but a Medicinal Tonic, to be taken by the glass, in place of your whiskey drink, to build you up and make you feel like a new person. Sulphur Bitters is a Medicine, not a Beverage, and will cure you when other medicines fail. Remember, SULPHUR BITTERS is not to be drunk like whiskey, but taken in small doses, three times a day, before meals. The Dose is small—only a teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied. Get it of your Druggist.

Paine's Celery Compound

CURES Nervous Prostration, Nervous Headache, Neuralgia, Nervous Weakness, Sunach and Liver Diseases, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, and all affections of the Kidneys.

WEAK NERVES

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is a Nerve Tonic which never fails. Containing Celery and Coca, those wonderful nerve stimulants, it speedily cures all nervous disorders.

RHEUMATISM

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND purifies the blood. It drives out the lactic acid, which causes Rheumatism, and restores the blood-making organs to a healthy condition. It is the true remedy for Rheumatism.

KIDNEY COMPLAINTS

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND quickly restores the liver and kidneys to perfect health. This curative power, combined with its nerve tonic, makes it the best remedy for all kidney complaints.

DYSPEPSIA

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND strengthens the stomach, and quiets the nerves of the digestive organs. This is why it cures even the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

CONSTIPATION

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is not a cathartic. It is a laxative, giving easy and natural action to the bowels. Regularity surely follows its use.

TRADE MARK S.S.S. FOR THE BLOOD

An Important Announcement

About six weeks ago, while at business, I was suddenly attacked with excruciating pains in my feet, knees and hands. So severe was the attack that I took my bed immediately, and in two or three days my joints were swollen to almost double their natural size, and sleep was driven from me. After suffering the most excruciating pain for a week, using liniments and various other remedies, a friend who sympathized with my helpless condition, said to me:

"Why don't you get Swift's Specific and use it. I will guarantee a cure, and if it does not the medicine shall cost you nothing."

I at once secured the S. S. S., and after using it the first day, had a quiet night and refreshing sleep. In a week I felt greatly benefitted. In three weeks I could sit up and walk about the room, and after using six bottles I was out and able to go to business. Since then I have been regularly at my post of duty, and stand on my feet from nine to ten hours a day, and am entirely free from pain. These are the plain and simple facts in my case, and I will cheerfully answer all inquiries relative thereto, either in person or by mail. THOMAS HARDTLIFE,

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

Repeal the War Taxes.

In reference to the reduction of the national revenue, the Republican National convention promulgated the following as the republican plan, which will commend itself to all except those who think the foreign manufacturer should fix the wages of the Ameridan working man:

"The republican party would effect all needed reduction of the national revenue by repealing the taxes upon tobacco, which are an annoyance and burden to agriculture, and the tax upon spirits used in the arts and for mechanical purposes, and by such revision of the tariff laws as will tend to check imports of such articles as are produced by our people, the production of which gives employment to our labor, and release from import duties those articles of foreign production, except luxuries, the like of which cannot be produced here. If there shall still remain a larger revenue than is requisite for the wants of the government, we favor the entire repeal of revenue taxes, rather than the surrender of any part of our protective system at the joint behest of the whiskey ring and the agents of foreign manufacturers."

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

The convention reassembled Friday evening but no more ballots were taken. Mr. Depew withdrew his name as a candidate for the nomination, and on the call of states on a motion to adjourn to Saturday morning at ten o'clock the motion prevailed by a vote of 535 to 282.

The convention met on Saturday according to adjournment, and voting proceeded as follows:

FOURTH BALLOT.

Whole number of votes	829
Necessary for a choice	415
Sherman	235
Harrison	217
Alger	135
Gresham	98
Allison	88
Blaine	42
McKinley	11
Lincoln	1
Douglas	1
Foraker	1

FIFTH BALLOT.

Whole number of votes	828
Necessary for a choice	415
Sherman	221
Harrison	213
Alger	142
Allison	99
Gresham	87
Blaine	48
McKinley	14

At one o'clock P. M. the convention adjourned to four, to allow of a conference of the leaders of the supporters of the several candidates. The conference failed to decide upon much of anything other than when the convention reconvened it should adjourn without further ballotting to eleven o'clock Monday morning, which was agreed to by the convention, 496 to 332. The enthusiasm of most of the delegates, and the movements of affairs during the day, seemed largely in favor of Blaine, and the general impression at the end of the day was that he would be nominated on the first ballot Monday, unless nominated by acclamation.

NEW YORK FASHION LETTER.

THE THIN AND THE STOUT—TENNIS COSTUMES—SUMMER OUTFITS.

Thin people had never before such opportunity. It is a summer of plastrons, plaits and puffings, of full vests, of redundant sleeves and ample drapery, to say nothing of bright colors, large figures and conspicuous plaids. Ruchings may come high about the neck, and with countenance framed in frizzes, an aspirant may easily reach apparent respectability of proportion. It is likewise a summer of opportunity for the economical, since never was there such a jumble of material. Anything seems put beside anything else, and if need be, in piecemeal fashion. Worn places may be recovered over, spots of soil may give birth to some stylish ornamentation, and the irremediable rent be made the foundation for a novel garniture. Yet with the marked adaptability of Fashion during the past year, the needs of stout people were never more cared for; severely plain costumes reach an acme of style, nor is a single remedial substitute, so important to the thin, obligatory. Close fitting sleeves may exhibit the roundness of an arm; plain corsages add nothing to a well developed figure, and striaght hanging drapery gives length rather than breadth. No one understands the additions of dress better than Mrs. Potter. Her stage costumes are all designed to give amplitude, while in every-day dress, the puffed and bouffant are her cornerstones of faith.

BLOUSE WAISTS

Are a refuge for the thin and are now gotten up in white cross-barred muslin, lawn, striped percale, or silk in many colors. The jersey is too comfortable to be given up, and has its own unique position, but the jersey is nothing if not fitting like wax, and therefore for tennis, boating or yachting, the blouse waist, of fine flannel or sometimes silk, is the regulation thing. Nothing can be prettier than these flannel costumes when worn at the seaside, and some charming ones are prepared for Shelter Island, where I hope for a sojourn of some weeks this season. Never was place more lovely, where one looks from emerald green grass, picturesque hills and trees, to life giving salt waters. Yachting, boating and bathing, with dances in the evening, beguile the time, and even a writter on Fashion may exchange philosophy for enjoyment.

OUTFITS.

A lady writes to know my opinion regarding lotteries. I had rather not give it, especially as she goes to say that she has already bought a ticket in the Louisana State Lottery, which she prefers, because presided over by Gens. Beauregard and Early, who ensure perfect fairness, and (so sure is she of winning) that she wants to know the best expenditure of three hundred dollars for a summer's outfit. Commending her hopeful spirit, let me advise first of all, as she is middle-aged, a black silk costume, which may be rated at seventy-five dollars; a foulard or India silk, from thirty-five to forty dollars; a black drapery net or lace dress with moire combination (very fashionable at present) about fifty dollars, or with surah, forty dollars. A light weight wool dress is indispensible and a nice one would cost about twenty-five dollars. A gingham and a satine dress for morning, would come to about fifteen dollars each, and the remaining sum should suffice for a bonnet and shade hat, with surplus for a common and a dress parasol, and something be left for an addition to present supply of handkerchiefs, collars, frilling, shoes, etc. Pretty changes can always be effected by a change of ribbons or neck wear, and this especially in case of a lace dress, which can be entirely altered in character by the substitution of bright ribbons for black, by pale ribbons, etc., while some persons have apparently different costumes by underdresses of different colored silks of cheap quality. Nun's veiling is still used for inexpensive dresses, whether for morning or [illegible]

Family Resemblances and Peculiarities.

It is just the same, be sure, in mental matters. There are family characters and family intelligences, as there are family faces and family figures. Each individual member of the brood has his own variety of this typical character, but in all its basis is more or less persistent, though any one particular trait, even the most marked, may be wanting or actually replaced by its exact opposite. Still, viewing the family idiosyncrasies as a whole, each member is pretty sure to possess a very considerable number of peculiarities more or less in common with all the remainder. True, Jane may be passionate, while Emily is sulky; Dick may be a spendthrift, while Thomas is a miser. But Jane and Dick are both humorous, Emily and Thomas both musical, Thomas and Dick both sensitive, Emily and Jane both sentimental, and all four of them alike vindictive, alike intelligent, alike satirical and alike fond of pets and animals. Look at the persistent Tennysonian tone in Charles and Alfred Tennyson; look at the parodying power of the two Smiths in "Rejected Addresses;" look at the Caracci, the Rossettis, the Herschels, and then say whether even minute touches of taste and sentiment do not come out alike in brothers and sisters.

Almost everybody who meets brothers or sisters or cousins of his own after a long separation (when use has not dulled his apprehension of the facts) must have noticed, with mingled amusement and dissatisfaction, in ten thousand little ways and sayings, how very closely he and they resemble one another. Sometimes the very catchwords and phrases they use, their pet aversions and their pet sympathies, turn out at every twist of life to be absurdly identical. One may even be made aware of one's own unsuspected and unobtrusive failings by observing them, as in a mirror, in the minds of one's relations, like King George's middy in Mr. Gilbert's story, who meets himself on an enchanted island, and considers his double the most disagreeable fellow he ever came across. —Popular Science Monthly.

Chinese Mending Women.

To my mind, the uhique feature of Hong Kong streets are the professional menders, or sewing women, ugly, old Chinese women, with half dwarfed feet, who come out in the morning with low stools and a basket of rags and sit by the curbstones or in archways, recesses or doorways, and sew away all day long. They do not exactly darn stockings and sew on buttons, but their labors correspond to that, and for a trifle a poor workman can have his tattered coat patched and mended or his old garments made over. Peddlers of oranges, dry goods, lamps, toys and fancy wares stop howling their wares through the streets to chat with the professional menders, and of all Chinese women the menders seem to have the pleasantest lot.

They are wise looking old Bettys, all of them, and sometimes they wear huge horn rimmed spectacles that make them look like Minerva's bird. To watch them planning and turning and twisting their garments and rags is most diverting; and two old menders down the road here are beginning to look upon me as an intending customer from the way in which they try to further engage my attention each time they display their skill. The menders look down the social ladder a great ways at the coolie women employed on public works in the streets, but the coolie women probably find some further below to drop their superior gaze on.—Cor. Globe-Democrat.

The Economical Scotchman.

He is not a man of brilliant qualities, but he is a man of solid ones, who can only be appreciated at his true worth when you have known him some time. He does not jump at you with demonstrations of love, nor does he swear you an eternal friendship; but if you know how to win his esteem, you may rely upon him thoroughly. He is a man who pays prompt cash, but will have the value of his money. If ever you travel with a Scotchman from Edinburgh to London, you may observe that he does not take his eyes off the country the train goes through. He looks out of the window all the time, so as not to miss a pannyworth of the money he has paid for his place. Remark to him, as you yawn and stretch yourself, that it's a long, tiring, tiresome journey, and he will probably exclaim; "Long, indeed, long! I should think so, sir; and so it ought to be for £2 17s. 6d.!"

I know of a Scot, who, rather than pay the toll of a bridge in Australia, takes off his coat, which he rolls and straps on his back, in order to swim across the stream. He is not a miser. On the contrary, his generosity is well known in his own neighborhood. He is simply an eccentric Scot, who does not see why he should pay for crossing a river that he can cross for nothing.—Max O'Rell.

Distribution of the Eskimo.

A curious fact in relation to the distribution of the Eskimo is that they inhabit the coast of the arctic regions to the exclusion of other Indians, beginning on the east shore of Greenland, and following the coast line of that island around to the point farthest north inhabited by man. Then, beginning on the coast on the mainland, they occupy narrow strips on the north shores of Hudson bay and along the northern coast of the continent, around past Behring strait, and down the northwest coast of the continent to Prince William's sound. Throughout all this immense coast line the differentiation of language is very small; so that an Eskimo from Greenland transported to Behring strait would in a month be able to speak the language of the natives there as well as though he had been born there. In striking contrast were the numerous distinct families of Indians in the valleys of California and Oregon, whose languages are so different that they could not understand each other.—Science.

Temperance in Madagascar.

Temperance is a native virtue of the Madagascans, who drink water almost exclusively, and drunkenness is comparatively a novel feature, introduced mainly by the civilizing nations who visit the seaports. A distillation called toaka is sometimes used as a great luxury, but in the city of Tananarivoo prohibition of the sale of ardent spirits is legally enforced.—Demorest's Monthly.

The Language of Royalty.

It is a curious fact that while Queen Victoria speaks German in her home circle, the present German empress disregards it in hers and uses English as much as possible. English is the fireside tongue of the Greek, Danish and Russian royal families.—Chicago Herald.

The First Symptoms

Of all Lung diseases are much the same: feverishness, loss of appetite, sore throat, pains in the chest and back, headache, etc. In a few days you may be well, or, on the other hand, you may be down with Pneumonia or "galloping Consumption." Run no risks, but begin immediately to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Several years ago, James Birchard, of Darien, Conn., was severely ill. The doctors said he was in Consumption, and that they could do nothing for him, but advised him, as a last resort, to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking this medicine, two or three months, he was pronounced a well man. His health remains good to the present day.

J. S. Bradley, Malden, Mass., writes: "Three winters ago I took a severe cold, which rapidly developed into Bronchitis and Consumption. I was so weak that I could not sit up, was much emaciated, and coughed incessantly. I consulted several doctors, but they were powerless, and all agreed that I was in Consumption. At last, a friend brought me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. From the first dose, I found relief. Two bottles cured me, and my health has since been perfect."

OFFICIAL NOTICE!

— OF —

The Atkinson House Furnishing Co.

— FROM THE —

HEADQUARTERS AT PORTLAND, MAINE,

To those who are contemplating the purchase of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

GREETING:

On and after June 1st we shall STOP PREPAYING the FREIGHT on GOODS SOLD by us, and we respectfully request that those who have dealt with us, and who have been BENEFITED by the PAYMENT OF THIS FREIGHT which in itself in the past three years has amounted to some

·30,000 DOLLARS,

Will order what GOODS they require for this SPRING, from us this month, and please order as early as possible. And to those who intend buying

Springs, Feather Pillows, Silver-ware, Window Shades, Drapery, Dinner Sets, Toilet Sets, Spreads, Blankers, Chamber Sets, Parlor Suits, Carpets, Lounges, Easy Chairs, Mattresses, Feathers, Stoves and Ranges,

And anything else in HOUSE FURNISHING, can be BENEFITED to the extent of the freight to their depot, by buying from us this month. We have always PREPAID THIS FREIGHT FROM OUR OWN PROFITS, as we have invariably made the price on the

Furniture, Carpets,

Etc., lower than could be bought for elsewhere. There has always been a great advantage derived by our prepayment of the freight because we in every instance GUARANTEE the SAFE DELIVERY of the goods, and if there has ever been a fight to make with the railroad, we have done it, or in other words if you have received a

CHAMBER SET, PARLOR SUIT, Chair, or Range,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

That was damaged by the railroad, we have replaced it with another piece, and taken our chances to get the breakage from the road. There are items worthy of our close consideration, and especially at this time of year, be wise and order during this month,

And Save Yourself the Freight from Portland to your Depot, no matter where it is located in the State of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

We believe we are the only HOUSE FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT IN NEW ENGLAND WHO HAVE ADHERED STRICTLY TO THIS PLAN OF PREPAYING THE FREIGHT ON EVERYTHING SHIPPED BY US. We mean by this that while some other houses have shipped the goods, and allowed you to pay freight and afterwards send them a bill and then dicker on it for some time, We have invariably paid out the cash before the article left our freight sheds at Portland. And now notwithstanding the fact that we expect to lose a great deal of business by this this year there seems to be no other way to convince some people of the difference between OUR PAYING THE FREIGHT before the articles leave here, AND OUR CUSTOMERS PAYING THE FREIGHT after the articles get to the depot, and then having to write backwards and forwards over the matter. We wish to deal with perfect fairness and frankness in this matter, consequently we give you another month to make your selection, and to fill orders that are already placed. Now if you want a

KITCHEN RANGE, or a CHAMBER SET, or PARLOR SUIT, or CARPETS, WINDOW SHADES, DRAPERY CURTAINS,

Or anything else in the matter of

HOUSE FURNISHINGS,

Kindly come and see us at once, or if you can not come, please write us for Catalogues and Descriptions of these Goods, and we will do our very best to please you in every one. Remember we carry COMPLETE HOUSE FURNISHINGS. There is scarcely a thing that you require for your homes that we do not keep, and we sell the same and shall continue to sell the same for cash, or a quarter cash, and the balance by the week or month. This notice applies TO ALL OUR STORES, and we have written to each of our MANAGERS to this effect, consequently there will be no more freight prepaid from our Bangor Store, Rockland Store, Auburn Store, Bar Harbor Store, Biddeford Store, nor from the Headquarters at Portland, after the 31st day of May, 1888.

Kindly get your orders in before June 1st, if you wish to save this freight.

Respectfully, the Public's Ob't Servants,

THE ATKINSON HOUSE FURNISHING CO.,

Headquarters Cor. Pearl and Middle Streets,

SUMMER WEATHER.

The thunder storm of Friday evening, which in this immediate region consisted principally of thunder, was very severe in some other places. In Barrington the Grange hall was damaged $800 by lightning; and at Centre Strafford the house of Washington Foss, whose family had moved out that forenoon, was destroyed. Lightning struck in several places in Cambridge, Brookline and Roxbury, Mass., but did no great harm. The tent of King & Franklin's circus, which recently exhibited in this city, was blown to pieces during a performance in Lowell, and the people got out as best they could, leaving behind coats, hats, shawls, etc., but fortunately no person was seriously hurt. On Lake Winnipesaukie, in the afternoon of the 23d, there was a well defined waterspout seen, the first on record there. In Barrington that night hail fell in large quantities, many trees were uprooted by the wind, and seventeen sheep in one pasture were killed by lightning.

Friday night was by far the hottest night, and Saturday the hottest day, of the season up to that time. The city employes gave up work in the afternoon, as did also the workmen on the monument, and most of the teams engaged in grading up the park. A gentleman who touched the nose of the statue of America with the end of his finger took his hand away very suddenly, finding the temperature of the nose to be higher than that of an old toper, though the color was not so high. There were very few country teams in the city for a Saturday, and business during the day was dull, most of the local residents whose circumstances would permit of their remaining indoors, doing so.

The mercury indicated from ninety-eight to 104 in the shade in different localities near Market square about two o'clock Saturday afternoon. It is said the temperature at Appledore island reached the almost unprecedented (for that place) height of ninety-eight on that day.

Conductor Small, of the York Harbor & Beach railroad, was overcome by the intense heat on Saturday afternoon, and was taken to Preston's pharmacy from the station in a hack. Mr. Wm. B. Colley, the painter, was also so much affected by the heat that he was compelled to give up work, but was able to go to his home. No other cases have been reported to us.

Dr. E. S. Fay on Saturday had displayed on a frame in front of his store a buffalo overcoat, surmounted by a straw hat and with a fan sticking out of one of the pockets. The conglomeration was labelled "Latest news from Chicago." As the thermometer at the back of the store, where it is wholly protected from the sun, at the time indicated 101 degrees above zero, the sight of the heavy overcoat was enough to make a fat man go down to the wharf and jump overboard.

Reports of intense heat on Saturday come from all over New England. At Dover the mercury reached 102, and many persons were prostrated, none fatally however. In Salem, Mass., and Boston, it reached 100 degrees; there were four cases of sunstroke in Boston, one fatal, and five in Gloucester. In Portland, Me., business was almost wholly suspended, and many persons were prostrated. In Malden, Mass., the temperature reached 107, but only one sunstroke is reported.

BASE BALL.

The Portsmouth club tried to beat the Manchesters on the grounds of the latter, Saturday, but the Manchesters made eleven runs to four for the Portsmouths.

WILL REST ON HOLIDAYS.

In all the barber shops of this city, or at least, all the important ones, cards are displayed announcing that "on and after July 4th this establishment will be closed on all legal holidays. The barbers propose to enjoy holidays like other people, and commencing on the 4th, will not open their shops at all on those days. The custom has been to open shop in the

MARITIME NOTES.

The schooner Lily, Capt. Clark, brought in last Thursday 1000 lbs. of cod to Jameson, at Commercial wharf. The fish are reported to have averaged eighty lbs. and one of them weighed 100 lbs.

The schooner Spring Chicken, Capt. Shaney, has hauled off from trawling at this port for the present, and during the summer months will fish for the Gloucester market.

Three British schooners arrived at this port on Friday from the provinces, with ties to the Concord railroad.

The Mystic made an extra trip on Friday evening, and took to Kittery and back, from this city, about seventy-five persons to attend the fair in Trefethen's hall.

The tide was very high on Saturday night. The water of the south pond covered "the dump," and reached close up to the Richards avenue fence.

THE CITY'S VALUATION.

Following is the inventory and valuation of the city of Portsmouth for the year ending May 31st, 1888, as returned by the assessors:

Land and buildings	$4,152,814
Horses, 748	74,722

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

Assistant Naval Constructor John F. Hanscom is detached from the New York navy yard, but ordered to continue on duty as a member of the advisory board.

Asst. Paymaster H. R. Sullivan is ordered as assistant to the general storekeeper at the Portsmouth navy yard.

PERSONAL.

T. W. Quimby, superintendent of the Iowa division of the Illinois Central railroad, is with his wife visiting Mr. Frank L. Keyes of this city.

Mrs. Frances (English) Smith, wife of S. Russell Smith, died at Culpeper, Va., June 15th. She was the youngest daughter of Rear Admiral Earl English, U. S. N., retired.

Mr. Edwin B. Rundlett and wife, of the Commonwealth hotel, Boston, are visiting Hon. Gideon H. Rundlett of Court street.

Rev. Mr. Tucker, of Maine, is to assume the pastorate of the Freewill Baptist church at Hampton.

Mrs. Charles F. Shillaber of Little Rack, Ark., arrived in this city last week to pass the summer with her parents, Mr. Enoch J. Connor and wife of Union street.

Miss Anna Custer of Manchester is visiting at Mr. Wm. J. Moat's on Cass street.

Mrs. Joseph C. Perkins of this city is visiting friends at Parker Station, this state.

Mr. P. S. Watson of Sacramento, Cal., and his wife, formerly Miss Annie L. Davidson of this immediate vicinity, are visiting Mr. Robert King and wife of Hill street. Mr. Watson is a native of Randolph, but has been a resident of the Pacific coast for over twenty years.

Hon. Frank Jones, and Col. Charles A. Sinclair and family, arrived home on Saturday from Colebrook, where they went to attend the two days' celebration of the opening of the Coos railroad.

Mr. Daniel H. Trefethen, of this city, whose foot was a considerable time ago injured by a knife flying from a planing machine at the navy yard, has found himself obliged to submit to amputation of his foot at the ankle, which was performed at Portland on Tuesday of last week.

Mrs. Mary A. Simmons, widow of Naval Constructor Melvin Simmons, U. S. N., who died at the navy yard, Boston, in 1872, has just received all the pension money due her, after waiting patiently for sixteen years. She is now over eighty-three years of age, and is living with her daughter at Kingston, Mass. Of those who have assisted in bringing about this favorable result, thanks are particularly due to Naval Constructor Hichborn, who served as an apprentice and master shipwright under her late husband, and who has been most untiring in his efforts for sixteen years to help accomplish this award. The total amount of back pension received was over $6000. Mrs. Simmons when a young lady resided in this city, and is well and favorably remembered by many of our older citizens.

Mr. John H. Bartlett, who died in Kennebunk, Me., on the 11th inst., at the age of eighty-nine years, was a man of sterling integrity, and often called "Honest John." When a young man he lived in this city, and for about twelve years

New Hampshire, and Mr. Bartlett was with him four years in Washington, D. C., and there met the lady who became his wife.

H. R. Stoddard & Son received on Saturday six large, handsome horses, for their livery and sale stable. On Friday they sold a very fine pair of brown matched horses, to a gentlemen from St. Louis, who is stopping at Rye beach for the summer, and was perfecly willing to pay the handsome price asked for the beautiful span. They have two other pairs of matched horses, one light gray, and the other dark gray, for sale or to let; both pairs are very desirable for gentlemen's driving.

The treasurer of "Faith Home" most gratefully acknowledges the receipt of one hundred and fifty dollars from the late Mrs. Mary F. S. Tredick, through her son, T. Salter Tredick, Esq.

The dials of the tower clock at the new Jones brewery are to be of eleven feet diameter—the largest illuminated dials in New England excepting those of the clock on the Providence railroad station in Boston.

Age of an Old Negro.

The old time colored people in the south, those who were slaves, have no other method of reckoning dates, occurrences, and especially births and marriages, than to refer them by association to events that happened about the same time, and it is quite common to get from them answers about like the following:

"How old are you, Aunt Milly?"

"Wall, ohile, I know you hearn tell of der fust yarthquake in Norf Caliny? Wall, I wus a right smart size gal den, an' could spin an' weave my ten cuts a day for my ole missus. Dat's how ole I is."

"How old are you, Uncle Bob?"

"How ole I is? Lemme see, you know der time der stair fell, well, dat's der year Miss Mary died, an' ole massa gib my ole 'ooman one of Miss Mary's Sunday dresses, an' she ware'd it waitin' on der comp'ny der next year when ole massa brought he's secon' wife home from Georgy—an' bress de Lawd! she wur purty."

"But, Uncle Bob, I am no wiser than I was before; you haven't told me how old you are."

"Well, when dem tings happen wat I was a tellin' you 'bout, my ol'est gal, Lindy, was 'bout der same age as massa's new wife, an' me an' her daddy was chillun togethe, in Georgy, same time Gin'nl Lafayette came ter 'Gusty, an' der sogers all turn out an' beat der drums and shoot off der big canyuns. Oh golly! I specs I'se nigh onter a hundred."—Youth's Companion.

A Land Ever Poor.

India is fearfully poor today, and I find internal evidence that it has ever been so. There has ever been the few who coined gold out of muscle and crystallized sweat into gems. The few here was perhaps smaller than in any other country. It built its palaces and tombs of wondrous beauty, but there is absolutely no sort of monument of past people or masses. These have ever lived in squalor, their mud houses melting under a summer rain; their little accumulations vanishing in the smoke of their poor funeral piles. Oppression has so sunken into their natures that they have no conception of anything else. If eels were half as fond of being skinned as these people are of being ground down they would wiggle from their mud houses into the frying pan. Like spaniels, they delight in licking the hand that smites them.

There is nothing in this land to make it one of wealth, but everything to make it the opposite. Its climate enables its people to live on what would be starvation elsewhere, and to clothe themselves in some light cloth alone. Such a people never could be rich. They have been able to manufacture articles at almost a nominal cost whose rarity in Europe made them of great value, and Europe imagined these things were riches, whereas their very cheapness here was evidence of the poverty of the country.—Carter H. Harrison in Chicago Mail.

The man behind the times breaks the colt; the wise man trains it.

The Boston & Maine railroad station at Wells Beach, Me., was entered on the morning of June 20th between twelve and one o'clock, and the safe blown open. The thieves got thirty dollars.

TO LET.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture in these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.

$22 TO $900.

Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogues free.

PIANOS Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos, that they are superior to all GRAND & UPRIGHT pianos, others. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN PIANO STRINGER," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.

A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and tuners, sent, together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant.

Pianos and Organs sold for cash or easy payments; also rented. my10

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it blistered and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives an elegant finish to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

"A GREEN OLD AGE."

Few Men or Women Reach It, But Nearly All Might—The Remarkable Experience of an Octogenarian.

"There is only one thing I dread," said the late Charles Sumner, "and that is the coming on of old age."

Mr. Sumner was a brave man, and could face danger unflinchingly but to watch the hairs whiten, the lines of pain and care grow deep in the face, to feel the strength and activity going and death coming on were more than he could bear. Alas! how many others feel the same today. Pains, loss of sleep, weakness, poor appetite, and feebleness, all break the spirit. Have you never heard of Mr. Nathan Chase, of New Bedford, Mass.? A man nearly four-score years old, and hale and hearty as in youth. And yet he was supposed to be dying of heart trouble less than two years ago. Here is what he says:

"A year ago or more I began to lose flesh and strength. I sent for my physician to know the cause. He examined me, and said I was my heart; that the old machinery was wearing out, and I must be careful. Still I grew worse. Finally I got so bad I could scarcely breathe; I could not lie in bed but had to sit up all night with possibly one hour's sleep out of twenty-four. And yet to-day, I am in fine condition; can go up three flights of stairs without inconvenience, and feel as well and about as young as ever in my life before. What accomplished this? Hunt's Remedy—nothing else. It has made a new man of me, and I bless God for it every day."

Such an experience should be a valuable lesson to all readers, both old and young. It shows that a long and happy life is possible. It shows that men or women need not despond. It shows that by care and the use of the right remedy health, happiness and long life may be secured by all.

BILIOUSNESS.

THIS very common complaint, which is caused by a dormant or inactive liver, can be cured in a short time by using Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, as can also the various diseases arising from inactive liver or kidneys. These organs, if inactive, will allow impure blood to enter the heart, causing tightness about that organ and palpitation.

She suffered thirty years.

Mrs. DUDLEY CHANDLER, of Melrose, Mass., says: "I had suffered with Palpitation of the Heart more than thirty years before I found anything to give me essential relief. Last fall I tried Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, and, remarkable as it was, this Compound relieved me in two days, so that for several months afterwards I felt not the slightest touch of it, and am perfectly free from it now. Sometimes, before I took this Compound, the pulsations of my heart were so violent as to shake my whole body with rapid agitation, and at times I fainted and became entirely insensible. Now I am perfectly free from all this suffering. Consequently I can most sincerely and earnestly recommend this Compound to all like sufferers, as pre-eminently the best medicine I ever knew for Palpitation of the Heart."

This Compound is purely Vegetable, and strengthens and builds up the system while it eradicates disease.

Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles for $5. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

A LETTER FROM HONDURAS.

Interesting Facts Concerning the Banana. A Tricky Trader—The Planter's Loss.

The inhabitant of the north, who lives within easy reach of steamers and railways, can buy his bananas and other tropical fruit while the thermometer is somewhere down in the thirties, and he may have a faint longing to be somewhere down south, where "the citron blooms," and where he may imagine that the sky must be forever blue. But far from it; here, as elsewhere, there is always some detrimental element upsetting one's agricultural expectations, and the bananas, in spite or perhaps because of the luxuriant and speedy growth of the plant, is the first to suffer from the heavy storms that sweep down over the mountains or along the coast. Whole banana fields are thrown to the ground by one severe gale; the plant has not what might be termed a trunk; from the comparative slender root shoot up the leaves and stem, which, top heavy and fruit laden, is bending the tree by its own weight, and if felled to the ground by a storm it rises no more.

This is, however, not the only misfortune to which the planter must submit. Even if he is lucky enough to escape the devastating storms and have his bananas attain the necessary state of maturity, he is then at the mercy of an occasional steamer to come and buy his product. Tropical fruits are not like apples and pears, which may be preserved for months; here almost every kind of fruit must be out before it is fully ripe; bananas are cut when they are "three-quarters full," and during the summer even less, to insure their safe arrival after a voyage of ten or twelve days. Strange as it may seem, bananas left to ripen on the stem are tasteless; they must always be cut before they are fully ripe, only what is exported is often too young and too green to develop the delicious flavor which they have here.

When a steamer arrives in these tropic ports where bananas are cultivated, the agent or captain gives out tickets or orders to the various fruit growers to cut so many bunches, each cluster to be of the prescribed height—"seven hands up"—which means so many layers of bananas overlying each other. There are tall and little men, so there are bunches of bananas, but a little man may be a man for all that, not so the bunches of bananas, the small ones are counted two, or even three for one. At a stated hour of the day, or more frequently of the night, the steamer is anchored out in the bay, and at the peril of his life each planter carries out his fruit in his small boat or dory, to meet with bitter disappointment, for very often only one-half, perhaps less, of his fruit will be accepted and paid for, although it was all contracted for, but it is so easy to find some fault, and as there is no way of preserving the bananas, and no other steamer due for a week or a fortnight, there is no choice and no time for the planter; either he takes what he can get or he throws his bananas overboard, and the tide of the early morning washes the refused bunches ashore like so many bodies after a slaughter.

One often reads in books of travel that the banana is the staple article of food of the inhabitants of the tropics, but this is a mistake; on the contrary, they warn the foreigners from indulging too much in this species of fruit, which they never eat themselves, except cooked like potatoes, while the banana is yet green. It is the plantain which, throughout the West Indies and the mainland of Central and South America, takes the place of bread and potatoes. It belongs to the same family as the "Musa L.," but it cannot be eaten raw; it is cooked, roasted or fried like potatoes.—Isabel Cantini in Home Journal.

A Family of Shams.

The mart of old did not suffer more than some people we have all known for the sake of appearances. A large family, poor and proud, living in a good house and fashionable neighborhood, had their reception days, and all through the cold winter never had a fire in the furnace excepting on those days. At other times the family crowded into a small sitting room on the second floor for warmth and comfort, if they were not in the gay world. The paterfamilias of this establishment had his chamber in the fourth story of the house, to which he always retired after the 6 o'clock dinner and there worked till midnight. He once said that he had earned $100,000 in his profession as a lawyer, which his family had spent. His sons at the time were doing fairly well. It would answer for them to work and help maintain the family, but the daughters would consider it a disgrace to earn a penny, although they are all accomplished. Said one of these fair maids;

"We are a family of shams, except poor papa. We girls expect to marry rich men. It is our only escape from poverty."

And they have married rich men just in time, too, for poor old papa is dead, and ambitious, intriguing mamma is in ill health, worn out in her battle of shams.—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Triton's Head Discovered.

The excavations on the Acropolis, at the southeast angle of the Parthenon, have resulted further in a discovery of the highest importance. At a depth of about four meters from the present level, near the new Acropolis museum, has been found the bearded head of a man of heroic size, carved in porous stone, well preserved and retaining a covering of rich and brilliant coloring. The hair and beard are, as usual, painted blue and the face red. What is remarkable, however, is that the pupils of the eyes are not only painted in, but also delineated with chisel. This head, which forms one of the most ancient sculptures ever found upon the Acropolis, will attract considerable attention both from the style of workmanship and the material of which it is made. It appears to be the head of a triton, the rest of the body in the form of a serpent, ending in the tail of a fish, having been found a few days before near the same place.—London Athenæum.

A Relic of "Stonewall."

A gentleman living at Buckingham Court House, Va., preserves as a highly prized relic of Stonewall Jackson a sleeve that was cut from the Confederate leader's coat by his surgeons when he was shot.—New York World.

Not Our Antipodes.

The Chinese are not our antipodes. Indeed, we have none. An antipode is one who lives on the opposite side of the globe, and whose feet are, of course, directly opposite to the feet of those who live on this side, but directly opposite our country is a wild waste of waters. The Chinese, who dwell on the other side of the globe, but in the same latitude as we, are our periecians. Those who live on the same meridian, but in the southern hemisphere, are our anticians. Our antipodes must oppose us both in latitude and longitude.—Christian Advocate.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodle. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood; he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do? —and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

There is an alarming rebellion among the sufferers by the Chinese floods.

All who suffer from coughs, colds, irritation of the bronchial tubes, or tendency to consumption, will find in Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry a remedy as agreeable to the palate as effectual in removing disease. The Balsam is a pleasant, safe, powerful and speedy remedy; it is a remedy that cures.

For thirty years I have been troubled with catarrh—have tried a number of remedies without relief. A druggist here recommended Ely's Cream Balm. Mathewson, (Lawyer), Pawtucket, R. I.

Ely's Cream Balm gives satisfaction to every one using it for catarrhal troubles —G. K. Mellor, druggist, Mass. Apply balm in each nostril.

It Won't Bake Bread.—In other words, Hood's Sarsaparilla will not do impossibilities. Its proprietors tell plainly what it has done, submit proofs from sources of unquestioned reliability, and ask you frankly if you are suffering from any disease or affection caused or promoted by impure blood or low state of the system, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla The experience of others is sufficient assurance that you will not be disappointed in the result.

About a dozen buildings and a large lumber yard were burned in Danbury, Conn., June 18th.

W. H. Pattee, salesman for Esterbrook & Eaton, Washington St. Boston, writes: "It gives me real pleasure to say that Adamson's Botanic Balsam cured me of a severe cold, to which I have been subject, especially during the winter months, and I have in many instances recommended it to my friends, and they have all been benefitted by its use. I think it has no equal as a cough mixture."

The Phrenological Journal says, "In choosing a wife, be governed by her chin." A man is apt to be governed by the same thing after he gets a wife.

A Druggist Says.

Marvin C Brown, Druggist, Meredith village, N. H., says: I have sold your Sulpher Bitters for years, and, contrary to most medicines, I never sold a bottle to any one who said it did not help them. They cured me of those terrible sick headaches when every other remedy failed.

LOVE'S HYPOCRISY.

Her lips said, "Go;" her shining eye said, "Stay;"
How tell which was her meaning, which her will?

How read the riddle of her yes and nays,
And dissentangle each, bewildered still?
Hearing her chiling tone, all hope expired;
Seeing her glowing eyes, despair took heart;
One moment certain of the good desired;
One moment turning, hopeless, to depart.
Then, as she stood, with half averted face,
From head to feet veiled from his ardent eyes,
Sudden she changed, and with triumphant grace
Flung off the mantle of her soul's disguise!
Sweet hypocrite! how false was all her feigning,
Turning for flight, yet, while she turned, remaining.

Preparation for the Stage.

It is related of Lester Wallack that he always inquired of every female applicant for entrance into the profession whether she had been married, buried a child, quarreled with her husband, and suffered poverty. If not, he told her these were requisites for the portrayal of the cardinal emotions and for simulation of experience with the stern realities of life. Whether that is a mere tradition of the stage or not, it is certainly true that nearly that standard is set up by a manager who has made his bow to the public as the business man of an English star whom we all know. "You must have been married," he always says to women who apply to him; "if unhappily married or widowed all the better."—New York Cor. Chicago Tribune.

Germany's Aerostatic Corps.

At some recent experiments made under the auspices of the aerostatic corps of the German army, good photographs were taken of the surrounding region while a balloon was poised 2,500 meters—about a mile and a half—in air. It will be remembered that, during previous tests of this kind, so many difficulties were met that the promise of any really practicably valuable work seemed rather doubtful. Tireless German energy and study have at last succeeded in overcoming these difficulties, if we may judge from The Militar Wochenblatt, but in just what way we are not told, the reason for this being obvious.—Scientific American.

At His Post Day and Night,

The vigilant imp, indigestion, goads us with his many-lashed scourge. Each lash is a diabolic symptom. No comfort in eating, misery afterwards, little or broken rest at night, visitations of the nightmare during fitful intervals of sleep, an uprising unrefreshed and without appetite, sleepiness and yawning during the day, nervousness and irritability of temper, even monomania in extreme cases. Hard to bear, all this. Necessary? No! a thousand times no, so long as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the nation's specific for indigestion, acute or chronic, is procurable. The commencement of a course of this medicine is the commencement of a cure. Prompt relief first, absolute eradication subsequently. The truth of this statement, backed up by irrefragable testimony, is well known to the American people. So are others, viz.: that the Bitters averts and cures fever and ague and billious remittent, and removes nervousness, billiousness, constipation, and kidney and bladder troubles.

QUEER THINGS ABOUT NOSES.

The Nose of Civilization All Right with Some Interesting Exceptions.

The following paragraph has been going the rounds of the press:

"M. Le Bec, the French savant, says that the nose is gradually losing its power to discharge its traditional function in the case of the civilized peoples; when the sense of smell vanishes altogether, as will infallibly be the case one day, the organ itself will follow its example sooner or later, as nature never conserves useless organs, and the nose must go.' The olfactory sense is keener in the savage than in the civilized man."

A New York specialist on the nose, to whom this was shown, said:

"Well, Frenchmen seem to delight in making such extravagant statements. There are men and women of today who have the most powerful sense of smell. The trouble is that it is not always educated like that of the savage. Savages have good eyes, and good ears, and good noses, and because they educate their eyes and their ears and their noses they can hear, see and smell better than a man who does not educate those senses. As far as the olfactory sense dying out is concerned, that is not true. I think the reason this French savant thought so is because so many people nowadays have colds and catarrh, due to the civilization that we are struggling under. Imperfectly heated rooms, improper ventilation, a thousand and one conditions that are not all sanitary, produce colds and catarrh; and when a man has catarrh his olfactory sense, of course, is interfered with. A healthy civilized man who has no catarrh can smell just as well as a savage can smell, and can see just as well as a savage. A modern Anglo-Saxon, born and brought up in civilization, if taken out into the woods and subjected to the same education in woodcraft that a savage has, will leave the savage far behind in his sense of smell and the other senses. You know it used to be said that an Indian could run all day and run all night, and endure much more than a white man; but in these six-day-go-as-you-please races an Indian has no show whatever.

"All the senses are very intimately connected with each other. That there is a close relation between the eye and the nose is shown when a person has what is popularly called a cold in the head. The eyes will water and feel weak. Snuff pepper or irritants of any kind up the nose and it makes the eyes water. Very often there are polipii, or little growths in the nose that irritate unconsciously oftentimes. A great many specialists have found that farsightedness is affected by the nose, and that the removal of obstructions in the nose will improve the eyes, so that patients will not have to wear glasses. And nearsighted patients, it is claimed, have also been cured of their nearsightedness by treating the nose. Where a person's eyesight is affected by growths in the nose, temporary relief has been obtained by treating the parts with cocoaine. What is thus temporarily accomplished by the use of cocoaine, it is declared, can be permanently accomplished by removing the obstructions.

"Persons having such obstructions also have nose colds which come from a curious irritable susceptibility of the nose, caused by the pollen of different plants. Among the various ill effects which are produced by growths in the nose are noises in the ear, deafness, chronic catarrh of the throat, failure of the voice, asthma, heart troubles, stomach troubles, even troubles with the skin. To illustrate: Many opera singers, when their voices fail, will consult a nose specialist, who will restore their voices frequently by some simple nasal treatment. Not only asthma has been cured by such treatment, but many other chest troubles, chronic bronchitis notably. So skin diseases of the most obstinate forms, acme especially, where red pimples come out all over the face, have been cured by nasal treatment. It seems hard to believe, but one man who had been troubled for years by what was supposed to be rheumatism in his knee was entirely cured by the removal of certain growths in the nose."—New York Sun.

An English Hydrocarbon Engine.

A pleasing launch—known as of the "Zephyr type"—is now built in England, the motive power of which is obtained from a highly volatile hydrocarbon, one of the early products in the distillation of petroleum, selling in this country for about ten cents a gallon. Within five minutes after lightning up the launch is ready to start at full speed, and, the action being automatic, the boat can run at a speed of from seven to eight miles an hour for several hours without any attention whatever being required, excepting only occasionally lubricating the bearings. The entire central portion of the boat is available for passenger accommodation, giving double accommodation as compared with steam. There is a very large saving in weight of machinery owing to the very small size of the vapor generator, and this reduction in weight renders lighter scantling of hull admissible, so that the launch weighs only a ton, machinery included. The full supply requires no attention whatever, being perfectly self acting, all hand firing being abolished, and owing to absence of coal the whole arrangement is extremely cleanly. Full speed is maintained with a consumption of one and a quarter gallons of the hydrocarbon per hour.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Brazilian Empire's Progress.

The illness of the Brazilian emperor recalls what he has done, and encouraged to be done, for his empire. Twenty years ago Brazil had nine insignificant cotton manufactories, all together having 885 spindles. There are now in that country forty-six such manufactories, five of which alone have 40,000 spindles. They make yearly 33,000,000 of yards of cotton goods. This is but one item, which is paralleled in every direction. The country has also progressed in agricultural production quite as remarkably as in manufactures. The Argentine Republic in South America alone has kept pace with Brazil. Thirty years ago Dom Pedro was in a struggle with all sorts of conservatism and bigotry, which resisted progress. He persisted in importing machinery and tools and ideas, and has lived long enough to know that he has Haunts of the White Goats.

White goats have been known to hunters ever since Lewis and Clarke crossed the continent, but they have always ranked as the very rarest and most difficult to get of all American game. This reputation they owe to the nature of their haunts, rather than to their own wariness, for they have been so little disturbed that they are less shy than either deer or sheep. They are found here and there on the highest, most inaccessible mountain peaks down even to Arizona and New Mexico; but being fitted for cold climates, they are extremely scarce everywhere south of Montana and northern Idaho, and the great majority even of the most experienced hunters have hardly so much as heard of their existence. In Washington territory, northern Idaho and northwestern Montana they are not uncommon, and are plentiful in parts of the mountain ranges of British America and Alaska. Their preference for the highest peaks is due mainly to their dislike of warmth, and in the north—even south of the Canadian line—they are found much lower down the mountains than is the case farther south.

They are very conspicuous animals, with their snow white coats and polished black horns, but their pursuit necessitates so much toil and hardship that not one in ten of the professional hunters has ever killed one; and I know of but one or two eastern sportsmen who can boast a goat's head as a trophy. But this will soon cease to be the case, for the Canadian Pacific railway has opened the haunts of where the goats are most plentiful, and any moderately adventurous and hardy rifleman can be sure of getting one by taking a little time, and that, too, whether he is a skilled hunter or not, since at present the game is not difficult to approach. The white goat will be common long after the elk has vanished, and it has already outlasted the buffalo. —Theodore Roosevelt in The Century.

A Beetle in Harness.

Not long since many newspaper paragraphs were current about a pretty beetle which the southern ladies were in the habit of wearing on the corsage, where it crawled at will, held by a tiny gold chain. This beetle is the maqueche. It is perfectly inoffensive, has no odor and does not deface or stain the most delicate fiber. The adjusting of the golden harness is a nice operation, the metal being soldered on it. The harness consists of a girdle about the insect's waist—between the thorax and the abdomen—to which above and below is joined a slender band passing over the posterior portion of the body, longitudinally, while a small chain is attached to this harness by a little staple, which chain terminates in a hook or pin to fasten in the bodice.

By many Mexicans the insect is regarded as an amulet or mascot, and is usually highly prized by foreigners when obtainable. Parties who have owned insects of this kind have often attempted to maintain them on sugar and water, but the beetles always perished in a short time. But if fed on decayed wood, which is their natural food, they may be kept alive and thriving for more than a year.

The wing covers or shell of the beetle is exceedingly hard. Its color is a light chocolate shade, and when full grown it is about an inch and a half long. It has been stated that this beetle can cut through soft metal, and this fact is one of the most interesting about it. When placed in a glass jar covered by a thin pewter lid it has been known after a few hours of chipping and cutting to make a hole sufficiently large to allow it to pass through. Specimens of this insect and the cut metal were shown at a recent meeting of the Microscopical society.—New York Evening Sun.

Indians and Spanish Friars

The aborigines never showed any zealous faith in Christianity. Unlike the negroes in the southern states, they took no delight in singing hymns among themselves; unlike the Polynesian Christians, they never went out to convert the neighboring heathen. When they escaped from the missions, as they frequently did, they always left their new religion behind them. In the course of three-quarters of a century thousands of such fugitives fled to the San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys, and to the Sierra Nevada, and mingled with the wild tribes, without leaving the least trace there of permanent Christian influence.

The friars did not teach the aborigines to be great mechanics. Among its Spanish settlers, the territory did not possess one blacksmith, carpenter, wheelwright, shipwright, or turner competent to take a respectable position among his fellow craftsmen at the time in London, Paris or New York. No good plow, good wagon, good boat or good rifle was ever made in a mission workshop. The Indians did not have an opportunity to learn thoroughly any mechanical trade, or any of the finer branches of horticulture. There was no skillful nursery man among them.—John S. Hittel in Overland Monthly.

Where Eels Are Caught.

Very early in the spring men go out with spears in the swampy meadows that border the little creeks and tread about with bare feet until they come upon a place where the mud is soft. In such a spot there is likely to be a spring of fresh water, and the spears thrust down through the ooze bring up at every stroke between their prongs writhing eels. It is nothing unusual to get three or four bucketfuls out of one hole. Most of the eels marketed, however—and vast quantities of them are brought here—are taken by the familiar process known as "bobbing." In other words, they are fished for at night with bunches of worms done up in loops at the end of a string. Many are caught in traps known as "eel pots," from which the poor victim is unable to make his escape, having once strayed in after the food set as a bait. Eel skins are worth $2 a hundred for flails. They are also used as bluefish bait, and by rheumatic patients to tie around the limb affected.—Boston Cor. New Orleans Picayune.

OF INDIANA.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultual, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

The convention was called to order at 11:05 A. M. on Monday, and at 11:20 Congressman Boutelle of Maine took the platform and read two cablegrams from Blaine, sent from Edinburgh, Scotland, to Boutelle and Manly at Chicago. The first was dated on the 24th, and read as follows:

Earnestly resquest all friends to respect my Paris letter.

The second, dated the 25th, said:

"I think I have the right to ask my friends to respect my wishes and refrain from voting for me. Please make this and the former despatch public.

The roll of states was then called for the

And Benjamin Harrison of Indiana was declared the nominee of the republican party for President of the United States from March 4th, 1889.

The wildest enthusiasm prevailed in the convention, and the republican emblem, the American flag, was waved in such numbers as to dwarf the display, at the St. Louis convention, of the foreign bandana under which the Cleveland party are fighting this year. The nomination was made usanimous.

The nomination of Harrison was regarded as assuring the second place on the ticket to Levi P. Morton of New York.

Benjamin Harrison was born at North Bend, Ohio, Aug. 20th, 1833. He entered the army in July, 1862, as second lieutenant in an Indiana company, and was discharged in June, 1865, as brevet brigadier general. He served as United States senator from Indiana for six years from March 4th, 1881.

Modern Treatment of Pneumonia.

The Medical Record, referring to some important facts recently brought toward by Dr. Henry Hartshorne, reopens the question whether the modern treatment of pneumonia is a failure. In the Pennsylvania Hospital from 1845 to 1847, when venesection prevailed in the treatment of pneumonia, only one in 16 patients died from the disease. From 1884 to 1886 the proportion of the deaths was greater—1 in 3.2. In the United States Army between 1840 and 1844, when bleeding was a part of the treatment, the mortality was only one in 11.5, while between 1855 and 1859, after venesection was abandoned, the mortality from pneumonia increased to one in 6.67. The Record considers the anti-pyretic method of treating pneumonia "distinctly pernicious," but apparently indorses Dr. Hartshorne's recommendation for a return to moderate bleeding in the early stage of the disease, except in aged, asthenic, alcoholic and a few other patients.

The Fifth Annual Musical Festival at the Weirs commences July 10th, and holds over the 11th, 12th and 13th. Every preparation has been made for a grand occasion, the best ever held there, which is saying much.

The reception of the graduating class of the Newmarket high school occurred last Friday evening at the town hall. Music was furnished by Chandler's orchestra of Portland, and there was a concert from eight o'clock to nine, followed by dancing.

The baccalaureate sermon to the pupils of Berwick academy at South Berwick, Me., was preached on Sunday last in the Congregational church here by Rev. George Lewis. The class day exercises will be held in the same church Tuesday, afternoon, and the graduating exercises Wednesday, afternoon.

Why Men Drink.

That wonderful humorist, Tom Hood, once remarked "There are five reasons why men drink! Good wine; a friend; because they are dry; or at least they may be bye and bye; or any other reason why." The last is perhaps the most common reason. James Parton once headed an article "will the coming man drink?" but as he failed to answer the query we will express a decided opinion: that, until the coming man learns to prize home, social family ties above all others, will he learn not to abuse his own organism. In March last a writer in the "Medical age" made some practical remarks upon this subject, and offered a timely hint which prohibition advocates would do well to note.

He says: "As long as the imperfections of humanity remain unfitted to its surroundings and conditions, so long evil and misery will continue, and men seek refuge in strong drink. Increase the sum of human happiness by whatever means possible, lessen the burdens and ameliorate the woes of mankind, remove hunger, disease and pain by a better physical and moral education, and you will have plucked out the fangs of that dire monster"—intemperance.

Among the worst morbid conditions resulting from the use of alcoholic liquors, as well as from improper food and customs of eating, are imflammation of the stomach, liver, kidneys and brain.

It matters not in what part of the body inflammation exists, or how severe it may be, whether it takes the form of gastric inflammation, in despepsia, or as in bronchitis, catarrh, hay-fever, pneumonia, rheumatism, or as in common cuts and bruises, Johnson's Anodyne Liniment will conquer it, relieve the pain and prove to you that it is indeed an anodyne of mighty power, and unlike all others, as it is for internal as well as external use.

A good Baptist deacon told us not long since that "he had known Johnson's Liniment for sixty years, and had used it in his family for over forty years." I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass., will send any person an instructive pamphlet free, telling all about this valuable household remedy and how to use it economically. One teaspoonful properly used is worth a whole bottle used as some people use it.

How the Paraguayans Fought.

It was not alone the Paraguayan men and boys who had to bear arms in that struggle. "Food for powder" of that kind was soon exhausted. Then came the women's turn to fight, and, indeed, from an early period of the war, mothers, wives and sweethearts had donned the soldier's uniform and fought bravely in the ranks with those they loved.

After a certain battle, when the burying parties were busily pursuing their grim work, they came upon the bodies of two loving companions in arms, clasped in a last embrace.

The head of one rested on the other's breast, while an arm was closely drawn round him, the disengaged hand being raised to stanch the life blood flowing from a cruel gash. They looked like two true comrades whose friendship death itself had not been able to sever.

That, however, was not all their history. A wounded mother, in a soldier's guise, had dragged herself to the spot where her son lay bleeding, and there, regardless of her own fatal injuries, had placed his head upon her breast, and tried to soothe his last living moments, as she had done his first on earth.—Winthrop's "Reminiscences."

Evolution of the Colored Race.

The negro is changing in appearance and losing some of the birthmarks peculiar to the African race. The new generation is showing the effects of a higher culture. Especially is this noticeable in the towns where contact with the whites shows its effect. The flat nosed, kinky headed negro is passing away and becoming an unknown race. All the colored children, no matter how dusky in hue, show the change. Among the females, long hair of that peculiar woolly appearance, hangs in long braids or curls down their backs. Aquiline noses and smaller mouths with thinner lips are the rule. For years, and in fact ever since their freedom, the negresses have endeavored to do away with the short kinky hair bestowed upon them by their ancestors. Much of their spare change is invested in various tonics and invigorators, and the long attention and care bestowed upon it is shown in their descendants. The South Georgia negro is an evidence of evolution, the survival of the fittest.—Atlanta Constitution.

Solidifying Petroleum Fuel.

Experiments are still being made under the direction of the Russian government, with the view of finding a process, at once practicable as well as desirable on the score of economy and cleanliness, of solidifying the petroleum used as fuel. According to the report made by Dr. Kauffmann, who has had the principal charge of these experiments, a successful method of accomplishing the desired results consists simply in heating the oil and afterward adding from 1 to 3 per cent. of soap. The latter dissolves in the oil, and the liquid on cooling forms a mass having the appearance of cement and the hardness of compact tallow. The product is hard to light, burns slowly and without smoke, but develops much heat, and leaves about 2 per cent. of a hard, black residuum.—New York Sun.

The First Symptoms

Of all Lung diseases are much the same: feverishness, loss of appetite, sore throat, pains in the chest and back, headache, etc. In a few days you may be well, or, on the other hand, you may be down with Pneumonia or "galloping Consumption." Run no risks, but begin immediately to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Several years ago, James Birchard, of Darien, Conn., was severely ill. The doctors said he was in Consumption, and that they could do nothing for him, but advised him, as a last resort, to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking this medicine, two or three months, he was pronounced a well man. His health remains good to the present day.

J. S. Bradley, Malden, Mass., writes: "Three winters ago I took a severe cold, which rapidly developed into Bronchitis and Consumption. I was so weak that I could not sit up, was much emaciated, and coughed incessantly. I consulted several doctors, but they were powerless, and all agreed that I was in Consumption. At last, a friend brought me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. From the first dose, I found relief. Two bottles cured me, and my health has since been perfect."

The Story of a Werewolf.

A noble gentleman of Brittany, in high favor with the king, married a lovely lady. There would have been no limit to their happiness but that three days out of every week the gentleman mysteriously disappeared. When pressed by his wife for an explanation he confessed that he was a Bisclaveret or werewolf, and for three days in the week was condemned to assume a wolf's shape. The lady was sore troubled and determined to rid herself of so objectionable a husband. Learning that if the lord's clothes were stolen after the metamorphosis was effected he could not resume his human shape, she and a false cavalier who loved her watched him and got possession of the castoff garments. As from that day the husband was no more seen she married the cavalier.

One day the king was out hunting when a wolf that had been sore pressed by the hounds made its way to him and looked at him with so pitiful and human an expression that the king's heart was touched. He spared it and brought it home to his court. The animal proved gentle and tractable and became a great favorite. But one day when the false cavalier came to court it jumped upon him with a wild cry and bit him severely. And when some days later the wife claimed an audience with the king the wolf flew at her, too, and bit off her nose. Swords were drawn and the wolf would have been killed, but that a wise man counseled the prince to find out first what could be the reason of the wolf's grudge to the lady and her husband. And, being threatened with imprisonment, the lady, terrified, confessed all she knew, and when the clothes of her former husband were given to the wolf he was transformed into human shape and the king rejoiced to recognize his old favorite. The guilty pair were ignominiously banished. They lived several years and had many children, all the girls being born without noses.—American Notes and Queries.

Plain Lectures on Health.

If the women's colleges would add to their course of study a series of very plain lectures on the care of health, it would be worth any amount of Anglo-Saxon literature on political economy. Nothing would make a school more popular than to supplement such lectures with strict personal care of the habits of each pupil. It would become a "beauty school" in the full sense of the word, as celebrated for sending out young ladies with brilliant complexions as Harvard for its athletics. And why is it not as necessary for young ladies to have their faces chased as to have their manners and their grammar corrected? Now, the most high minded and fastidious of Lady Sylvias has a slender body, which works over daily not less than seven pounds of food and drink, or ought to, and throws out no less than five pounds of waste by its great ducts, the bowels and kidneys, and its millions of needle ducts in the skin. Really this is very terrible for discussion, and I warmly agree with her majesty Victoria in thinking stomachs entirely unfit for mention to ears polite. But thousands of women are losing beauty and dying of painful disease for want of knowing the full significance of their internal economy and the care they owe it.—Shirley Dare.

Painting the Baby's Face.

A letter from Paris informs us that the doctors are again at war with silly mothers belonging to the fashionable circles. The latest fanaticism of La Mode, is to apply the horrors of face painting to little children. In the public gardens, babies of 8 years old may now be seen whose eyebrows have been blacked or dyed by their senseless mothers. Other anxious parents, distressed at the vulgarly ruddy and rustic hue of their children's cheeks, carefully powder them before sending them forth to meet the gaze and criticism of the world. Little coquettes of 10 years are not permitted to go abroad until the regulation black stroke has been painted beneath their eyes. The doctors warn the mothers that when the children thus barbarously treated reach the age of 16 they will have a colorless and ruined complexion, to say nothing of the injury to health, which is an argument less likely to produce much effect.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Who Are the Lucky Ones?

After all, what is luck? She is the handmaiden of every man at one time or another, and in one form or another. She is ever by one's side, ready to give a helping hand. The blind do not see her; the timid or irresolute decline to take her outstretched hand. The unlucky man is the man who forgets to strike when the iron is hot. The lucky man is the one who takes advantage of proffered fortune. Circumstances, it is to be confessed, throw more of such proffers in the way of one than another. But if one will follow the footprints of the lucky men of the world it will be found that at the points where they seized fortune at the flood there are tracks which show that there were many faltering and hesitating ones near by, any one of whom had within his reach the same opportunities as the fortunate one had.—Chicago Times.

The Doll Had It, Too.

There was a slight impediment in a little Boston girl's speech, and she had been "drilled" out of all patience by well intentioned teachers and friends. When she received a doll for a birthday present, she was delighted to find that by pulling out a green string a very passable "mamma" was produced. But the "papa" which followed the twitching of a white string was imperfect, and when the little mother discovered that her child had inherited her own infirmity, her heroic nature was shown. She lost no time in putting to account her own training, and pulling repeatedly on the white string, with an unfaltering hand, she said firmly: "Dolly, you must be trained till you learn to say that plainer."—Detroit Free Press.

How Many Hours to Sleep.

Up to the fifteenth year most young people require ten hours, and till the twentieth nine hours. After that age every one finds out how much he or she requires, though as a general rule, at least six or eight hours are necessary. Eight hours sleep will prevent more nervous derangements, however, than any medicines can cure. During growth there must be ample sleep if the brain is to develop to its full extent, and the more nervous, excitable or precocious a child is, the longer sleep should it get if its intellectual progress is not to come to a premature standstill or its life to be cut short at an early age.—Chicago Journal.

CIRCULAR—JULY 4TH.

Headquarters Chief Marshal Dedication Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument July 4th, 1888.

PORTSMOUTH, June 26th.

For the purpose of protecting from possible injury all citizens and visitors, to enable the Fire Department to respond quickly in case of an alarm, and to facilitate promptness in carrying out the programme, the Chief Marshal makes the following announcement:

The committe on route have decided to rope off certain streets as follows:

Vicinity of depots during formation of procession;

Vicinity of Goodwin Park during dedicatory services;

Vicinity of Marginal road during exhibition of fireworks.

From the enclosures thus formed vehicles of all kinds will be excluded during their occupancy by the procession and people. Carriages conveying invited guests, the press, or on errands of public or private necessity, only, may temporarily suspend this rule. Pedestrians can pass the lines at all times, as is the usual custom.

The purpose of the committee being one of public safety, the chief marshal will expect a cheerful compliance on the part of citizens and visitors with the above regulations.

Approved.

The Portsmouths have played three games this season, and won them all.

CAMPAIGN FLAGS.

The Penny Post ran out a twenty-five-foot flag bearing Harrison's name early Monday afternoon; and in the evening shortly after eight o'clock, the Republican club sent out at the headquarters a very handsome flag, to the accompaniment of national airs performed by the Portsmouth band, cheers for the next president, fireworks and red light. Congress street was thronged, and there was more real enthusiasm displayed by the republicans in a half-hour than the entire democracy of Rockingham country have shown over Cleveland's renomination during the whole time since that gentleman's caucus met at St. Louis to approve his orders.

A RARE JUNE DAY.

Saturday, June 23d, was the hottest June day in New England for seventeen years.

ISLES OF SHOALS, June 25th.

Mr. Editor: I notice in the Chronicle of this morning, in an article headed "Summer weather," that the temperature at Appledore is given as reching the height of ninety-eight last Saturday. This is an error. Last Saturday was the hottest day I ever knew at the Shoals, but the mercury was no higher than eighty-eight, and that only for an hour or so, in the middle of the day. And during all the intense heat of last summer there were but three days when the temperature was above eighty. If you will kindly give this space in your valued paper in the interest of truth, you will much oblige an OLD SHOALER.

Miller & Freeman's circus, which is to appear in this city July 5th, sustained several thousand dollars' damage during a squall in Leominster, Mass., Saturday afternoon, their big tent being blown to pieces.

Twenty-three sudden deaths from heat were reported in New York from Sunday noon to ten o'clock Monday morning.

MARITIME NOTES

The steamer Oceanic, Capt. Robinson, will make two round trips every Sunday from now until the close of the season, leaving the Shoals at 9:30 A. M. and 2:30 P. M., and this city at 10:50 A. M. and 3:45 P. M.

The lighthouse tender Iris, having on board Comdr. Oliver A. Batcheller, U. S. N., inspector of the first lighthouse district, arrived at the navy yard about noon on Monday, the 25th, and after taking on board several buoys, anchors etc., sailed for Portland in the afternoon.

The schooner Mary Willey, Capt. Zach Williams, arrived on the 25th from Bangor with lumber to John H. Broughton.

The American schooner Messenger, from Bay Chaleur, and the British schooner Annie Currier, from Moncton, N. B., both with railroad ties, arrived at this port on the 24th. Also the British schooner Cumminger, from Sidney, Cape Breton, with coal to J. Albert Walker.

The brick schooner Clara B. Kennard arrived at Boston on Saturday, and the Sadie A. Kimball, Hattie Lewis, Triton and Lillie arrived there on Sunday, from this port.

The schooner John Lenthall, while being towed down river Monday forenoon by the water boat Valora, carried away her mainmast head in passing through the draw of the Dover point bridge.

Thomas Williams and Manuel Rose, who parted company with the fishing schooner Margaret of Gloucester while setting trawls southeast of Sankaty head over a week ago, and were supposed to have been lost, were picked up twenty-six hours later by the schooner Mary Louise of Stonington, and taken to Block island.

BASE BALL.

Dover and Portsmouth at the South end grounds this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

RAILROAD ITEMS.

The summer arrangement of the Boston & Maine railroad went into effect June 25th. Ten trains will now run each way daily between this city and Boston, and five on the York Harbor & Beach road. Two new combination smoking and baggage cars for the latter road have just come out of the car shop at Salem, Mass.

Conductor Silsbee, of the Boston & Maine railroad, has been appointed to conduct the Pullman train between Boston and Portland over the Eastern division. Mr. Silsbee will give up his residence in this city and remove to Boston.

The railroad station at North Hampton was broken into Sunday morning, and a small amount of money stolen.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT.

The Circuit court of the United States will be in session to-day in this city. Case Dunn's estate against the receiver of the Portland & Ogdensburg Railroad Co. is put in order for trial.

AN INTERESTING NUMBER.

The New Hampshire Gazette of Thursday, June 28th, will contain an official list of all the subscribers to the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument fund, with a description of the monument, and other matter of special interest in the same connection. Also a supplement containing the official statement of all the savings bank in the state coming under the provisions of Chap. 34, Pamphlet Laws of 1887, giving the amount of deposits on hand on the 1st of April, 1888, which had not been added to or drawn from for twenty years or more previous, with the depositors' names and places of residence, and the sum due each one.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Edward B. Goodall, Jr., arrived in this city Saturday night from Denver, Col., on a visit.

Mr. Charles Main and wife have arrived from San Francisco, after being absent from Portsmouth several years.

Mrs. Sarah H. Marcy is at the Lamar house, Knoxville, Tenn.

Mrs. George Peckham, of Charlestown, Mass., is visiting her parents, Wm. Baker and wife, of Dover street.

Col. Horatio Merrill and wife, of Portland, are visiting Mr. John S. Rand, of State street.

Acknowledgment.

The undersigned acknowledges most gratefully the sum of one hundred and fifty (150) dollars from T. Salter Tredick, Esq., an offering to the Chase Home for Children, given in accordance with a wish expressed by his mother, the late Mrs. Mary F. S. Tredick.

JOHN S. RAND, Treasurer.

A local correspondent writes: "There are many recalcitrants against having the exhibition of fireworks on the 4th of July at Langdon Park. Some of the contributors to the fund threaten to withdraw their contributions, preferring to have the show on the Parade, where the first revolutionary 'mobs' of the colonies were wont to hold their assemblies."

We are indebted to Mr. James R. Yeaton for a mess of green peas which were raised on his farm at Oak Hill and picked Monday. Although a little later this season than usual, they were none the less acceptables. No fresher or better vegetable can be found than those raised by Mr. Yeaton, and which he has for sale at his store on Congress street.

J. Alex McClunie, of the Hartford Decorating Co., Hartford, Conn., who has been engaged to decorate Goodwin Park for the Fourth of July, is in this city and has made arrangements to decorate several private dwellings. Mr. McClunie comes highly recommended, and any of our citizens who desire his services will do well to address him at "Box 573, City, care A. R. Junkins."

The saloon and pool room No. 9 Water street, formerly occupied by the late Harry Lombard, will be opened on the 4th of July by William Dunn.

The Army and Navy Journal of June 23d says: "The Swatara was docked at the navy yard, Norfolk, last week, and an examination of her bottom showed it to be very foul. Long grass three feet long, was hanging on, and the copper was corroded to the very wood. Asst. Naval Constructor Bowles recommended that new copper be put on her bottom, but he was overruled, and the ship will make her sea trial and go on the South Atlantic station in that condition." "A despatch of June 21st states that the Swatara went on her six hours trial, and was in such a leaky condition that she had to return to the navy yard, where she will again be put on the dry dock for repairs." "During the six hours trial of the Swartara in Chesapeake bay on Wednesday the highest speed made with five of six boilers in use was eleven and six-tenth knots. The sixth boiler broke down, and the ship was one foot below usual her draught."

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS. The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers follow in the manufacture $22 TO $900. lowed in the manufacture in these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.
Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogues free.
PIANOS. Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos, that they are superior to all GRAND & UPRIGHT pianos made by other makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "Mason & Hamlin PIANO STRINGER," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.
A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and tuners, sent, together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant.

GLYCEROLE!
A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.
Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.
It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.
Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.
We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.
Price 25 cents per bottle.

"A GREEN OLD AGE."
Few Men or Women Reach It, But Nearly All Might—The Remarkable Experience of an Octogenarian.
"There is only one thing I dread," said the late Charles Sumner, "and that is the coming on of old age."

Mr. Sumner was a brave man, and could face danger unflinchingly but to watch the hairs whiten, the lines of pain and care grow deep in the face, to feel the strength and activity going and death coming on, were more than he could bear. Alas! how many others feel the same today. Pains, loss of sleep, weakness, poor appetite, and feebleness, all break the spirit. Have you never heard of Mr. Nathan Chase, of New Bedford, Mass.? A man nearly four-score years old, and hale and hearty as in youth. And yet he was supposed to be dying of heart trouble less than two years ago. Here is what he says:
"A year ago or more I began to lose flesh and strength. I sent for my physician to know the cause. He examined me, and said it was my heart; that the old machinery was wearing out, and I must be careful. Still I grew worse. Finally it got so bad I could scarcely breathe; I could not lie in bed but had to sit up all night with possibly one hour's sleep out of twenty-four. And yet to-day, I am in fine condition; can go up three flights of stairs without inconvenience, and feel as well and about as young as ever in my life before. What accomplished this? Hunt's Remedy—nothing else. It has made a new man of me, and I bless God for it every day."
Such an experience should be a valuable lesson to all readers, both old and young. It shows that a long and happy life is possible. It shows that men or women need not despond. It shows that by care and the use of the right remedy health, happiness and long life may be secured by all.

BILIOUSNESS.
THIS very common complaint, which is caused by a dormant or inactive liver, can be cured in a short time by using Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, as can also the various diseases arising from inactive liver or kidneys. These organs, if inactive, will allow impure blood to enter the heart, causing tightness about that organ and palpitation.
She suffered thirty years.
MRS. DUDLEY CHANDLER, of Melrose, Mass., says: "I had suffered with Palpitation of the Heart more than thirty years before I found anything to give me essential relief. Last fall I tried Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, and, remarkable as it was, this Compound relieved me in two days, so that for several months afterwards I felt not the slightest touch of it, and am perfectly free from it now. Sometimes, before I took this Compound, the palpitation of my heart were so violent as to shake my whole body with rapid agitations, and at times I fainted and became entirely insensible. Now I am perfectly free from all this suffering. Consequently I can most sincerely and earnestly recommend this Compound to all this suffering class, as pre-eminently the best medicine I ever knew for Palpitation of the Heart."
This Compound is purely Vegetable, and strengthens and builds up the system while it eradicates disease.
Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles for $5. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

ADAMSON'S BOTANIC COUGH BALSAM
More than twenty years ago Adamson's Botanic Balsam was introduced generally throughout New England as a remedy for Coughs, Colds and Pulmonary complaints. Since its introduction it has constantly won its way into public favor, until now it is the universal decision that ADAMSON'S BOTANIC BALSAM is the best remedy for curing Coughs, Colds and Asthma.

LIGHTS UNDER BUSHELS.
The Great Herd of Copyists—Faith in One's Self—Persistence.
If your faith in your power, your confidence in yourself, or your idea or plan are destroyed or weakened by the first sneer or voice of opposition it meets, you are hiding yourself and your light under the bushel. You will remember that a large proportion of the world are mere copyists. They do only what others have done before them and only what they have learned from others. They oppose and sneer at every new idea, and afterward applaud it and use it, when the man or woman who will not allow their light to be hid under the bushel force it into notice and success. In days past the great herd of copyists sneered and ridiculed the idea of steam as motive power on land and sea. So they did with the electric telegraph and the telephone. So it will be with hundreds of new ideas, new inventions and new powers to be developed in the near future.
These ultra conservative deadweights in every business, art or profession, do not like changes. They are wedded to their rut. They don't want to get out of it. To do so makes them homesick. Besides, it hurts their business. They want to jog on in the "good old way"—in the stage coach instead of the railroad, in the "sailing packet" instead of the steamer. They oppose the new as naturally as rats and earwigs oppose the entrance of light to their underground habitations, and for a similar reason. The light annoys them. It drives them off. It ruins their business. They "love darkness better than light." Hence, they want your light "under a bushel."
If you allow them to keep your light under that bushel they will keep you under it also. They will keep you always in the background. If the first Napoleon had not by force of will ridden over the objections of the veteran martinets who opposed his new methods of warfare, he would never have triumphed at Marengo and Austerlitz. If Cyrus W. Field had not persistently kept his mind centered on the project of the ocean cable despite sneer, obstruction and failure after failure, it might not have been laid today. The glow of every new light upon the world is always the work of one man or a very few men against the many. Three or four men in California, years ago, built the Pacific railroad. They first kindled their light in a dingy Sacramento grocery. They kept it lighted and also kept pushing it to the front, while others were indifferent, or dared not take hold of such an undertaking.
You had no need to bluster or bully your light to the front. It is not the force of physical effort or speech that will carry it there and keep it there. It is the silent force of a persistent determination, bent on one single aim. When you are temporarily overcome and tired out through the opposition of the deadweights and earwigs who love darkness, fall back on yourself and the power behind you. Leave the crowd, leave all not in sympathy with you. Go to your room, seclude yourself. Sleep, and before you sleep, demand, pray, desire more power to cope with opposition. It will surely be given to you. How, we know not, but you will enter on the contest tomorrow with renewed strength, and the silent power you gain in this way will, of itself, work results for you.
In the past thousands of "lights" have, by this dead weight, run in a rut, live in a rut and die in a rut sentiment and crushing out force, been hidden under bushels and died out under bushels. Actors of genuine humor and talent are today playing in third rate theatres or accepting inferior parts in first class ones because they have allowed sneer or opposition or a more or less failure to drag their minds into that permanent discouraged, disheartened attitude which is always saying: "What's the use of trying? Luck's against me—I'm bound to fail, anyway!" On the heels of this comes drink, to "drown care."
So it is with thousands of other actors in all the parts of life. Their own permanent state of mind is the real and only force which keeps their "light under the bushel." They use their own force against themselves. They expend it in talking and complaining to others. They have no knowledge or faith in the fact that a mind decided and determined on a purpose at all times and in all places—a mind that fights off the mood of despondency and discouragement as it would fight off a mad dog—carries and uses the greatest of all powers to keep its light shining and keep it ever in the front.—Prentice Mulford in New York Star

Exclusiveness of "Society."
The number of people who have real merit and talent for society, who are kept out by the exclusiveness of self constituted tyrants of society, must be very large; but if they have tact and learn to wait, they will find their way. The most certain way to please is to show a modest indifference to the smiles of the great. (They call it patronage in England. We have no such ugly word here, nor have be any really "great people" socially.) They should not "push." There is, however, always an ideal exclusiveness, a society which should only admit the cultivated, the wise, and the good. Every hostess should inquire into the general characteristics of her guests, their moral, social and political standing. We use the word political in its largest sense. In spite of all we can do, objectionable men and women do get into the most carefully guarded society; and we have as yet no sush inviolable insight that we can rates Dives and Lazarus before their death as they are said to be rated afterward.—Mrs. M. E. W. Sherwood.

The Old, Old Passion.
She had received with manifestations of delight the gift of a baby brother, and called him with pretty joy "tunnin' brosser." After a while it was noticed her ardor had cooled, jealousy was inserting its entering wedge. One day the mother and a visitor sat sewing and chatting. Baby lay napping on the visitor's lap and Rosebud was playing near by. Unnoticed, she drew closer, up went her dimpled hand and down it came on the tiny sleeper's cheek. The mother sprang to her, caught and shook her. "Naughty little girl, to treat your dear baby brother so; how could you do it?" 'Tunnin' brosser," sobbed Rosebud, "'sturbed me dis mornin', and I'se been o'oss and 'sleepy ever since 'cause o' him."—Detroit Free Press.

Intelligent receiving clerks in the larger telegraph offices have the best possible opportunities for the study of human nature. The half written messages left at the close of each day's business often constitute a volume of half finished romances. It is curious, for example, how occasional messages, that is, messages inspired by an occasion likely to suggest the same general train of thought in the average mind, will run in verbal grooves. The time will come, no doubt, when the telegraph companies will have printed blanks of condolence, congratulation, inability to meet "that note," proposal for [illegible]

A Scrofulous Taint.
"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood; he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

The experience of others is sufficient assurance that you will not be disappointed in the result.
The Grant farm, near St. Louis, Mo., was last week sold under foreclosure of a mortgage to the late W. H. Vanderbilt.
W. H. Pattee, salesman for Esterbrook & Eaton, Washington St. Boston, writes: "It gives me real pleasure to say that Adamson's Botanic Balsam cured me of a severe cold, to which I have been subject, especially during the winter months, and I have in many instances recommended it to my friends, and they have all been benefitted by its use. I think it has no equal as a cough mixture."

WHY WORK FOR ANOTHER, or on small salary? Why continue working on a worn-out farm? Why try to secure a living from such high-priced or heavily-mortgaged farms? Why work on rented land? Why not start for yourself? Why not secure at once some of the low-priced but very fertile and well located lands adjacent to railroads now to be obtained by those going to Northern Dakota and Minnesota, where you can make a larger net profit per acre than on the high-priced or worn-out land you now occupy? Why not go and look the situation over, and see for yourself, or at least obtain further information, which will be sent free, if you will address C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn. ?

She Tried and Knows.
A leading chemist of New York says: "No plasters of such merit as the Ath-lo-pho-ros Plasters have ever before been produced." They are a novelty because they are not made simply to sell cheap, they are the best that science, skill and money can produce, and will do what is claimed for them. For sprains, aches, weakness, lameness, etc., they are unequaled.

Cannon Shooting Fifteen Miles.

Some important experiments have been made at the Shoeburyness school of gunnery in high angle firing. A London correspondent writes: Probably no step of recent years is likely to lead to greater results, for if the experiment should be repeated with the same success, it is undeniable that war ships will have to be as fully protected on their decks as they are now on their broadsides. The experiments were made with the 9-inch or 23-centimeter gun used as a howitzer. An elevation of 37 degs. was given and battering charges were used with Palliser shells. Out of four shots three fell within a space of 500 feet by 80 feet, representing the deck of a first class ironclad, and the range attained was twelve miles!

Now, if it be really possible, three times out of four, or for that matter once out of four times, to throw a nine inch shell upon the deck of a ship in midchannel between Dover and Calais, another proof will have been given that in the tedious duel between gun and armor the gun has much the best of it. What is very important, too, is that the heavy charges and the high angle did not strain either gun or carriage in the least, and one of the officers present has said that he believed the gun would stand 45 degs. of elevation without injury, while with 42 degs. a range of fifteen miles would be secured. Now, at fifteen miles, a ship is "hull down," so it comes to this, that we can throw a nine inch shell on to the deck of a ship before we can see it! Surely this is the most marvelous thing yet attempted in gunnery, which of later years has been so fruitful in surprises.—Army and Navy Register.

At His Post Day and Night.

The vigilant imp, indigestion, goads us with his many-lashed scourge. Each lash is a diabolic symptom. No comfort in eating, misery afterwards, little or broken rest at night, visitations of the nightmare during fitful intervals of sleep, an uprising unrefreshed and without appetite, sleepiness and yawning during the day, nervousness and irritability of temper, even monomania in extreme cases. Hard to bear, all this. Necessary? No! a thousand times no, so long as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the nation's specific for indigestion, acute or chronic, is procurable. The commencement of a course of this medicine is the commencement of a cure. Prompt relief first, absolute eradiction subsequently. The truth of this statement, backed up by irrefragable testimony, is well known to the American people. So are others, viz.: that the Bitters averts and cures fever and ague and billious remittent, and removes nervousness, billiousness, constipation, and kidney and bladder troubles.

Tony Hart, the Irish comedian, has been committed to the insane asylum in Worcester, Mass., with softening of the brain. He is incurable.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla operates radically upon the blood, thoroughly cleansing and invigorating. As a safe and absolute cure for the various disorders caused by constitutional taint of infection, this remedy has no equal. Take it this month.

A Hindoo Girls' High school has been started at Allahabad. It has already more than a hundred pupils.

Unable to Tell.

Yes, that was so. For years I suffered with scrofula; sores broke all over my body, and I am unable to tell one half that I suffered. I was not able to obtain relief until I used Sulpher Bitters, which completely cured me.—C. B. Dale, 17 Allston street, Boston.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 50c. and $1. Trial size free. At all Druggists.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS — Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue, tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases the tumors. All druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia. 6tu69

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. DELUSIONS OF AUTHORS.

Visions Which Appear to Overworked Authors—Wilkie Collins' "Green Woman."

In his interesting paper on contemporary English novelists, the second of a series devoted to "London as a Literary Center," published in Harper's Magazine, Mr. Bowker mentions some singular instances of delusive visions that were apparent to overworked authors. These apparitions were the figments of imaginations that instinctively sought rest in variety, conjuring up, without traceable cause or connection, shapes alien to the theme on which the authors' minds were bent, but enduring only until rest from the laborious pursuit of that subject was sought and found.

When Wilkie Collins used to give over to his toilsome composition and the seven fold revision to which he faithfully adhered, the hours between midnight and dawn, he had an unlovely familiar—a green woman with "tusk teeth," who stood at a particular spot on the stair landing and closed his vigils by the ghoulish salute of biting his shoulder. Other uncanny shapes there were—not of "the witching hour of night when churchyards yawn," but coming with the struggle of gray dawn with fleeing darkness. But this flesh tasting female was the one that persisted in her ghostly warning until her spectral perseverance forced the author of "The Woman in White" to cease turning night into day.

After David Christie Murray had passed through those experiences as journalist, pedestrian and war correspondent that supplied the scenes and experience made vivid in the pages of "A Life's Atonement," "Joseph's Coat," "Val Strange" and "Aunt Rachel," there accompanied the production of "Schwartz, a History," a halberdier, dressed in red and black and bearing an ax with which he threatened the writer from behind. Murray laughed at his phantom, which in no wise bore relation to the story he had in hand, nor to any other in his mind, and locked for his wrath to disappear under the influence of simples for the cure of head and stomach. But a wise physician chided him, "My friend, that way lies madness," and sent the author to six months' rest in rustic scenes. The halberdier vanished, but other visions still came once in a while at the end of long tasks with little rest.

It is characteristic of these hallucinations that intrude on the poetry of literary invention, that they rarely, if ever, result in permanent mental alienation. They are merciful goblins, kind, gentle ghosts, who warn the worker of healthy mind for his own good, that his mental health may be preserved to him for his own advantage and the benefit and pleasure of mankind. Wilkie Collins at 64 is still a systematic worker, whose creations charm the reading world. Decades have passed since the green woman last bit his shoulder; and Murray has written many charming tales since he last felt the presence of that grim halberdier. The author's delusions are those of overpursuit of healthy exercise. They are not like the cruel and unforgiving punishments that follow excessive physical dissipation. They are only the providential monitions that enforce on those intellects the world can least spare the old lesson:

Naturam expellas, forca, tintat fenestra.

—New York Star.

He Is His Own Lawyer.

You ask me why I always insist on being my own lawyer, and why I have a general repugnance for lawyers. It is just this: The mass of mankind are helpless when they get mixed up in a law suit, and the lawyer, knowing this, takes advantage of the circumstances, and the laws, too, are admirably adapted to aid the lawyer in preying upon the rest of mankind. When an estate is to be partitioned the law gives the lawyer his percentage, sometimes a very large sum, depending upon the size of the estate. When a divorce suit is to be commenced the husband is always decreed to pay the lawyer who defends the wife.

If a receiver is appointed, the receiver must have a lawyer, and the court gives the lawyer a percentage of the assets. The same rule applies to assignments and assignees. If a man is to be declared insane, the court appoints a lawyer amicus curia, and he must be paid out of the property of the insane person. Why, the whole vocation of a lawyer is to divide up and appropriate other people's property, and they do it with a nonchalance that is simply amazing. Well, I have made up my mind that while they may get some of my property after I am dead, they never will get any of it while I am alive.—William Zeppenfeld in Globe-Democrat.

Injurious to the Eyesight.

Riding upon the elevated roads is said to be injurious to the eyesight. With each passing train a quantity of dust and cinders is blown through the cars when windows or doors are open, and also a far more dangerous form of flying particles in the shape of minute chips from the rails. The habit of looking out of the window, which so many indulge in, is also deleterious. The objects seen are so near, and so rapidly passed, that the constant change is very trying to the eyesight. In riding upon the surface railroads the case is different, as the objects seen are comparatively distant, and so, therefore, within range of vision for a much longer time.—New York Sun.

Fair Hair Slowly Disappearing.

Statistics would seem to show that brunettes are more successful in obtaining husbands in proportion of about three to two. Poets have a proverbial preference for fair hair; no poem is complete without a flaxen haired maid; but prosaic mortals in search of a wife seem, upon the whole, to prefer the brown and the black. According to Dr. Beddoe, the result of this "conjugal selection" appears to be that in some parts of England fair hair is slowly disappearing, while dark hair is becoming more prevalent.—London Hospital.

A High Priced Manuscript.

The most valuable manuscript in this country, judging from the price paid, is in the possession of John Jacob Astor. It is the Sforza Missal, for which $15,500 was paid. It is dated in the Fifteenth century and comprises 484 pages of vellum bound in red morocco.—New York Evening World.

CONCERNING SUDDEN DEATH.

Its Growing Frequency Attributed to the Excitement of Modern Life.

Perhaps sudden death may be one of the penalties which we have to pay for a highly advanced civilization. The feverish excitement, the incessant effort necessary to support existence, which is to many men a sea that has no haven, a struggle that knows no lull, must inevitably tell, one may reasonably suppose, on the heart's action, if a man escapes the ordinary forms of nervous derangement.

Sudden death, whether the result of morbid agencies so subtle that they evade diagnosis, or so insidious that they anticipate prognosis by suddenly and unexpectedly terminating life, is becoming so common that it forms one of the distinctive features of modern pathology. The form in which it commonly appears now may be said to be the result of obscure cardiac affections, and it was comparatively more rare, both in ancient times and among our forefathers, compared with its present frequency.

During the earlier and even the mediæval centuries of the Christian era, sudden death was regarded with especial horror, and in the litany of the Anglican church is represented as heading the list of the most terrible calamities incident to humanity. In pagan antiquity, on the other hand, a sudden death was held to be the crown of the blessings that heaven could bestow on man. The Greeks represented Death as a pleasing, gentle being, while their conceptions of an after life were gloomy.

Socrates regarded death as "an indifferent accident." Much depends on the circumstances under which death presents itself, as well as the state of man's conscience and the condition of his worldly affairs. As years roll on death becomes less and less dreaded. Aged people generally leave life without regret. Julius Cæsar is said to have wished for sudden death, but he said so just before he was slain, and when the mission of his life had been accomplished. Charles II could apologize to his courtiers for being such an "unconscionable time in dying." Voltaire, and Hume, and Rousseau weighed pros and cons for sudden death, and affected to sum up in its favor, but such a subject is sorry matter either for epigram or rhetoric.

In nine cases out of ten death is a great calamity. It finds men unprepared; it deprives them of the alleviations which rob the summons of many of its terrors; it often entails embarrassment and misery by cutting off all opportunity of making testatory arrangements, thereby bequeathing a direful legacy of feud and estrangement to families who might have lived in harmony.

The moral, and a very practical one it is, is that the increasing frequency of sudden deaths is to be regarded with alarm, softened by a hope that medical science may be able to arrest its progress, and that a proper regard for their domestic responsibilities will induce sensible men not to continue to defer the proper arrangement of their affairs which ten seconds may make too late.

The three men whose lives, temperaments and habits were peculiarly typical of the times in which we live were undoubtedly Lord Macaulay, William Makepeace Thackeray and Charles Dickens. These three men, renowned writers, and each a master of his art, all died comparatively young, and all died suddenly, and the first two of heart disease. Death came upon them, not with slow and measured steps, but without note of warning. Apparently there was a painless passing from time into eternity.

Look at the work these men did. Macaulay had already won high reputation for prose and poetry at the age of 28, and the famous article on Milton, which at once won him a reputation as a essayist, that his subsequent performances in that line merely confirmed, was published before he was 25 years old.

Macaulay for over thirty years had three lives, as it were. He was a politician, he was a man of letters, he was a man of society; a great debater and a good working official; a distinguished and voluminous author; a diner out whose company was sought for his conversation by all who could obtain it. Hard brain work in parliament and in a man's library is scarcely compatible with grand dinners and breakfasts which, with delicacies of food and wine, were almost as bad as the dinners.

Thackeray and Dickens suffered greatly from the same cause. They were free livers; they loved society. These two did an immense quantity of literary work. Thackeray scarcely fell off in point of execution, hardly in construction, to the last. "Denis Duval," a story which he left incomplete, promised to be as good as any of its predecessors except "Vanity Fair," which is its author's best work. Dickens was far more successful in his latter work. "Our Mutual Friend" is a performance more ambitious than able, with a heavy, involved plot; and the half of "Edwin Drood" that has been published is not good enough to make any reader wish for more of it. Dickens overworked himself until paralysis gave him warning, unhappily not heeded, and the end came suddenly.

A very elegant writer, in a beautifully written essay entitled "Erroneous Notions of Death Reproved," observes: "In particular it is thought that this final event passes with some dreadful visitation of unknown agony over the departing sufferer. It is imagined that there is some strange and mysterious reluctance in the spirit to leave the body; that it struggles long to retain its hold, and is at last torn with violence from its mortal tenement, and, in fine, that this conflict between the soul and the body greatly adds to the pangs of the dissolution. But it may be justly presumed from what usually appears that there is no particular or acute suffering, not more than is often experienced during life, nay, rather that there is less, because the very powers of suffering are enfeebled, the very capacities of pain are nearly exhausted."

Death is to be regarded rather as a sleep than a conflict of our faculties; it is repose—the body's repose after the pains and toilsome day of life.—Cor. Troy Times.

An Important Announcement

About six weeks ago, while at business, I was suddenly attacked with excruciating pains in my feet, knees and hands. So severe the attack that I took my bed immediately, and in two or three days my joints were swollen to almost double their natural size, and sleep was driven from me. After suffering the most excruciating pain for a week, using liniments and various other remedies, a friend who sympathized with my helpless condition, said to me:

"Why don't you get Swift's Specific and use it. I will guarantee a cure, and if it does not the medicine shall cost you nothing."

I at once secured the S. S. S., and after using it the first day, had a quiet night and refreshing sleep. In a week I felt greatly benefited. In three weeks I could sit up and walk about the room, and after using six bottles I was out and able to go to business. Since then I have been regularly at my post of duty, and stand on my feet from nine to ten hours a day, and am entirely free from pain. These are the plain and simple facts in my case, and I will cheerfully answer all inquiries relative thereto, either in person or by mail. THOMAS HARKLESS,

FOR PRESIDENT,

BENJAMIN HARRISON

OF INDIANA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

LEVI P. MORTON

OF NEW YORK.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultual, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

"American wages for American workmen."—Republican motto.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTIONS.

Rockingham county, at the town hall, Exeter, Wednesday, Sept. 12th at 11:00 o'clock A. M.

The Republican Convention.

On a ballot for a candidate for vice president the vote stood: Morton 591, Phelps 119, Bradley 103, Bruce 11, W. F. Thomas 1. The nomination was made unanimous, and at 8:52 P. M. Monday evening the convention adjourned without day.

A Democratic Speek.

The Republican National Convention on the 25th inst. removed from the democratic bosom a nightmare that has weighed heavily upon it for the past four years. That nightmare was labelled "Blaine," and its pressure has been as unbearably excruciating to the democratic and mugwump breast as though it had been real, instead of merely a spook conjured up by their imagination.

Ever since the last presidential campaign Hon. James G. Blaine has been pursued by the democratic and mugwump press with a venomous animosity that could only have been born of fear. His slightest movement or remark, whatever he did or failed to do, or said or did not say, according to them was done—or omitted to be done, they cared little which—with an eye single to securing the republican nomination for the presidency in 1888. When it was announced that he intended visiting Europe, "Aha!" said they, "the wily rogue; he is going over there as a political dodge." Once he was over there, if a report came that he had dined with some dignitary they would exclaim in chorus "Oh! the unscrupulous schemer; he dined with that man in furtherance of his ambitious aims;" and when next day it was announced that he did not dine with him at all, they would shout "Was ever there such a cunning trickster! his not dining with him was for his own selfish ends."

Then they arranged a triumphal trip for him across the continent from San Francisco, so as to arrive in Chicago with a great flourish of trumpets just at the time of the convention, and capture it. This infamous scheme of Blaine's was strongly reprobated; and when a few days later it was made evident that no such trip had ever been contemplated, his failure to lay such a plan was denounced as a still more subtle piece of political scoundrelism.

Then came his letter withdrawing from the candidacy entirely—a brief, manly letter, couched in plain, straightforward terms. "Behold the proof of all we have been charging against that wicked man," said they; "of course when a man says he is not a candidate, he means that he is going to have the nomination at all hazards." There is some excuse for the democratic editors taking this view. No man ever spoke more earnestly and strongly against an incumbent of the presidency being a candidate for re-election, than did Reformer Cleveland; and no president ever used the machinery of the government more persistently and effectively to renominate himself, than he. They evidently thought Blaine had no more regard for his word than Cleveland. Then came a second letter, emphasizing the first; but this was considered to be of no more value than Cleveland's civil-service-reform letter to Geo. William Curtis after the election of '84 was decided.

But the despatches read in the convention Monday morning must suffice, it would seem, to convince even the mugwumps that Blaine, unlike Cleveland, means what he says. At any rate, the subsequent action of the convention has released the democratic misrepresentation mills and mud-squirters from the necessity of paying any further attention to Blaine, and they can now be turned upon Harrison.

European Opinion of President Cleveland.

The president has by his administration most favorably impressed the statesmen of Europe and the conductors of the European press, not only in England but in Germany and other continental countries. A European observer of American men and things from his standpoint of three thousand miles away is of course impartial, because he has no interests at stake over here.—Times.

If the European statesmen who so admire President Cleveland's administration have no stake over here, to what are we indebted for the magnanimity of the British free trade Cobden club, which leads to the flooding of this country with free trade literature, the offering of prizes for free trade essays at our institutions of learning, and other "disinterested" missionary work toward the securing of our markets for the British manufacturers? It is undeniable that the London Times, and Post, and Stondard, and the other great British organs which oppose home rule for Ireland, and support the Irish crimes act and all other repressive measures against the Irish people at home, are "most favorably impressed" by the Cleveland administration, and especially by the president's free trade message. The next president will care much less about the approval of British or other European statesmen and editors, than he will about the approval of the citizens of the United States.

Why Men Drink.

That wonderful humorist, Tom Hood, once remarked "There are five reasons why men drink! Good wine; a friend; because they are dry; or at least they may be bye and bye; or any other reason why." The last is perhaps the most common reason. James Parton once headed an article "will the coming man drink?" but as he failed to answer the query we will express a decided opinion: that, until the coming man learns to prize home, social family ties above all others, will he learn not to abuse his own organism. In March last a writer in the "Medical age" made some practical remarks upon this subject, and offered a timely hint which prohibition advocates would do well to note.

He says: "As long as the imperfections of humanity remain unfitted to its surroundings and conditions, so long evil and misery will continue, and men seek refuge in strong drink. Increase the sum of human happiness by whatever means possible, lessen the burdens and ameliorate the woes of mankind, remove hunger, disease and pain by a better physical and moral education, and you will have plucked out the fangs of that dire monster"—intemperance.

Among the worst morbid conditions resulting from the use of alcoholic liquors, as well as from improper food and customs of eating, are inflammation of the stomach, liver, kidneys and brain.

It matters not in what part of the body inflammation exists, or how severe it may be, whether it takes the form of gastric inflammation, in despepsia, or as in bronchitis, catarrh, hay-fever, pneumonia, rheumatism, or as in common cuts and bruises, Johnson's Anodyne Liniment will conquer it, relieve the pain and prove to you that it is indeed an anodyne of mighty power, and unlike all others, as it is for internal as well as external use.

A good Baptist deacon told us not long since that "he had known Johnson's Liniment for sixty years, and had used it in his family for over forty years." I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass., will send any person an instructive pamphlet free, telling all about this valuable household remedy and how to use it economically. One teaspoonful properly used is worth a whole bottle used as some people use it.

A Grand Tour Through the Rocky Mountains.

Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb have planned a series of grand tours through Colorado for the summer and early autumn, that cannot fail to be immensely popular. It is the most comprehensive trip though the Rocky Mountains ever yet arranged, and brings a score or more famous places under inspection. The journey is to be made in a leisurely manner, with restful halts at hotels every night, the travelling through the mountain region being done wholly by daylight. Thus, nothing is to be omitted in the way of sight seeing. Details of the excursions, one of which is to take place in July and another in September, may be gleaned from a descriptive circular just issued. "Independent Trips" to Colorado may be made in connection with these tours or in August and October. There are also to be a series of Yellowstone National Park excursions, and "Seventeen July Trips" to points of interest in the East. Address, W. Raymond, 296 Washington street, opposite School street, Boston, for circulars.

Knew It All The Time.

What a waste of time it has been for the republicans to spend a whole week in Chicago. About to-day they will probably get around to where everybody knew weeks ago that they were coming to. They might as well have set up Blaine the first of the week as to have played the coy maiden so long.—Boston Post, 25th.

That's very good for a democratic prophecy—hit the fact just as the rest of the democratic prophecies will in this presidential campaign.

AFFAIRS IN KITTERY.

KITTERY, ME., June 26th.

Children's day was observed at the 1st Methodist church, North Kittery, on Sunday last, by an appropriate sermon by the pastor, Rev. W. F. Marshall, and special exercises by the children.

Mr. Edward E. Shapleigh arrived home Monday evening from Brunswick, Me., where he has been attending medical lectures at Bowdoin college since January last.

Geo. A. Damon arrived home from Boston last Saturday evening for a short visit.

Stillman Allen Greenleaf, Esq., of Malden, Mass., is in town, visiting relatives and friends.

First Assistant Engineer Oliver P. Remick, U. S. R. M., attached to the cutter Levi Woodbury, is visiting his home for a few days while the cutter is hauled up for repairs at Bucksport, Me.

Geo. W. Damon, surveyor on the post road district, had a gang of men at work last week with the road machine, and has done the best job of road repairing that has been done to it in the past ten years.

"Tippecanoe and Morton, too!" Send the cry all along the line. Now let us organize our republican club at once, and raise the stars and stripes over the foreign red bandana. SUB ROSA.

KITTERY POINT, ME., June 26th.

George H. Williams has been at home for a few days on account of ill health.

Albert Tobey came home on Wednesday last from Boston, where he has been at work the past winter, to go to the Oceanic this season.

Orville Fletcher came in from the Shoals on Thursday and returned Friday.

Mr. Albert Fernald is to be head boatman at the Oceanic this summer.

Mr. Moses Randall is digging Mr. Wasson's cellar on the old Fernald place, and Mr. W. H. Riley is to build the house. Mr. Wasson returned on Friday from Bangor, where he has purchased the frame and all materials for his house.

Mr. Wm. C. Williams, first assistant keeper at Boon island, came in on Saturday with a lot of those nice fish; he reports the folks all well at the island, and nine workmen there erecting a store house, repairing and strengthening the tower and making other repairs.

Mr. Chas. Bryant moved on Friday into the house owned by Capt. Horace Seaward on Tenney's hill.

The schooner Josie Johnson has been cleaned and painted at Frisbee's wharf, and taken to Newburyport, where she will be used as an excursion boat this season.

The schooner Mary Willey, Capt. Williams, arrived in the harbor Monday forenoon, and was towed up to Broughton's wharf, Portsmouth, by the steamer James Sampton.

Mr. Elias Voudy arrived home Saturday night from a ten weeks trip to the banks with Capt. Tarlton of Newcastle, in the schooner Good Templar, which is now at Portland.

The Union Bethel meeting was held at the chapel Sunday evening, and was well attended; the services were led by the pastor, Rev. E. R. Phillips, assisted by Rev. S. Wakeley.

Mr. Charles Tobey has gone to the Oceanic as lobster catcher and boatman for the season.

The Ladies' Sewing circle will meet at the parsonage on Wednesday evening, the 27th. UNCLE MOSES.

Among the most unjust of Cleveland's vetoes of the present session, is that of the bill to reimburse the heirs of Donald McKay for the extra outlay and loss sustained on the contract for the monitor Squando, built during the war. Secretary Whitney and every fair-minded democrat in Congress advocated the measure, but the ex-rebels were all against it, and Cleveland is looking for the votes of the Solid South, and so vetoed it.

The dead body of Jacob Britt was found on the Maine Central railroad track half a mile below Augusta, Me., last Sunday morning. It is suspected that he was murdered, and then placed on the track to be run over by a train.

The First Symptoms

Of all Lung diseases are much the same: feverishness, loss of appetite, sore throat, pains in the chest and back, headache, etc. In a few days you may be well, or, on the other hand, you may be down with Pneumonia or "galloping Consumption." Run no risks, but begin immediately to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Several years ago, James Birchard, of Darien, Conn., was severely ill. The doctors said he was in Consumption, and that they could do nothing for him, but advised him, as a last resort, to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking this medicine, two or three months, he was pronounced a well man. His health remains good to the present day.

J. S. Bradley, Malden, Mass., writes: "Three winters ago I took a severe cold, which rapidly developed into Bronchitis and Consumption. I was so weak that I could not sit up, was much emaciated, and coughed incessantly. I consulted several doctors, but they were powerless, and all agreed that I was in Consumption. At last, a friend brought me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. From the first dose, I found relief. Two bottles cured me, and my health has since been perfect."

AUBREY'S GREAT RIDE.

Remarkable Journey on Horseback Across the Western Plains.

Among the deeds of early life in the west the famous ride of F. X. Aubrey from the plaza of Santa Fe to the public square of Independence, Mo., as a physical achievement stands without an equal. Indeed it is doubtful if the history of the world can present a parallel to that great ride of 800 miles, through a country overrun with hostile Indians, a large part of the distance being through sandy deserts and leading across rivers, mountains and prairies, with only the sky for a covering and the earth as a resting place.

An old resident of this city, who used to know Aubrey very well, in conversation recently said:

"When I first met Aubrey, about 1848, he was a young man of 35, the perfect picture of health and strength. Short, rather heavy set, weighing about 160 pounds, he had an honest, open countenance, and was one of the rising men of the plains. He was a French Canadian, came to St. Louis in 1840, and very soon afterward engaged in business as a Santa Fe trader, making trips to Santa Fe from Independence, Mo., and spending the larger part of his time in the saddle. He was a noted horseman, and spared neither man nor beast when on a journey. Every thing he did was done with a rush.

"Aubrey made two rides alone from Santa Fe to Independence. The first was on a wager of $1,000 that he could cover the distance in eight days. He succeeded in reaching his destination three hours before the expiration of the time. He killed several horses in the ride, and it is said that the death of one horse on the way obliged him to walk twenty-five miles to Council Grove, carrying his saddle on his back, before he found another. He was the lion of the day at St. Louis and Independence after that ride. There were many powerful men and many good riders in those times, but not one of them dared to attempt to beat Aubrey's record. He determined to beat it himself, and on a second wager he left Santa Fe in 1851, and gave the severest test of human endurance I have ever known.

"I was on my way to Santa Fe (it was thirty-seven years ago) with a train of twenty-five wagons filled with merchandise, and knew nothing of his design. When we were at the Rabbit Ears, about 100 miles from the old Spanish city, we saw a man approaching in a sweeping gallop, mounted on a yellow mare and leading another. As he came nearer, mistaking us for Indians, he whirled and retreated fifty or sixty yards, then turned to take a second look. Our wagons coming round a hill proved that we were friends, and, putting spurs to his steed, he dashed past, merely nodding his head as the dust flew into our faces. It was a great surprise to me for Aubrey to treat a friend in that style, but when I reached Santa Fe I understood it. Every moment was precious. It was the supreme effort of his life. Night and day he rushed on. Six horses dropped dead as he rode them.

"His own beautiful mare, Nellie, the one he was riding as he passed our party, and one of the finest pieces of horse flesh I ever saw, quivered and fell in the agonies of death at the end of the first 150 miles. Several splendid horses had been sent ahead, and stationed at different points on the trail. No man could keep up with Aubrey. He would have sacrificed every horse in the west, if necessary to the accomplishment of his design. It was not money he was after, but fame. He had laid a wager that the trip would be made in six days.

"At the end of five days and thirteen hours, exhausted and fainting, he was taken from a horse that was trembling from head to foot, and covered with sweat and foam, at the southwest corner of the present square of Independence. He sank into a stupor, from which he was not aroused for forty-eight hours."—Kansas City News.

Usefulness of After Life.

It is a great mistake to suppose that the usefulness of life ceases with the power of active service. When the tired hands are folded in the repose which their toil has rightly earned for them; when the weary brain is relieved from the burden of cares and perplexities which it has nobly borne, there should be a season rich in blessings and in influence, which no one would willingly forego. Then should come the leisure vainly longed for in past years, and the opportunity to attend to many things, and to enjoy much that was before impossible.

If the busy life has also been an honorable one, there are sweet memories, cherished friendships, the devotion of children, the respect of society, the power of helping others through the accumulated experience and intelligence of many years. The very presence of a venerable and beloved face is a blessing to those who look upon it, bringing suggestions of well earned peace and calm to the busy toiler, and calling up emotions of tender reverence in the eager and buoyant youth.—Home Journal.

Where to Learn Penmanship.

The best place in the world to make a man involuntarily learn to write a good hand is on a steamboat. Men who are careless about the formation of letters, after an experience as a clerk on board a steamboat, become excellent penmen. The constant shaking and jar of the boat while under way causes the clerk to steady his nerves and form the letters carefully when he is writing. I have seen men go to a desk on a steamboat and write so badly that it was almost impossible to decipher the letters. I have seen these same men a few months later write as legibly as the average business man could desire. The swinging of the boat had, of necessity, caused them to be careful in writing, and in a few months a slovenly hand was improved to a beautiful chirography.—Pell Thomas in Globe-Democrat.

Vulgarity of Selfishness.

No man has a right to live selfishly or to perpetuate his selfishness in his will. The law recognizes the importance of the family life and provides for its stability, and the man who makes no provision for his family is as culpable as he who, though abundantly capable, makes no provision beyond it. But the perpetuation of vast fortunes as family monuments is the vulgarity of selfishness.—Christian Register.

An Eastern Newspaper Custom.

The New England papers have a rather amusing way of prefixing a man's calling or family relationship before his name, as for instance: Chemist Smith went into Druggist Brown's store yesterday, and while there met Rector Robinson, who was talking with General Notions Jones and his wife. Husband Jones told Rector Robinson that Daughter Jones was much interested in religious matters, and had attended many of Revivalist Gush's services. It is also rumored that Son Jones has been recently converted.—New York Tribune.

CIRCULAR—JULY 4TH.

...eadquarters Chief Marshal Dedication Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument July 4th, 1888.

PORTSMOUTH, June 26th.

For the purpose of protecting from ...ossible injury all citizens and visitors, ...o enable the Fire Department to respond ...uickly in case of an alarm, and to facil...tate promptness in carrying out the pro...gramme, the Chief Marshal makes the ...ollowing announcement:

The committe on route have decided to ...rope off certain streets as follows:

Vicinity of depots during formation ...f procession;

Vicinity of Goodwin Park during ded...icatory services;

Vicinity of Marginal road during ex...hibition of fireworks.

From the enclosures thus formed ve...icles of all kinds will be excluded dur...ng their occupancy by the procession ...nd people. Carriages conveying invi...ted guests, the press, or on errands of public or private necessity, only, may temporarily suspend this rule. Pedestrians can pass the lines at all times, as is the usual custom.

The purpose of the committee being one of public safety, the chief marshal will expect a cheerful compliance on the part of citizens and visitors with the above regulations.

Approved.

GEORGE E. HODGDON, Mayor.

HERBERT A. MARDEN,
Chief Engineer Fire Dept.

EVENING BAND CONCERTS.

July 3d. An open air concert on the Parade will be given by the First Regiment band of Manchester; time, 7:30 to 9:00 P. M.

July 4th. Concert by the Highland band, of Lake Village, on the Parade; time, 7:00 to 9:00 P. M. The concert precedes the exhibition of fireworks from Langdon Park at 9:00 P. M.

Entrances to Marginal road (for pedestrians only) are to be found on Pleasant street, via Edwards: Court street, via Court place; and on Richards avenue.

By order of

ANDREW P. PRESTON,
Chief Marshal,

Capt. J. A. SANBORN, Chief of Staff.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT.

The court came in at ten o'clock Tuesday morning. In case Hattie F. Kennard vs Sidney B. Whittemore, adm., an agreement for judgement for plf. in the sum of $750 was filed, and judgment ordered in accordance therewith. Foster & Ray for plf.; Drew, Jordan, Aldrich & Remick for deft.

In case Robinson, adm. of Danvers, vs. Anderson, receiver of Portland & Ogdensburg Railroad Co., the defendant filed a motion for continuance on the ground of absence of a material witness, and read an affidavit to that effect. The counsel for the plaintiff contended that the continuance should be only on terms of indemnity

The grand jury reported, and retired in charge of Bailiff Thomas Chase.

Case Norton vs. Portsmouth was postponed, for a hearing on question of release at seven o'clock in the evening.

PERSONAL.

Mr. E. Scott Owen and wife have returned from their wedding tour, and taken up their residence at No. 4 Miller avenue.

Mr. J. Green of Boston is visiting his parents, Mr. Lewis Green and wife, of State street.

A letter received in this city from Mr. Thomas J. Brooks, ship's printer on the U. S. S. Brooklyn, flagship of the Asiatic squadron, says the ship's company were there (April 30th) expecting the arrival of their orders for home, but whether the ship would be ordered home too, by way of the Cape of Good Hope or the Suez Canal, or the vessel to Panama or San Fracisco and the crew sent home from one of those places, was not known, all being guessed at. Mr. Brooks sends home in his letter a couple of "poems" composed by one of the officers of the ship, and printed on board. One of these poems gives a sailor's ideas concerning the fashions in ladies' dress, society, natural productions and matters in general, in Dutch Malaysia; the other sings the charms of "Oyucha San, the belle of Japan," and the poet's ardent devotion to her, so we refrain from giving his name lest he might find some very puzzling conundrums awaiting him at home when he gets there.

MARITIME NOTES

Ship Gov. Goodwin, commanded by Capt. Samuel Pray of this city, and now on the passage from Philadelphia for Hiogo, Japan, was spoken May 14th about twenty-six degrees south of the line, and in longitude twenty-six west.

Mr. Elvin Newton was at his home in this city on Sunday, and left for his station at Lunging island, Isles of Shoals, Monday afternoon. He says the pickings there have been small so far this season, but that he is making some catches of fish and bringing them in.

A visit to the Cottage Hospital one day last week, showed all the interior clean and neat, with well aired and properly furnished rooms, and pleasant surroundings. Capt. Ephraim Anderson, now laid up there with rheumatism, upon being asked, by request of his friends, as to what he would like, replied that it seemed to him that every necessary is furnished, but if any extras were sent to him they could be passed to the regular nurses. ***

General Orders No. 2, with instructions to all invited organizations, is being issued by the chief marshal of July 4th exercises.

The season at Appledore has opened most successfully. Mr. J. J. Bowditch and family came down by special steamer from Boston, and now occupy their new cottage at the north of the hotel. Mrs. Lars Anderson and family and Mr. Frid. Anderson and family, of Cincinnati, have also arrived, and taken the Warder cottage on the heights on the south of the hotel. So many and early engagements have never been known at the Shoals. The air at the islands is as pure and invigorating as ever, and is fully appreciated by the tourists during the hot summer months.

Crushed stone is being placed by the street commissioner along the east side of Washington street, to repair the damage caused by the washing out of the roadway adjoining the central beach-boulder paving of the street. It is a permanent improvement.

The examination of candidates for admission to the High school will be held on Saturday, June 30th, commencing at eight o'clock in the morning, at the schoolhouse on Daniel street.

Extensive repairs are being made at the easterly end of the wharf occupied by Philbrick & Co., for the stone and coal business; the timber is furnished by Daniel Littlefield, from the wharf and dock on Green street; a large gang of men are employed at the work. Repairs are also being made to C. E. Walker & Co's. coal-pocket wharf, at the foot of State street.

"The Seashore," the summer weekly published by Mr. John D. Randall last year, will not be issued this season.

We have received a call from Mr. Bass, agent for W. A. Greenough & Co., of Boston, publishers of the Portsmouth Directory for 1888. He states that the Directory will be ready for distribution in about three or four weeks; that there have been about one thousand new names added, and fifteen hundred changes made in the old names on account of change of locatfon, etc.

So far Pasteur's receipt for killing the Australian rabbits with chicken cholera has failed. The rabbits inoculated showed no signs of disease.

The coins struck at the Berlin mints during the reign of the late Emperor Frederick are already scarce, and at a big premium.

The Oceanic opens to-day, the 27th. The hotel since last season has been painted on the outside and renovated on the inside; the office has been enlarged so that it now extends from one side to the other of the hotel, giving a beautiful view of White Island, and the west as well as the east side of Star island; it has a fireplace in the back part, and is said by those who have seen it to be the pleasantest hotel office in New England; and there have been many other improvements made in the house to add to the comfort and convenience of guests. The Newton (Mass.) Historical Society will have their annual field day at the Oceanic on the 28th and 29th. The early engagements of rooms are way ahead of former years, and Landlord Frisbee anticipates the best season he has ever had. Lotta, the actress, and her mother, Mrs. Crabtree, are down to arrive this week, for a summer's stay; also Col. Sam. W. Parke proprietor of the Grand Pacific hotel, Chicago; Dr. S. H. Carney and family, George Milmine and family, of New York; Mrs. Lucy R. Reed, A. H. Higgins and family, John L. Stevenson and daughter, of Boston, and many others.

The regular monthly alarm of fire, for the practise of the department, was given at the navy yard on Tuesday forenoon at 11:30 o'clock.

The new Cliff house at Bald Head cliff, York, opened for the season on engaged for July, and many applications are pending for the month of August.

HAMPTON JOTTINGS.

HAMPTON, June 25th.

But few people attended church yesterday, and those who rode for pleasure found thick clothing quite comfortable.

The stone masons were obliged to leave work Saturday forenoon, being overcome by the heat.

A town meeting is to be held to-day to see if the citizens will expend $8,000 for a new hall. One can be built for $5,000 good enough. Mr. Bryan Dame of Epping bid $300 less than others on the job, after which a man who it is alleged wants to make a pile out of the town put in a bid less, took the plans in his possession, and says the selectmen gave him the job. For the past few weeks lawyers have been consulted by officers of the town and private citizens, as to legal points; a warm time is expected.

Mr. Curtis DeLancey has several ice houses from which he is supplying the people; his men had to work hard last week to meet the demand.

Truly the temperance work is encouraging when young men of the town go to Exeter and cannot get liquor there, but have to take the train to Portsmouth and from there to Newburyport. This has been done twice of late in order to obtain a bottle of liquor.

A large number of our people propose spending the 4th of July in Portsmouth.

Mr. Thomas Philbrick died suddenly of pneumonia on Sunday, the 17th. He was a citizen highly esteemed; for many years had been boss of a gang on the railroad, and was faithful to his employers. He was divorced a few years since, leaving only a little daughter to mourn for him. Several hundred dollars were found sewed up in his clothing.

The names of Mr. Everett Pearson and wife were booked at the Union house again last week, he spending most of his time at Portsmouth attending the railroad meetings. He was quite jubilant over the success of last week. ——.

Deborah Chesley of Manchester, aged eighty-two years, hung herself June 25th. She was a native of Durham.

Mrs. Catherin Tripp and her niece were drowned by the capsizing of a yacht Saturday, in Boston bay.

Lila Cash, aged fifteen years, committed suicide with a pistol at Hyannis, Mass., June 25th. No caused is assigned for the act.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS

$22 TO $900. The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture in these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.
Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogues free.

PIANOS

Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos, that they are superior to all GRAND & UPRIGHT PIANOS in use, not excepting those of all other makers. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN PIANO STRINGER," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.
A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and tuners, sent, together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant.

GLYCEROLE!
A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.
It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.
Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.
We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

— "A GREEN OLD AGE."
Few Men or Women Reach It, But Nearly All Might—The Remarkable Experience of an Octogenarian.

"There is only one thing I dread," said the late Charles Sumner, "and that is the coming on of old age."
Mr. Sumner was a brave man, and could face danger unflinchingly but to watch the hairs whiten, the lines of pain and care grow deep in the face, to feel the strength and activity going and death coming on, were more than he could bear. Alas! how many others feel the same today. Pains, loss of sleep, weakness, poor appetite, and feebleness, all break the spirit. Have you never heard of Mr. Nathan Chase, of New Bedford, Mass.? A man nearly four-score years old, and hale and hearty as in youth. And yet he was supposed to be dying of heart trouble less than two years ago. Here is what he says:
"A year ago or more I began to lose flesh and strength. I sent for my physician to know the cause. He examined me, and said it was my heart; that the old machinery was wearing out, and I must be careful. Still I grew worse, so that I got so bad I could scarcely breathe; I could not lie in bed but had to sit up all night with possibly one hour's sleep out of twenty-four. And yet to-day, I am in fine condition; can go up three flights of stairs without inconvenience, and feel as well and about as young as ever in my life before. What accomplished this? Hunt's Remedy—nothing else. It has made a new man of me, and I bless God for it every day."
Such an experience should be a valuable lesson to all readers, both old and young. It shows that a long and happy life is possible. It shows that men or women need not despond. It shows that by care and the use of the right remedy health, happiness and long life may be secured by all.

BILIOUSNESS.

THIS very common complaint, which is caused by a dormant or inactive liver, can be cured in a short time by using Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, as can also the various diseases arising from inactive liver or kidneys. These organs, if inactive, will allow impure blood to enter the heart, causing tightness about that organ and palpitation.

She suffered thirty years.

MRS. DUDLEY CHANDLER, of Melrose, Mass., says: "I had suffered with Palpitation of the Heart more than thirty years before I found anything to give me essential relief. Last fall I tried Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, and, remarkable as it was, this Compound relieved me in two days, so that for several months afterwards I felt not the slightest touch of it, and am perfectly free from it now. Sometimes, before I took this Compound, the palpitations of my heart were so violent as to shake my whole body with rapid agitations, and at times I fainted and became entirely insensible. Now I am perfectly free from all this suffering. Consequently I can most sincerely and earnestly recommend this Compound to all like sufferers, as pre-eminently the best medicine I ever knew for Palpitation of the Heart."
This Compound is purely Vegetable, and strengthens and builds up the system while it eradicates disease.
Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles for $5. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

Form and Character of Teeth.

As regards the teeth, it must be admitted that in relation to the subject in hand they literally and truly cut both ways. In the complete set of thirty-two there are twenty for grinding, eight for biting and four for tearing. Grinding teeth are required for animals which live on grains and other hard vegetable substances; biting teeth are necessary for animals which nibble soft substances like grasses and some fruits; tearing teeth are essential for animals which actually tear tough and resistant structures, like flesh, to pieces. In man the grinding teeth largely preponderate; and how well fitted these teeth are for grinding seeds, grains, acorns and the like, the teeth of our very old forefathers tell a significant and true tale. In man the biting teeth have a conspicuous place and a very decisive function; with them, even to the present, the skilled biter can cut through the finest thread, a feat equivalent to dividing the most delicate filament of food fiber that grows from the earth. The teeth are vegetable weapons; they are the best of weapons which the out and out vegetarian can use; they assist him both in practice and argument.
But then there remain those four tearing fangs, those canine or dog's teeth, so firm, strong and savage. The canine or tearing teeth stand out strikingly in favor of the view that man is formed for eating flesh; but it cannot be said by the stanchest flesh eater that the flesh eating tendency is the strongest altogether. No; it is certain that the balance turns fairly the other way. It may, however, be argued that the very fact of the existence of only four tearing teeth gives countenance to the belief that nature has supplied the human animal with fangs for devouring animal flesh if he is obliged or desirous so to do. This is true, but only to a limited extent, because we now know that even the teeth, firm as they are, become, by constant habit of life, changed in form and character. The canine tooth itself, even in the dog, has been exceptionally so modified from this cause as to lead to a characteristic type of structure indicative of the influence of manner of life on growth when extended through many generations.—Richardson in Longman's Magazine.

Great Speakers Sometimes Routed.

Some of the most experienced orators have been disconcerted by very trivial circumstances. Daniel Webster, rising to speak at a poultry show, was unable to continue in rivalry with a giant Shanghai which began to air its lungs at the same moment, and had to resume his seat in confusion. Erskine was always extremely sensitive to a lack of interest by his audience. "Who can get on with that wet blanket of a face of yours before him?" he said once to Garrow, who was engaged with him in a cause. His first speech in the house of lords was a humiliating failure, owing to the action of Chatham, who, as a speaker began, took up a pen and made a few notes as if with the intention of replying; but after listening a few moments he dashed pen and paper upon the floor with a contemptuous smile. This indifference, real or pretended, completely upset Erskine, whose "voice faltered; he struggled through the remainder of his speech and sank into his seat dispirited and shorn of his fame."
Burke was also extremely sensitive. Selwyn relates that he rose on one occasion to speak, holding a bundle of papers in his hand, when a rough hewn country member started up and said: "Mr. Speaker, I hope the honorable gentleman does not mean to read that large bundle of papers and to bore us with a long speech into the bargain." Burke was so suffocated with rage as to be incapable of speech, and rushed out of the house. "Never before," says Selwyn, "did I see the fable realized of a lion put to flight by the braying of an ass."—Gentleman's Magazine.

Life of an Iron Horse.

"The iron horse does not last much longer than the horse of flesh and bones," said an old New York Central engineer to a reporter recently. "The ordinary life of a locomotive is about thirty years. Some of the smaller parts require renewing every six months; the boiler tubes last five years and the crank axles six years; tires, boilers and fire proof boxes from six to seven years; the side frames, axles and other parts, thirty years. An important advantage is that a broken part can be repaired, and does not condemn the whole locomotive to the junk shop, while, when a horse breaks a leg, the whole animal is only worth the flesh, fat and bones, which amount to a very small sum in this country, where horse flesh does not find its way to the butcher's market."—New York Mail and Express.

How to Keep a Scrap Book.

A well made up scrap book is a perfect mine of valuable information. It is not a rash statement to say that newspapers are now the great educators of the people, and there is not an issue of any reputable journal that does not contain many golden nuggets which should be preserved. If you have not been in the habit of collecting them you will find yourself embarrassed at first by the great number of items you would like to clip. After a little while, however, you will be able to use your practiced judgment to good advantage, selecting what Richard Henry Stoddard calls the "plums" from the profusion before you. And you will see the time when a scrap book filled with these "plums" will be invaluable to you as a compendium of condensed knowledge. Keep a scrap book, by all means.—Philadelphia Times.

Surplus Millions of Chinese.

The Chinese have been barred out of the United States and are being mobbed out of Australia, and are unwelcome in South and Central America. Yet the overflowing millions of China must find some thinly populated country in which to toil, and they are looking for it all over the world. It is evident from the reports of recent explorers in various parts of Africa that they should turn their almond eyes toward the dark continent, where they will not be overpowered by race prejudices, where they will find a tolerable climate and productive soil, where they can introduce many of the customs and crafts that belong to Chinese civilization, and where their peaceful and industrious disposition will be of the highest value.—New York Sun.

Ozone as a Germicide.

In some experiments with ozone as a curative agent, an English lady, so far advanced in consumption that her case appeared hopeless, has been treated with inhalations of this gas, with results described as marvelous. After a month's treatment the appetite was regained, the sleep calm and refreshing, and there was a very good prospect of recovery. The ozone was prepared by passing a stream of oxygen through the current of an induction coil, and was administered with atmospheric air in the proportion of one in five. The experimenter has reached the conclusion that the ozone treatment is specially applicable to all germ diseases.—Herald of Health.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor can be expected in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood; he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

Great pearl discoveries are reported on the Gulf of Mexico. One was sold for 140,000 francs.

All who suffer from coughs, colds, irritation of the bronchial tubes, or tendency to consumption, will find in Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry a remedy as agreeable to the palate as effectual in removing disease. For thirty years I have been troubled with catarrh—have tried a number of remedies without relief. A druggist here recommended Ely's Cream Balm. I have used only one bottle and I can say that I feel like a new man. My catarrh was chronic and very bad. I make this voluntary statement that others may know of the Balm.—J. W. Mathewson, (Lawyer), Pawtucket, R. I.
Ely's Cream Balm gives satisfaction to every one using it for catarrhal troubles.—G. K. Mellor, druggist, Mass. Apply balm in each nostril.

Miss Mary N. Prescott, who has just died, was the sister of Harriet Prescott Spofford, and herself a writer of charming prose and verse. She began to publish at fifteen.

It Won't Bake Bread.—In other words, Hood's Sarsaparilla will not do impossibilities. Its proprietors tell plainly what it has done, submit proofs from sources of unquestioned reliability, and ask you frankly if you are suffering from any disease or affection caused or promoted by impure blood or low state of the system, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. The experience of others is sufficient assurance that you will not be disappointed in the result.

Dr. Lucy C. Waite has been elected president of the Woman's Homœopathic Medical society of Chicago.

W. H. Pattee, salesman for Esterbrook & Eaton, Washington St. Boston, writes: "It gives me real pleasure to say that Adamson's Botanic Balsam cured me of a severe cold, to which I have been subject, especially during the winter months, and I have in many instances recommended it to my friends, and they have all been benefitted by its use. I think it has no equal as a cough mixture."

Mrs. Garfield has given $10,000 to the Garfield university at Wichita.

A Druggist Says.

Marvin C Brown, Druggist, Meredith village, N. H., says: I have sold your Sulpher Bitters for years, and, contrary to most medicines, I never sold a bottle to any one who said it did not help them. They cured me of those terrible sick headaches when every other remedy failed.

She Tried and Knows.

A leading chemist of New York says: "No plasters of such merit as the Ath-lo-pho-ros Plasters have ever before been produced." They are a novelty because they are not made simply to sell cheap, they are the best that science, skill and money can produce, and will do what is claimed for them. For sprains, aches, weakness, lameness, etc., they are unequaled.

About South American Musquitoes.

Some ludicrous stories are told about adventures with the musquitoes. I have been solemnly assured that very often when they have attacked a boat and driven its captain and crew below they have broken the windows of the cabin by plunging in swarms against them and have attempted to burst in the doors. Although this may be something of an exaggeration, it is nevertheless true that frequently horses and cattle, after the most frightful sufferings, have died from musquito bites on board the vessels. Not long ago a herd of valuable cattle were being taken from the United States to a ranch upon the Magdalena river and became so desperate under the attacks of the musquitoes that they broke from their stalls, jumped into the water and all were drowned. Passengers intending to make the voyage usually provide themselves with protection in the shape of musquito bars, head nets and thick gloves, and when on deck are compelled to tie their sleeves around their wrists and their pantaloons around their ankles.—American Magazine.

At His Post Day and Night,

The vigilant imp, indigestion, goads us with his many-lashed scourge. Each lash is a diabolic symptom. No comfort in eating, misery afterwards, little or broken rest at night, visitations of the nightmare during fitful intervals of sleep, an uprising unrefreshed and without appetite, sleepiness and yawning during the day, nervousness and irritability of temper, even monomania in extreme cases. Hard to bear, all this. Necessary? No! a thousand times no, so long as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the nation's specific for indigestion, acute or chronic, is procurable. The commencement of a course of this medicine is the commencement of a cure. Prompt relief first, absolute eradiction subsequently. The truth of this statement, backed up by irrefragable testimony, is well known to the American people. So are others, viz.: that the Bitters averts and cures fever and ague and bilious remittent, and removes nervousness, billiousness, constipation, and kidney and bladder troubles.

The last French rifle, as described, has a ball so small that a soldier can carry 220 rounds, shoots with a new smokeless powder, and its bullet pierces a brick wall eight inches thick at 500 yards.

Unable to Tell.

Yes, that was so. For years I suffered with scrofula; sores broke all over my body, and I am unable to tell one half that I suffered. I was not able to obtain relief until I used Sulpher Bitters, which completely cured me.—C. B. Dale, 17 Allston street, Boston.

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. The Women of Costa Rica.

The little delays at the various wayside stations afford excellent opportunities of observing the different types of Costa Ricans; for side by side with the traveled gentleman, attired with scrupulous regard to the fashions of this last quarter of the Nineteenth century, stand the barefooted men of the peon class, in nearly every case more than decently garbed, but with the silken scarf about the waist and the huge machete which are the insignia of their rank in life. These groups are always picturesque, for the costume of the women alone is sufficient to add a charm to the rapid succession of pictures ever passing in affluence of color and form before the eyes of the observant traveler.

These women, even small girls, wear full starched skirts that touch the ground, only displaying their small bare feet as the folds sway in the motion of walking. From living so much in the open air and from the amount of exercise taken, they nearly all glory in splendidly developed chests, which, with their rounded arms, are fully displayed by the low, much befrilled waists worn by them all, differing only in the matter of more or less adornment. Still, over their shoulders they dispose the folds of a silk or woolen scarf, or a bright colored handkerchief, which usually only reveals the full throat and the graceful curve of the arm and shoulder.

While referring to the beauty of the peon women it must be added that their pleasing appearance lasts only with the years of their first youth. Whether the exercise and the open air together produce a too early maturity, and in consequence a too early decay, it is hard to say—the result is there all the same. Side by side with the young and handsome daughter, the picture of blooming health, stands the mother—a worn and wrinkled crone—the two pictures of "She;" and looking from one to the other the heart is moved with the same compassion with which poor Holly gazed upon the awful remains of that imperial loveliness that had wrought such havoc with his middle aged affections.—Costa Rica Cor. St. Louis Republican.

Miles of Rose Plantations.

The railroad companies in Lower Hungary are successfully making use of the Provence rose for hedges by the sides of the railways to protect the tracks from drifting snow. The writer, in imagination, pictures the scene of a "summer's journey gladdened by the glory of roses, shining to the right and left of a swiftly gliding steam chariot, while the surrounding atmosphere is fraught with faintly subtle scents which superinduce a soft languor in the fortunate traveler."

Between Tatar Bazar and Adrianople the horseman following the post road on a sultry June day rides mile after mile through enormous rose plantations blazing with scarlet and crimson, and giving out odors well nigh as overpowering as that of the attar distilled from their gorgeous blossoms. In those fields of queen flowers he may gaze to his fill on "the Damask rose, whose rare mixture doth disclose beauties pencils cannot feign." The uncounted millions of roses grown in Roumelia are not merely turned to account by the rose farmers for sale to the preparers of that powerful essence which, inclosed in long, slender, carefully stopped bottles lettered with gold, is still so popular throughout the east, although it has quite gone out of fashion in this country. Many tons' weight of their leaves, gathered and packed while they are freshly fallen, are converted into rose jam, one of the exquisite conserves which, under the generic name of "dulchatz," are so admirably confected in Turkey, Greece and Roumania, and constitute a leading feature in the light but toothsome refection offered to the casual visitor in every well to do Oriental household.—Vick's Magazine.

Will of an Eccentric Doctor.

A curious custom was that which was observed quite recently in the parish church of St. Ives Hants. On a table in the church at the chancel steps were placed six Bibles, and near them a box and three dice. Six boys and six girls, solemnly watched over by the vicar, Rev. E. Tottenham, and a crowd of parishioners, threw dice each three times to see which should have the six Bibles. Three went to the boys and three to the girls. The highest throw was made by the smallest girl, 37.

This remarkable custom dates from 1678, when Dr. Robert Wylde bequeathed $2,500, of which the yearly interest was to be spent in buying six Bibles, not to cost more than seven shillings and sixpence each, to be cast for by dice on the communion table every year by six boys and six girls of the town. A piece of ground was bought with the money, and is now known as Bible Orchard. The legacy also provided for the payment of ten shillings each year to the vicar for preaching a sermon commending the excellency, perfection and divine authority of the holy Scriptures. The will of the eccentric doctor was exactly observed, and for more than two hundred years dice were regularly cast upon the communion table. Lately a table erected on the chancel steps was substituted, the bishop of the diocese having considered that the communion table was not for throwing dice.—Boston Transcript.

Galvanizing Wooden Type.

A recent French invention is reported of a process by which wooden type is galvanized as to the top of the letter only. It seems to be of a curious, rather than a specially valuable character, but by application to large type, the process does, it is claimed, result in the production of a strong type only a trifle heavier than the naked wood. It is also claimed that the coating of copper which is applied to the letter has the effect of making it as strong as one of type metal, and so serving to preserve the finest lines—a difficult thing to do with the wood. The galvanizing process is simple, for the type is placed in the ordinary galvanoplastic bath, but it is not explained just how the operation is confined to the top of the letter.—New York Mail and Express.

LIABILITY TO INSANITY.

No Such Thing as the "Insane Temperament"—Nervous Energy.

I doubt very much if there is any such thing as the "insane temperament." This is an organic constitution characterized by certain mental and physical qualities which is uniformly met with in those who are predisposed to insanity. At least no such temperament is recognized by physiologists or alienists of the present day. Systematic writers generally admit the existence of four distinct temperatures: the sanguine, the lymphatic or phlegmatic, the choleric or bilious, and the nervous. Every physician who has much to do with the treatment of insane persons has witnessed instances of mental derangement not only in individuals of each one of these temperaments, but in all their possible combinations. Indeed, it is rare to find a person in whom any one of the temperaments mentioned exists in its pure and simple form, those of mixed temperaments being greatly in the majority.

Perhaps the nervous temperament is the one which is the most frequently met with uncombined with any other temperament, or at least so greatly predominating as to obscure any other that may be present. This arises from the fact that it is the only temperament that can be acquired by mode of life. If there is any temperament which of itself predisposes to insanity it is the nervous. It may be well, therefore, to point out some of its chief characteristics.

The manifestations of nervous energy are markedly prominent, and give peculiar impress to the whole body and mind. The countenance is usually pale and the features thin and sharp; the pulse is quick, small and frequent, though not weak; the respiration active; the chest and muscular system are generally not largely developed; the skin is dry and rough and the digestive functions are performed irregularly. In consequence of the comparative weakness of the muscles, persons of this temperament easily become fatigued; though, owing to the activity of the nervous system, they quickly rally.

Prompt to form opinions and to arrive at conclusions, the subjects of the nervous temperament are not remarkable for stability of purpose. Their intellectual operations are rapid and brilliant, but at the same time not often persistent. Variety is constantly sought for, and the mental efforts, like the physical, are, as it were, spasmodic, full of energy while they last, but soon yielding to others.

Women were formerly much more frequently the subjects of this temperament than men, but owing to the constant effort to get rich manifested by the male sex in recent times, and the consequent extreme development of the emotional system and of certain faculties of the intellect, it is now far more common with men. Indeed, I am not sure but that in civilized communities, especially in the large cities of the United States, it has not become the predominating temperament. The man who day after day is kept upon a mental rack by that most harassing of all the emotions—anxiety—will inevitably undergo such psychical and bodily changes as will change him from any other original temperament to the one under notice. Of all the temperaments, it is particularly easy to be acquired. It is the outcome of civilization and refinement, and probably but for these agencies would never have arisen. Among barbarous nations it is almost unknown, and savages never exhibit it; but it is common enough in London, Paris and New York and in men who, if they had lived a hundred years ago, would have been as phlegmatic as the most typical Dutchman.

The diseases which are most apt to occur among individuals of the nervous temperament are those which concern the nervous system. Thus, we have the various forms of neuralgia, certain affections of the spinal cord, hysteria in all its protean varieties, St. Vitus' dance, catalepsy, ecstasy and insanity of all types. In fact, the nervous temperament itself is, if strongly developed, almost a pathological condition, the sensibility is so acute, the capability for receiving mental impressions so decided, and the system is so readily thrown into disorder from slight causes that the temperament in question may often be considered as the first manifestation of disease.

Persons of the nervous temperament are very subject to diseases which exist only in their imagination or which, being slight, are exaggerated by the constant habit of introspection in which they indulge. They are thus very frequently rendered seriously ill by the morbid attention they give to symptoms which are often by no means abnormal.

But although the existence of the nervous temperament in a person predisposes him or her more than does any other temperament to mental aberration, it is not to be supposed that it possesses this power to the exclusion of the other temperaments. The sanguine, the lymphatic and the choleric are by no means devoid of influence in this direction. Indeed, the latter is not far behind the nervous as a predominant temperament, in insane persons.

There is, therefore, no temperament which can par excellence be regarded as the insane temperament. Persons of all temperamental types are liable to insanity. Individual peculiarity is a factor not to be disregarded. Some people would never become insane, no matter what misfortunes might visit them or what mental shocks they might suffer, while others might lose their minds upon the supervention of the slightest possible disturbing event. One man will suffer the loss of family and friends and money and his mind will retain all its clearness and vigor, while another will go into his barn and hang himself when he learns that butter has fallen two cents a pound.—Dr. William A. Hammond in New York Mail and Express.

Novel Method of Communication.

It is related that Histæus, anxious to order Aristagoras to revolt, as the only safe way took the truest of his slaves, shaved his head, and, pricking the message upon his scalp, waited until the hair grew again, when he despatched him to Miletus, telling him to tell Aristagoras "to shave his head and look thereon." This was one way to communicate an important message.—New York Commercial Anvertiser.

TRADE S.S.S. MARK

An Important Announcement

About six weeks ago, while at business, I was suddenly attacked with excruciating pains in my feet, knees and hands. So severe the attack that I took my bed immediately, and in two or three days my joints were swollen to almost double their natural size, and sleep was driven from me. After suffering the most excruciating pain for a week, using liniments and various other remedies, a friend who sympathized with my helpless condition, said to me:

"Why don't you get Swift's Specific and use it. I will guarantee a cure, and if it does not the medicine shall cost you nothing."

I at once secured the S. S. S., and after using it the first day, had a quiet night and refreshing sleep. In a week I felt greatly benefitted. In three weeks I could sit up and walk about the room, and after using six bottles I was out and able to go to business. Since then I have been regularly at my post of duty, and stand on my feet from nine to ten hours a day, and am entirely free from pain. These are the plain and simple facts in my case, and I will cheerfully answer all inquiries relative thereto, either in person or by mail. THOMAS MARKLIE, 11 W. 18th street, New York City.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—I have warded off a severe attack of rheumatism by a timely resort to Swift's Specific. In all cases where a permanent relief is sought this medicine commends itself for a constitutional treatment that thoroughly eradicates the seeds of disease from the system. Rev. W. P. HARRISON, D. D.

NEW YORK, 51 7TH AVE.—After spending $200 to be relieved of Blood Poison without any benefit, a few bottles of Swift's Specific worked a perfect cure. C. FORTES.

VIENNA, GA.—My little girl, aged one and boy, aged four years, had scrofula in the worst aggravated shape. They were puny and sickly. To-day they are healthy and robust, all the result of taking S. S. S. JOE T. COLLIER.

LADY LAKE, SUMTER CO., FLA.—YOUR S. S. S. has proved a wonderful success in my case. The cancer on my face, no doubt, would have soon hurried me to my grave. I do think it is wonderful, and has no equal. B. H. BYRD, Postmaster.

OF NEW YORK.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

"American wages for American workmen."—Republican motto.

The President's Quick Ear.

The committee appointed by the democratic national convention to notify President Cleveland of his renomination, attended to that duty on the afternoon of June 26th, Gen. Patrick A. Collins of Boston leading the procession. In the president's answer to their address the following is the only noteworthy passage.

Familiarity with the great office which I hold has but added to my apprehension of its sacred character, and the consecration demanded of him who assumes its immense responsibilities. It is the repository of the people's will and power. Within its vision should be the protection and welfare of the humblest citizen, and with quick ear it should catch from the remotest corner of the land the plea of the people for justice and for right.

This is quite encouraging, and points to a glimmer of hope that the presidential ear may yet be able to catch the complaint of the millions of colored republicans, the acknowleged suppression of whose votes by violence and fraud has for so many years kept the south solid for partisan democracy. Mr. Clevelands ear was very quick to hear, and his pen to answer, the plea for pardon of Mullan, the Chicago scoundrel who as a lieutenant of police arrested without warrants more than a hundred colored republicans on the night before Cleveland and reform were voted for, and after keeping them locked up until after the polls closed next day, turned them out without any judicial examination, or any charge having been made against one of them. Mullan's plea was heard from, almost before the jury rendered their verdict against him, but the plea of the wronged colored men was unheeded; but then they would not have voted for Cleveland and reform, even had their votes not been suppressed by deliberately planned democratic crime.

Why Men Drink.

That wonderful humorist, Tom Hood, once remarked "There are five reasons why men drink! Good wine; a friend; because they are dry; or at least they may be bye and bye; or any other reason why." The last is perhaps the most common reason. James Parton once headed an article "will the coming man drink?" but as he failed to answer the query we will express a decided opinion: that, until the coming man learns to prize home, social family ties above all others, will he learn not to abuse his own organism. In March last a writer in the "Medical age" made some practical remarks upon this subject, and offered a timely hint which prohibition advocates would do well to note.

He says: "As long as the imperfections of humanity remain unfitted to its surroundings and conditions, so long evil and misery will continue, and men seek refuge in strong drink. Increase the sum of human happiness by whatever means possible, lessen the burdens and ameliorate the woes of mankind, remove hunger, disease and pain by a better physical and moral education, and you will have plucked out the fangs of that dire monster"—intemperance.

Among the worst morbid conditions resulting from the use of alcoholic liquors, as well as from improper food and customs of eating, are inflammation of the stomach, liver, kidneys and brain.

It matters not in what part of the body inflammation exists, or how severe it may be, whether it takes the form of gastric inflammation, in despepsia, or as in bronchitis, catarrh, hay-fever, pneumonia, rheumatism, or as in common cuts and bruises, Johnson's Anodyne Liniment will conquer it, relieve the pain and prove to you that it is indeed an anodyne of mighty power, and unlike all others, as it is for internal as well as external use.

A good Baptist deacon told us not long since that "he had known Johnson's Liniment for sixty years, and had used it in his family for over forty years." I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass., will send any person an instructive pamphlet free, telling all about this valuable household remedy and how to use it economically. One teaspoonful properly used is worth a whole bottle used as some people use it.

Are Always Sold When the Author of "A Dead Man's Millions" Writes a Story—He Will Have a New Story in Saturday's Globe.

Boston, June 27.—The stories of Richebourg, the great French author, usually have a sale of 1,000,000 copies. He wrote "A Dead Man's Millions," and a new novel of his, entitled "The Child of the Street; or the Mystery of the Two Marchionesses," will be begun in the Boston Daily Globe on Saturday of this week, June 30. This new story is one of the most powerful and fascinating stories of the year, and will be greatly enjoyed by all classes. Tell your dealer you will want Saturday's Globe.

A Grand Tour Through the Rocky Mountains.

Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb have planned a series of grand tours through Colorado for the summer and early autumn, that cannot fail to be immensely popular. It is the most comprehensive trip through the Rocky Mountains ever yet arranged, and brings a score or more famous places under inspection. The journey is to be made in a leisurely manner, with restful halts at hotels every night, the travelling through the mountain region being done wholly by daylight. Thus, nothing is to be omitted in the way of sight seeing. Details of the excursions, one of which is to take place in July and another in September, may be gleaned from a descriptive circular just issued. "Independent Trips" to Colorado may be made in connection with these tours or in August and October. There are also to be a series of Yellowstone National Park excursions, and "Seventeen July Trips" to points of interest in the East. Address, W. Raymond, 296 Washington street, opposite School street, Boston, for circulars.

At a cabinet meeting recently the question was discussed as to the propriety of the members selling their shares in the Pan-Electric stock. Mr. Whitney thought it was time to unload, and Mr. Endicott favored the plan of firing it off. Mr. Garland believed in holding on. The president felt that it would be awkward if the facts concerning the manner in which the stock had been distributed, and the means employed to make the government fight the Bell company, should come out by means of congressional investigation or some campaign enquiry. The market was governed by the bears almost entirely.

Charles A. Pitcher, teller of the Union bank of Providence, R. I., stole all he could lay his hands on, and departed. He was arrested in Montreal on June 26th, and $700,000 in securities and cash captured. He evidently wanted more pay than a first class base ball pitcher.

Dr. A. A. Albrecht, who killed David Lanahan and Edward Flanagan in a Boston gambling hell early last year, on June 26th pleaded guilty to a charge of manslaughter, and was sentenced to four years in state prison.

The late emperior of Germany disliked to hear any one speak slightingly of women. When he was crown prince, an officer once remarked of a wounded comrade that he was "weeping like a woman." "Never make that comparison," said the crown prince with a frown. "Crying like an unweaned child would be better. Women have more fortitude than men."

Miss Annie Romberger, of Philadelphia, is believed to be the first woman dentist in America. She entered the Pennsylvania College of Dental Surgery more than fifteen years ago, completed the course in spite of some opposition from students and faculty, and graduated third in her class. For twelve years she has been building up her practice, which is now said to give her an income of $5,000 a year.

Two women, Miss Hutchins and Miss Smith, who have been travelling alone and on foot through the mountain scenery of northern California, arrived in Sacramento the other day. They are accompanied by a large dog, which they call Sullivan. They carry pistols and blankets, and sleep wherever night overtakes them. They will next travel through the southern part of the state, and intend finally to write a book describing their wanderings.

Mrs. Susanna M. Salter, who became so widely known last year as the mayor of Argonia, Kan., writes to the Woman's Journal that the cyclone which recently visited the town costs no lives, though it destroyed more than $50,000 worth of property. She adds that the papers, which attributed the disaster to her election as mayor, seem not to be aware that her term of office expired two months before the visit of the tornado.

At Chicago the republican committee on platform gave a hearing to Miss Susan B. Anthony, Miss Caroline A. Huling, and Mrs. Isabella Beecher Hooker, who urged the adoption of a women suffrage plank. They were listened to with courtesy, and when they retired, the committee stood up as a mark of respect. This behavior was in strong contrast to that of the democratic convention, which voted to give Mrs. Merriweather a hearing, and then drowned her voice with cat-calls and the playing of the brass band.

Mrs. Peter Hoke's Money Arrived Safely.

Last week we noticed that Mrs. Peter Hoke of Emmittsburg, Md., had drawn $5,000 in the Louisiana State Lottery, and we give the following: About two weeks ago Mrs. Hoke sent one dollar to M. A. Dauphin, by express, for one-tenth ticket in the May drawing, and received Ticket No. 21,492. After she learned that ticket No. 21,492 had drawn the Second Capital Prize of $50,000 the ticket was sent by express to New Orleans. Just seven days after the express agent at this place left a letter at Mrs. Hoke's containing a draft on a New York Bank for the amount, $5,000.—Emmittsburg (Md.) Chronicle, May 26.

The First Symptoms

Of all Lung diseases are much the same: feverishness, loss of appetite, sore throat, pains in the chest and back, headache, etc. In a few days you may be well, or, on the other hand, you may be down with Pneumonia or "galloping Consumption." Run no risks, but begin immediately to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Several years ago, James Birchard, of Darien, Conn., was severely ill. The doctors said he was in Consumption, and that they could do nothing for him, but advised him, as a last resort, to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking this medicine, two or three months, he was pronounced a well man. His health remains good to the present day.

J. S. Bradley, Malden, Mass., writes: "Three winters ago I took a severe cold, which rapidly developed into Bronchitis and Consumption. I was so weak that I could not sit up, was much emaciated, and coughed incessantly. I consulted several doctors, but they were powerless, and all agreed that I was in Consumption. At last, a friend brought me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. From the first dose, I found relief. Two bottles cured me, and my health has since been perfect."

NEW YORK'S FREE PHYSIC.

All Sorts of People Supplied with Drugs for All Manner of Complaints.

There are many medical dispensaries scattered over the different wards of New York and Brooklyn, and they vary in character mainly in the class of people who patronize them—the very poor, who for obvious reasons are driven to resort to them, and the rich or moderately circumstanced who know little more than that a dispensary is a place to which people resort when they are sick to get free medical treatment.

The oldest and largest of these free dispensaries is the New York dispensary in Center street, which has been in operation over ninety years, and has treated over 3,000,000 patients. The old Northern dispensary in Christopher street, founded in 1817, treats about 20,000 patients annually; the Eastern, in Essex street, founded in 1832, does equally good work, while the Demilt, founded in 1851, the Northwestern, the German, the Northeastern, and a host of outdoor departments of hospitals, asylums, charitable societies and so on.

The Demilt dispensary is a three story brick building. The main reception room is filled with wooden benches and divided into seven or eight compartments at one side. These and two or three ordinary rooms that also open into the main room, are the offices of the staff of physicians, each having his special department of ailments to attend to. The visiting hours are different for different classes of ailments; children are treated at one hour, men at another, women at another, and so on. Two female doctors preside evenings to attend to female patients who have to work during the daytime. Every sort of ailment except contagious diseases is freely treated here.

Whatever of misery there is in this perpetual stream of the sick poor is not visible in the main room. Dr. Charles G. Currier, the house physician, says a great many more women than men are treated, and that women seem to be more frequently ill, or are more prone to believe themselves ill, when they are not so, than men, who are more practical and come for help only when absolutely necessary.

The women are for the most part neatly dressed and the majority of them look well, if not rugged, though now and then a cough or other sign will betoken the fact that they are suffering. As the people enter the building they go to the first of the small rooms, where the house physician sits, and tell him what the matter is.

"I want a tooth pulled," says one.

"I have rheumatism," says another.

Others will have a headache, a backache or a sprain, and so on. Very frequently an inebriated individual will enter.

"I've been on a spree and want to sober up," a young man will say.

A dose of bromide of potassium and chloral is given, and he is told to go home and go to bed and come back in a few hours. One woman calls and says she has a sister with the "ammonia," and another has a friend with the "brown keeters," and in the course of a day much similar perversion of medical nomenclature may be heard. The utmost civility and greatest kindness are always practiced toward patients at this dispensary. A great many painters are treated for lead palsy at dispensaries.

"The lead that poisons them is taken into the system through the mouth," said Dr. Starr. "When they quit work they fall to eating their luncheon without washing their hands, and so take in, little by little, enough lead to do the mischief. They breathe in the lead also in warm, close rooms; but it is the stomach, and not, as might be supposed, the lungs, that become at first affected. The electrical treatment applied to the muscles is the most satisfactory, and will soonest restore the nerves to their normal condition."

There have been recent additions which make the work far more efficient today than it was in the dispensary of a quarter of a century ago. For instance, the doctors interest themselves in securing employment for painters disabled at their trade so as to make them unable to continue at it; then again, there are trained nurses in constant attendance at the dispensaries, who instruct friends of patients how to care for them at home, and if cases require it to go to the houses to nurse the sick themselves. Bed sheets, pillow cases, underclothing, skirts, dresses, etc., are also kept in stock at some of the dispensaries for free distribution among the worthy poor.

Medical experts in all departments serve without pay for the experience and the honor, and so excellent is the reputation of some of the dispensaries that many members of their medical staffs have been called to the larger hospitals and made faculty members of their boards.

In the annual report of the Demilt dispensary for last year it appears that 27,500 people were treated by that institution for every conceivable variety of disease, and many more visited at their homes by its doctors. A doctor will be sent to visit any sick person of whom they are notified. Ten cents is charged for each prescription made up only from those who acknowledge they are willing and able to pay it. By far the great majority pay nothing at all. It is an interesting commentary on the general retail drug store prices that ten cents is found to be fair compensation for all prescriptions. For every expensive compound on which there is a loss of ten or fifteen cents there are two or three cheap ones costing only two or three cents.

It has been found impossible to discriminate as to the eligibility of indoor patients for charity treatment. No one can always determine whether a man or woman is or is not able to pay for the medicines used in their behalf. The outward appearance determines little, as many, particularly among the women, wear very fair clothing which has been given to them. On the other hand a man may look as shabby as one well could and yet be the owner of one or more houses. All realize that it is impossible to determine the worldly condition of patients by their looks, so no other question is asked than whether the patient can pay ten cents.—New York Press.

Reticence, concentration and continuity are characteristics which cannot influence one part of a man's life without influencing the rest as well.

An Automatic Novel Reader.

It is suggested that, among other things, the phonograph may be used as an automatic novel reader, with each character speaking, as it were, in proprin persona. That is, the phonogram will be produced with the various voices as in nature, all the inflections of passion, sorrow, sympathy, ridicule and sarcasm, and songs, etc., uttered to it originally by professional elocutionists, dialecticians and singers.—Chicago News.

CORPORATION MEETING.

At a meeting of the proprietors of Newcastle bridge, held at the toll-house on Monday, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Directors, M. Spinney, Elmer E. Tucker, Ephrain Urch, A. A. Rogers, R. A. Spinney; corporation clerk, David Urch.

PERSONAL.

Miss Mary E. B. Miller of Boston arrive in this city on Monday, for a visit of several months to her sister, Mrs. S. E. Pearson, of Broad street.

Mrs. George Evans and Miss Marie Evans, of Louisville, Ky., arrived in this city on Monday on a summe'r visit to Mrs. Evans' father, Mr. Augustus W. Odiorne of State street.

Mrs. Otis, wife of Mr. J. Orville Otis of Boston, with her two children, arrived in Kittery on Saturday last, on an extended visit to her parents, Carpenter N. H. Junkins of the United States navy, and wife.

[illegible] visit to relatives and friends here.

A. J. Hoyt, Esq., of the Exeter Protest, was in town on Monday, visiting his friends, to whom his presence is always welcome.

Mr. Stephen L. Grant and wife, of Limerick, Me., were in this city on Thursday of last week.

Mrs. George A. McDermott of New York city is visiting Mrs. George H. Sanderson of this city.

Mrs. Warren K. Pryor of South Boston is in this city on a visit to her son, Mr. Frank L. Pryor.

Miss Jesie Smith and Master Willie Smith, of Parkersville, this state, are visiting Mrs. Edgar D. Stoddard.

Mr. P. J. Dolan of Boston, formerly of this city, is passing a vacation of two weeks here.

Mrs. John J. Pickering and her brother, Mr. J. Horace Jenness, arrived in New York on Saturday, June 30th, from Europe.

Says the Penny Post: "One of the most vigorous old gentlemen in this vicinity is Deacon Joseph Cox of Kittery, who is over ninety years of age. He was present at the graduating exercises at Music hall last week, at which time his two grand-children, Miss Josie E. Cox and Mr. Ralph E. Cox, graduated."

The inmates of the Chase Home for Children received an invitation to pass the 4th at Rosemary Cottage, Eliot, but owing to the recent prevalence of measles at the home the kind invitation was declined.

The newspaper men of Boston were guests at the Wentworth, Newcastle, on Sunday.

A new flag bearing the portraits of Cleveland and Thurman on either side, and inscribed in the usual style of presidential banners, was displayed in front of Hon. Frank Jones' office on Market street Monday afternoon, in place of the old banner first hoisted there.

Mr. Robert E. Rich has commenced laying the foundation of a house on his lot corner of Highland and Broad streets, nearly opposite the residence of Mr. B. F. Webster.

The Water street people say the street is a very dangerous locality, and a good many people don't like to travel through it on account of the bad condition of its old-fashioned and badly-laid beach-stone road. Many heavy tax payers, too, do business on it, and heavily-loaded teams pass over it. No wonder that the Fourth of July procession will not now go over the street where in olden time the Liberty Pole was erected, and the evergreen trees were placed, and the first American flags raised, by the heroes of 1776 and 1812.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

It is requested that no fire crackers or other explosives be used on the route during the march of the procession July 4th.

The city marshal is instructed to see that the above request is complied with.

GEORGE E. HODGDON, Mayor.

NOTICE TO VETERANS.

Headquarters Storer Post, No. 1, G. A. R., Department of New Hampshire.
PORTSMOUTH, N. H., June 29, 1888.

At a meeting of this Post held on the evening of the 27th instant it was voted to invite all Veterans to join in the procession and be present at the dedication of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, on the 4th of July.

M. M. COLLIS, Adjutant.

Park Commissioner Eldredge had a force at work on Monday in Goodwin Park, grading and terracing the grounds around the monument—work which had to be deferred, and which could not be satisfactorily done until after the elegant memorial had received all its finishings.

The roofing over of the collation tent in the city yard, with sails from the navy yard, was commenced on Monday.

The front of the city building was handsomely dressed on Monday, in preparation for the 4th.

An extra passenger train will leave this city for Dover on the 4th at 7:20 P. M., to accommodate those who may come from that city to attend the celebration.

The Rockingham house was decorated for the 4th on Monday. The vast front-[illegible] the excellence of the taste and skill, and the admiring comments of hundreds during the day showed that he had made good use of the opportunity.

There were fifteen boats on the south pond, Monday evening, getting sticks up and otherwise making preparations for the illuminated procession on the evening of the 4th.

A lobster salad will be laid upon the table of Wm. H. Dunn's sample rooms on Water street this evening.

A little child of Mr. Howard Anderson, of Washington street, while crossing Pleasant street to Mr. Howard S. Laskey's store on Monday forenoon, was knocked down by a carelessly driven store team. The child was kicked in the head by the horse, but was saved from further harm by Mr. Manning Walden, who caught the horse by the head and forced him back on his haunches.

A dividend on the stock of the schooners Annie F. Conlon and Grace K. Green was being paid on Monday at the office of the agent of the vessels, Mr. Charles E. Walter.

The Portsmouth Shoe company paid to its employes for wages during the month of May over $60,000, and the pay roll for June amounted to $35,000.

John W. Fogg Hobbs of North Hampton has his new summer residence at Rye nearly completed. He has done a good thing for Rye beach by taking the first step to secure safe and permanent drainage, directly into the ocean. His latest improvement is to erect a large tower, windmill, and tank, to supply abundance of water for "flushing" the sewer.

GLYCEROL !

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerol is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

"IT WAS INHERITED."

The Fearful Effect of Heredity Upon the Lives of Men and Women—A Striking Case.

"The man or woman does not live who is free from hereditary influences." This remark was made by the celebrated Dr. Vanderville, of New York, to the Rev. Dr. Brooks, at a recent convention of scientists. "I agree with you, doctor," said the divine.

"Pure blood," continued the doctor, "is the great cause of health; impaired blood the source of most diseases. It may even go back to the grand or great grand parents."

"I have in mind a prominent man," said the reverend gentleman, "General Alfred C. Monroe, of No. 1 Pemberton Square, Boston. He inherited kidney troubles from both parents, one of whom died with it. He suffered terribly from pains in the back and head, and at times when walking the dizziness became so bad that he was compelled to lay hold of some convenient post for support. He was in a most desperate condition."

"And is he so still?" asked the doctor.

"No, he is in perfect health. Dr. McGregor, I believe of Maine, who had amputated an arm for the general, cured him."

"Do you know what medicine he used?"

"I understand it was Hunt's Remedy."

"Oh, Hunt's Remedy. I know it very well," said Dr. Vanderville. "I consider it the best remedy for kidney, liver, heart troubles, and female difficulties in the world. It is in no sense a patent medicine, but a standard remedy, which deserves to be used by all intelligent people. The fact is, no blood-taint can exist when the kidneys are in perfect order, and there is where Hunt's Remedy shows its marvelous superiority."

"I only wish," said Rev. Dr. Brooks, "that all people who inherit a tendency to disease could know of this remedy of which you speak so highly and use it. I am positive it would greatly lessen suffering and death."

OH, WHAT A COLD!

THIS is the season for sudden changes in the weather, and a great many "take cold" either in their Head or on their Lungs, causing Coughs, Hoarseness, and Sore Throat. These troubles can be soon relieved and cured by taking Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs, entirely removing these difficulties.

Cured his boy of Croup.

C. M. BROOKS, Lowell, Mass., says: "I take great pleasure in recommending Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific as a cure for Coughs, Colds, and Croup. I used it in my family last winter with the best results. Two or three doses cured my little boy of Croup, for which I am very thankful."

You can cure that Cough in a short time. You can cure your Catarrh if you persist in its use, as it will stop the secretion of Catarrhal matter in the head; it will relieve Croup in from three to five minutes.

The best he ever saw.

"The best medicine for Coughs and Consumptive Complaints that ever I saw is Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific," so says JOHN McLAUGHLIN, of Boston.

Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific is sold by all Druggists. Price 50 cents and $1. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

NOTICE is hereby given that Sagamore ... and the highway leading thereto ... extensive repairs, will be closed to public ... on and after Thursday, April 19th.

GEORGE E. HODGDON,

HOME.

There lies a little city in the hills,
White are its roofs, dim is each dwelling's door,
And peace with perfect rest its bosom fills.

There the pure mist, the pity of the sea,
Comes as a white soft hand, and reaches o'er,
And touches its still face most tenderly.

Unstirred and calm, amid our shifting years,
Lo! where it lies, far from the clash and roar,
With quiet distance blurred, as if through tears.

O heart, that prayest so for God to send
Some loving messenger to go before,
And lead the way to where thy longings end.

Be sure, be very sure, that soon will come
His kindest angel, and through that still door
Into the Infinite Love will lead thee home.

—Edward Rowland Sill in Hebrew Messenger.

West Point Cadets' "Skin Board."

Up in his office the major of infantry who commands the battalion of cadets is busy with the arduous duties of his position. Hanging in the lower hallway that leads to his office is a huge frame filled with closely written sheets of paper. This is the delinquency list, or in cadet slang, the "skin board." Approaching it we read:

"Anderson—Wearing cap in quarters at police inspection.

"Armstrong—Odor of tobacco smoke in quarters at inspection by officers of the day.

"Billingsgate—Using profane expression 9:15 a. m.

"Same—Absent from room at a. m. inspection.

"Brooks—Slow extinguishing light at taps," and so on throughout the long list. On Friday punishments fitting their respective offenses will be awarded the delinquents.

Academic regulations are very strict, being the combined result of the experiences of a long line of superintendents, and any cadet who could and would go through his whole four years' course without breaking any of them should, at its close, be graduated straight through the pearly gates and receive a golden harp instead of a diploma. He, during his four years' course, would have carefully refrained from the use of stimulants, bad language and tobacco in any form; would have attended divine service at least once a week; would have lived with his comrades in a spirit of brotherly love; would have kept his shoes bright, his collar spotless, and would have been promptly on hand for every one of his manifold duties. Such is the ideal cadet, and the regulations are intended to make the real ones approach as near to him as possible. But, alas! they are all sons of Adam, and the "skin list" is the unfortunate result.—Lieut. E. W. Lewis in Inter Ocean.

Fast Travel on the Ocean.

It gives a confirmed landsman a cold chill when he reads that the Etruria ran through fogs at a rate almost equaling an express train. Is this kind of thing safe? That is the question. The opinions of those who ought to know are almost unanimously in favor of getting out of a fog just as quickly as possible, and there seems to be no question but the driving through a fog at a high rate of speed is the best thing to do under the circumstances.

The only vessels lost during recent years have been lost while either standing still or going slowly. If the Oregon had been going faster she would not have been struck. Still the same may slower. The City of Brussels was standing still in a fog when she was run down. In many respects a fast steamer has great advantages over a slow one. She can keep in the position she wants to in a storm, and in many cases she can avoid a storm altogether or outrun it or get on the outer edges of it. A steamer going at a high rate of speed will answer her helm much better than a slower boat. When a steamer slows down the roar of escaping steam renders it impossible to hear anything except the roar. When she is going at full speed everything is as quiet as it is possible to be, and the whistle of an approaching steamer can be heard and to a certain extent located. If a steamer takes two days instead of three days to get through a fog bank it is evident that the percentage of danger is lessened just that much.

So in spite of what the papers have been saying of the recklessness of running a big ship through a fog at good speed, it seems to be the safest thing to do.—Detroit Free Press.

Flowers in Popular Lore.

It is a remarkable fact that flowers have usually been regarded as beneficent in popular lore. While animals are frequently diabolical, flowers are seldom accredited with any malign influences. Their connection with religion has ever been an intimate one, and their beautifying use in the important ceremonies of life—at marriage, death and burial—have always endeared them to every one, so that their mission has always been a softening and humanizing one. Many of the humblest flowers and most neglected weeds have been regarded as sacred at some time or another.

This fact of the good will held towards flowers in popular lore is partially shown by the beneficent names applied to them, as heart's ease, traveler's joy, shepherd's needle, honesty, etc. There are, however, some exceptions to this beneficent character. In Silesia it is said that flowers should not be laid on a sick person's bed. In Westphalia, no child should be decked with flowers until it is a year old, as it would die soon, and the flowers wither. German peasants say flowers should not be laid on the mouth of a corpse, lest it bite them and become a Nachzehrer, or sort of vampire. In England, to dream of white flowers means death, and the same is indicated by the sudden blooming of a white rose bush. Any one who throws a rose into an open grave will waste away.—F. S. Bassett in Globe-Democrat.

In a Morocco Bakeshop.

In going through the city to the Jews' quarters I stopped at an Arab bakeshop, where I saw a pleasant looking chap, hoping I should get an invitation to visit his establishment, but as it did not come, I invited myself and walked in. The wheat is ground by hand between two flat stones, and sometimes when a mother is grinding she will amuse and utilize her child by seating him on the top stone, giving him a ride and increasing the milling power at the same time.

The Moorish oven is a big mud room perhaps twenty feet square by six high, and the loaves, shaped something like an apoplectic mince pie, are ranged on both sides of this room, a fire of palm branches and bamboo then being built on the floor between the rows of bread. This fire is fed constantly by a boy standing at the entrance with an arrangement something like a Tremont Temple contribution box, on which he places the fuel for the nearest fires, but the farthest he feeds by taking an armful of stuff, rushing into the oven and throwing it upon the heap. The bread from this practice has a mingled taste of smoke and fried Moor, which is perhaps more healthy and strengthening than agreeable to the uncultivated taste.—Morocco Cor. Boston

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood; he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor!" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

Numerous burglaries are reported from eastern Maine.

All who suffer from coughs, colds, irritation of the bronchial tubes, or tendency to consumption, will find in Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry a remedy as agreeable to the palate as effectual in removing disease. The Balsam is a pleasant, safe, powerful and speedy remedy; it is a remedy that cures.

For thirty years I have been troubled with catarrh—have tried a number of remedies without relief. A druggist here recommended Ely's Cream Balm. I have used only one bottle and I can say that I feel like a new man. My catarrh was chronic and very bad. I make this voluntary statement that others may know of the Balm.—J. W. Mathewson, (Lawyer), Pawtucket, R. I.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

A Druggist Says.

No Failure After All.

The late Rev. H. Ware, of Boston, was once in a curious predicament. In the middle of a sermon his memory failed him and he stopped abruptly. The pause seemed long to the preacher before he regained his thought, and he imagined the sermon to be a failure in consequence; but as he walked quietly up the aisle, a different impression was given to him. "How did you like the sermon?" asked one hearer of another. "Like it? It is the best sermon Mr. Ware has ever preached. That pause was sublime!"—The Argonaut.

Giving Up a Career.

"I'm goin' to be a soldier, ma, when I grow up," said Bobby, as he crawled into bed, "and fight in wars and battles."

"All right, Bobby; now go to sleep."

In the morning she shook him for the fourth time and said:

"Bobby, you must get up; the idea of a soldier lying abed at this hour!"

"Well, ma," said Bobby, sleepily. "I've changed my mind about being a soldier."—New York Sun.

A Popular Delusion.

The idea that the body "changes" every seven years, or at any other period, is a popular delusion. Read any text book of physiology and you will find that life is really a constant series of changes, which proceed every minute you live. Changes of chemical and physical kind are always going on within the body, and the very fact that you require food daily is a proof of this.—Herald of Health.

A Domestic Bonanza.

Husband—The weather probabilities predict fair weather, but the prediction is wrong; it is going to rain; my corns pain me frightfully, and that sign never fails.

Wife—I know it, so I shall not attempt to go down town. Your corns are such a comfort to me, John.—The Epoch.

At His Post Day and Night,

The vigilant imp, indigestion, goads us with his many-lashed scourge. Each lash is a diabolic symptom. No comfort in eating, misery afterwards, little or broken rest at night, visitations of the nightmare during fitful intervals of sleep, an uprising unrefreshed and without appetite, sleepiness and yawning during the day, nervousness and irritability of temper, even monomania in extreme cases. Hard to bear, all this. Necessary? No! a thousand times no, so long as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the nation's specific for indigestion, acute or chronic, is procurable. The commencement of a course of this medicine is the commencement of a cure. Prompt relief first, absolute eradiction subsequently. The truth of this statement, backed up by irrefragable testimony, is well known to the American people. So are others, viz.: that the Bitters averts and cures fever and ague and billious remittent, and removes nervousness, billiousness, constipation, and kidney and bladder troubles.

We take much pleasure in recommending the use of Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer as safe and reliable for estoring gray hair to its natural color.

John Legro of Rochester, was badly, if not fatally injured by a tree falling upon him. He is seventy two years old.

Unable to Tell.

Yes, that was so. For years I suffered with scrofula; sores broke all over my body, and I am unable to tell one half that I suffered. I was not able to obtain relief until I used Sulpher Bitters, which completely cured me.—C. B. Dale, 17 Allston street, Boston.

Get rid of that tired feelling as quick as possible. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives strength, a good appetite, and health.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 50c. and $1. Trial size free. At all Druggists.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS — Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases the tumors. All druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia. 4p6

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. W. Slocum, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y.

WHO BIDES HIS TIME.

Who bides his time—he tastes the sweet
Of honey, in the saltest tear:
And though he fares with slowest feet,
Joy runs to meet him, drawing near;
The birds are heralds of his cause,
And, like a never ending rhyme,
The roadsides bloom in his applause,
Who bides his time.

—James Whitcomb Riley.

An Improvement in Dentistry.

A well known dentist has lately received a patent upon an electrical appliance that has certainly solved one of the many difficulties attending the proper handling of the human teeth. Heretofore a whole gold tooth has been made by the old fashioned swedging process, at once clumsy and hardly effective. The gold cones are technically called galvano plastic tooth crowns, and the process of making them is very simple. A soft metallic model of the tooth is made, this being done perfectly by first taking an impression of the tooth. The metallic model is then placed in a dynamo electric bath, and a deposit of pure gold is thus formed all over the model. When this gold has attained a suitable thickness the soft metal is easily melted out without injuring the cone, leaving a perfect smooth gold tooth crown. This process is far easier than the old way, and has received marked attention from the scientific dental organs in the east.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Prehistoric Relics in Dakota.

Miss Capitola McCuna, who teaches school in a district south of Sanborn, and one of her pupils recently visited an Indian mound not far from the school. Out of curiosity they began digging in the top of the mound, and near the surface came upon an interesting relic of the mound builders. It is somewhat in the form of a vase, with a low round top and narrow neck, and is composed of baked clay, which from its peculiar color would indicate that it had been painted. It has four handles somewhat resembling a reptile of the crocodile order. The eyes, nose, mouth, tail and ridges on the back are plainly discernible, but the reptile represented is not of a kind now known. It is finely finished, showing workmanship of a high order.—Mandan (D. T.) Letter.

Rule in Making Investments.

Not ten out of one hundred mining companies will ever pay back the money invested. There is an old adage that one person can see as far into a rock as another, so I would advise investments on top of the ground, where they can be seen occasionally: they will turn out much more satisfactorily if good judgment is used in making them. An old rule in making investments is as follows: "The time to buy is when things are cheap; the time to sell is when they are dear; the time to purchase is when everybody wants to sell; and the time to sell is when everybody wants to buy." If this rule is followed, combined with good judgment as to the investments made, it will generally lead to good results.—Cor. London Economist.

A Good Pencil Sharpener Needed.

Popular Science News directs the attention of inventors to the demand for a good form of pencil sharpener. It is a great annoyance to constantly stop and fashion a fresh point, with the accompanying search for a penknife and the disposal of the dust and shavings. The pencil sharpeners in common use make a point so short and blunt that the sharpening process must be repeated every few minutes. What is needed is some device which can be sold at a low price and which will cut a long, sharp, tapering point, such as at present can only be formed by a penknife in the hands of an expert sharpener.—Chicago News.

Our Best Native Woods.

According to Professor Sargent, the strongest wood in the United States is that of the nutmeg hickory of the Arkansas region, and the weakest the West Indian birch. The most elastic is the tamarack, the white or shellbark hickory standing far below it. The least elastic, and the lowest in specific gravity, is the wood of the ficus aurea. The highest specific gravity, upon which in general depends value as fuel, is attained by the bluewood of Texas.—New York Sun.

Geological Effects of Ice.

The geological effects of ice seem to have been greatly exaggerated. From personal study of living glaciers in Norway, and similar experiences by others, Professor J. W. Spencer declares that the potency of land glaciers to act as great eroding agents, capable of "planing down half a continent," or plowing out great valleys or lake basins, or even of greatly modifying them, is most strongly negatived.—Boston Budget.

A Great Inventor.

"It's just wonderful, Bromley, how Edison keeps on inventing things. He hasn't his equal in the world."

"Darringer, I don't know about that. If my boy keeps on he'll beat Edison all hollow. He's inventing something every day."

"You don't say so! Why, what does he invent?"

"Excuses."—Detroit Free Press.

An Outing for the Babies.

"And if I should die, dear," said a sick husband, "will you sometimes visit my grave?"

"Yes, John," she replied brokenly, "every pleasant Sunday afternoon, and I will take the children. Poor little things, they don't have very much to enjoy!"—The Epoch.

In the German reichstag there are 338 smokers and 89 non-smokers.

Jews of the World.

Mr. F. D. Mocatta, in his recent interesting lecture on Judaism, estimated the total number of Jews throughout the world as between 8,000,000 and 10,000,000. In the United Kingdom there are about 100,000, of whom seven-tenths are in London, the great part of the remainder being in Manchester, Liverpool, Leeds and Birmingham. Scotland reckons only 1,500, Ireland only 1,000. In the British colonies there are something less than 20,000. In France there are 70,000, of whom 40,000 are in Paris. About 40,000 were transferred upon the annexation of the provinces to the German empire, among whose 50,000,000 of inhabitants 600,000 belong to this remarkable race. Jews are found in large numbers along the northern coasts of Africa as well as in Abyssinia. In America there are 500,000, and Jews are dwelling in Mexico and in almost every state of South America. There are supposed to be from 40,000 to 50,000 in Persia, 10,000 to 15,000 in the Khanates, and a like number in India. Switzerland, Belgium and Holland have also considerable Jewish population.

The influx of Jews into Palestine from other parts of the Turkish dominions and also from Poland, Russia and Central Europe, which has been going on from the early part of the present century, is a noteworthy fact. The Turkish government is described as showing an entire toleration, but it is not now favorable to an immigration into Palestine, a circumstance attributed to fear of the inroad of European ideas. The state of the Jews in the Holy Land is, according to this authority, not a happy one. There is but little outlet for their energies. A large number give themselves entirely up to Hebrew studies, while the bulk of them eke out a miserable livelihood by small industries, apparently aided, but in reality intensified in pauperism by the pernicious system of "Halukah" or distribution of alms sent from various countries, which are doled out among the Jewish population in small sums.—London Daily News.

A Flogging Match in Persia.

Among the subjects of the shah blows and domineering actions are freely given and taken without a thought of bad blood resulting therefrom. I once saw a regular pitched battle, or, more correctly, a flogging match, between two gangs of Persian charvadras on the road near Tabreez. It was a curious exhibition of meekness and ferocity. The fighting, if it could be called fighting, was done with sticks. One man would hump his shoulders and with a propitiatory grin retreat, while his assailant rained upon him a torrent of blows and grunts and imprecations. The rage of the aggressor becoming exhausted, he would desist, winding up with a torrent of abuse. Finding himself free from blows, the other party would now bristle up in self defense and begin to turn the tables on his late assailant, who, in turn, would now retreat and grin and hump his back. There was no striking back, blow for blow—no opposition. It was simply a flogging match, turn about, in which one man would have his innings and then another. This sort of thing continued for ten or fifteen minutes, when everybody seemed to think that enough blows had been received and delivered, and the party separated almost with good humor.

But this was an affair between parties of equal social rank; the Persian ryot never strikes back at his social superior, no matter how trifling the degree of difference may be between them. The servants of the great man, too, are almost as sacred from resistance and attack as the great man himself. A Persian peasant would never think of striking back at the Khan's farrash, who lays about him vigorously, on occasion, with a long switch, much as though he were chasing away cattle. Old and young receive blows without resentment.—Thomas Stevens' Letter.

What Primitive Man Ate.

Primitive man, wherever he was cast, whether in one center or in more than one, must of necessity have found his food in the plant world. We cannot imagine him commencing his career learned in the arts of hunting, killing and cooking the lower animals for food. Many infer from this circumstance that the argument in favor of the vegetarian practice is copied direct from nature, signed and delivered by her. Not quite so fast. There is one interposing barrier to the free acceptance of vegetarian deed and act of conveyance of food from nature to man. Nature herself, of her own right royal will, makes for animals, herbivorous and carnivorous, one distinctive animal food; a secretion from the living animal organism, a fluid which is a standard food—meat and drink in one—the fluid known under the name of milk. Against absolute vegetarianism, then, we may fairly set up one exception derived from nature as the unerring guide.

On observing the habits of animals we discover another natural fact. We find that animals of quite different natures, in respect to primitive selection of food, possess the power of changing their modes of feeding and of passing over, as it were, from one class to another. This change is distinct but limited, and we must accept it with all its extension on the one side and with all its limitation on the other. The fruit eating ape can be taught under privation to subsist on animal diet; a dog can, I believe, be taught to subsist on vegetable diet. But it would be as impossible to teach a sheep to eat flesh as it would be to make a lion feed on grass.—Dr. Richardson in Longman's magazine.

Discipline in Public Schools.

There is sense—but not common sense, only capital good sense—in the complaint of "A Mother" that the desperate attempt to educate her children on the part of the public schools is leaving them neither well trained intellects nor sound moral character. They are asked at the close of each day if they have whispered, on the supposition that it develops honor to trust to their replies. Probably one child out of fifty tells the truth. "One scholar in one of the largest schools said to me, 'I have told a lie every day of the year.'" Probably the effect of this sort of discipline is to render a child ultimately indifferent to the truth. The problem of the wise education grows constantly greater. The solution must be in a larger and more aggressive home life.—Globe-Democrat.

FOR PRESIDENT,

BENJAMIN HARRISON

OF INDIANA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

LEVI P. MORTON

OF NEW YORK.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultual, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manfacutres are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

"American wages for American workmen."—Republican motto.

A Noted Law Suit Decided.

Chief Justice Ritchie of the Dominion court on June 27th rendered a decision in the case of the government against J. C. Ayer & Co. of Lowell, Mass., involving nearly $400,000. The justice dismisses the action with costs, and orders the restoration of the goods seized. He finds that the company have always acted openly and above board, and allows every claim made by them as to the proper construction of the Domision tariff rules. The company will claim heavy damages from the government for the three years interruption to their Canadian business.

Nobody Wanted the Job.

The democratic national committee had a good deal of trouble in selecting a chairman, or rather, finding a man who would take the place after being selected. They first fixed upon Senator Gorman of Maryland, but he refused. Next, W. L. Scott of Pennsylvania was settled upon, but he declined also. The committee then wanted Colonel Boyce of Ohio to accept the honor, but he was unwilling. They then drifted back to Ex-Senator Barnum, who had stated when the committee first met that he did not want to serve again. He was argued with, and finally prevailed upon to accept a re-election. Thus the committee practically came out where they went in.

Honor to a Statesman.

Arrangements have been making very quietly for some time by the Republican clubs throughout the country to send delegates to meet James G. Blaine on his arrival at New York from Europe in the middle of July, and it is expected that he will meet with such a reception as no other American experienced on his return to his native country. A fleet of steamers will go down the bay to meet him and escort him to land.

Why Men Drink.

That wonderful humorist, Tom Hood, once remarked "There are five reasons why men drink! Good wine; a friend; because they are dry; or at least they may be bye and bye; or any other reason why." The last is perhaps the most common reason. James Parton once headed an article "will the coming man drink?" but as he failed to answer the query we will express a decided opinion: that, until the coming man learns to prize home, social family ties above all others, will he learn not to abuse his own organism. In March last a writer in the "Medical age" made some practical remarks upon this subject, and offered a timely hint which prohibition advocates would do well to note.

He says: "As long as the imperfections of humanity remain unfitted to its surroundings and conditions, so long evil and misery will continue, and men seek refuge in strong drink. Increase the sum of human happiness by whatever means possible, lessen the burdens and ameliorate the woes of mankind, remove hunger, disease and pain by a better physical and moral education, and you will have plucked out the fangs of that dire monster"—intemperance.

Among the worst morbid conditions resulting from the use of alcoholic liquors, as well as from improper food and customs of eating, are inflammation of the stomach, liver, kidneys and brain.

It matters not in what part of the body inflammation exists, or how severe it may be, whether it takes the form of gastric inflammation, in despepsia, or as in bronchitis, catarrh, hay-fever, pneumonia, rheumatism, or as in common cuts and bruises, Johnson's Anodyne Liniment will conquer it, relieve the pain and prove to you that it is indeed an anodyne of mighty power, and unlike all others, as it is for internal as well as external use.

A good Baptist deacon told us not long since that "he had known Johnson's Liniment for sixty years, and had used it in his family for over forty years." I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass., will send any person an instructive pamphlet free, telling all about this valuable household remedy and how to use it economically. One teaspoonful properly used is worth a whole bottle used as some people use it.

A Grand Tour Through the Rocky Mountains.

Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb have planned a series of grand tours through Colorado for the summer and early autumn, that cannot fail to be immensely popular. It is the most comprehensive trip through the Rocky Mountains ever yet arranged, and brings a score or more famous places under inspection. The journey is to be made in a leisurely manner, with restful halts at hotels every night, the travelling through the mountain region being done wholly by daylight. Thus, nothing is to be omitted in the way of sight seeing. Details of the excursions, one of which is to take place in July and another in September, may be gleaned from a descriptive circular just issued. "Independent Trips" to Colorado may be made in connection with these tours or in August and October. There are also to be a series of Yellowstone National Park excursions, and "Seventeen July Trips" to points of interest in the East. Address, W. Raymond, 296 Washington street, opposite School street, Boston, for circulars.

Fat and Thin People

And Everybody Else Will Want the Next Sunday Globe—"How to Get Thin or Plump," "How to Swim," and a Complete Sylvanus Cobb Story for Next Sunday—Wants for the Million.

Boston, June 28.—Another large increase in the circulation of the Boston Sunday Globe was recorded last Sunday, and the dealers all sold out early.

Another great programme for next Sunday: It includes medical advice as to how thin people can get fat, and how fat people can get thinner. The next Sunday Globe will also tell you how to learn to swim, dive, float, smoke a cigar under water, etc., etc., written by Lundstrom, the champion swimmer of America.

The next Sunday Globe will also have a complete novel by Sylvanus Cobb, Jr., entitled "The Scarred Cheek; or, The Fortunes of a Guitar Teacher," a thrilling and instructive romance. There will be other popular features.

Don't forget to order the Sunday Globe of your dealer, and always remember, when you want to buy or sell anything, that the Globe prints 5000 wants every week, and is the great "want" medium of New England.

MATRIMONIAL.

Rev. W. H. Alden, D. D., on June 27th spoke the words which united for life Miss Grace Welch and Mr. Clarence S. Chick of Kittery, and Miss Julia A. Lane and Mr. Henry H. Young of this city.

In Cambridge, Mass., on the afternoon of June 27th, Miss Mary H. Hanks, daughter of Rev. S. W. Hanks, was married at the home of her parents to John B. Kempton. Following the marriage ceremony, the infant children of two other families of Cambridge, named respectively Adams and Mrs. Hitchcock of New York, were christened. In the evening, at Shepard Memorial church, a brilliant wedding took place, Miss Sarah J. Hanks, also a daughter of Rev. S. W. Hanks, being married to William M. Richardson. At the church wedding the maid of honor was Miss Frances A. Lord of Kennebunk, Me., who with the bride recently graduated from the Harvard Annex.

MARITIME NOTES

The British schooner J. P. Ames, formerly owned at this port, arrived here on June 23th from Moncton, N. B., with ties to one of the railroads. The Leolia, Capt. Amee, arrived the same day from Bangor with a load of lumber for Dover; and the Triton and Chilion arrived from Boston, and proceeded up river to load with bricks. Three schooners with coal and one with cement, also arrived on the 28th.

The regatta of the Eastern yacht club was sailed off Marblehead on June 28th, in a fine breeze. There were entries in five classes, but the principal interest was centered on the sloops Volunteer and Puritan and cutter Stranger. The Volunteer beat the Puritan about half an hour, and the Stranger was nowhere.

Pitcher Willis, of the Portsmouth base ball team, had a narrow escape from drowning at Manchester on the 24th inst. In company with Daly and Leighton of the team he went in swimming in the river, and while he was re-crossing the stream was seized with a cramp in his shoulder and was powerless to aid himself. Daly and Leighton went to his rescue, and assisted him ashore. He was black in the face, and unconscious, when they got him ashore, and would undoubtedly have been drowned but for their help. He revived during the night, and was able to go to Nashua with the club next day.

It is reported as "from a reliable source" that the managers of the Concord railroad are making arrangements for a meeting with the managers of the Boston, Concord & Montreal and Northern railroads, intended to lead to a new "deal" in railroad matters in the central part of the state. It is said the Concord desires to lease the Northern for a long term of years, and will put the road in first class condition and pay the stockholders a dividend much larger than they are now receiving. The lease of the Northern to the Boston & Lowell road may be terminated at any time by proper notice.

"Puis," a collection of newspaper squibs and bits of American humor, edited by Alex. J. Brown, is for sale by Goodrich and Moses Bros., price ten cents. It will serve capitally to while away an idle hour in the cars or at the seashore.

Dr. Mackenzie's statement that he concealed his knowledge of the cancerous nature of the late German emperor's malady in order to prevent a regency is sharply criticised by the North German Gazette, which says that Mackenzie's course was presumptuous, and calls for an explanation.

Joseph Seaford, the hall boy in a fashionable New York boarding house, shot and killed Rosie Sheridan, the assistant cook, and then fired a bullet into his own brain, inflicting a fatal wound. The murderer had conceived a violent passion for the girl, which the girl repelled.

At Huntington, L. I., Frankie Williams the six-year-old son of James Williams, was found murdered, and H. Soper, a man employed on a farm, has been arrested and confessed that he killed the boy.

It is reported that coal has been discovered in Essex county, Mass., on the farm of Jacob Parker, about a mile east of Middleton village on the Andover turnpike.

More than 1500 lives were lost in the state of Leon, Mexico, by the recent floods. Over 1000 bodies have been recovered, and hundreds are floating about.

The woolen and shoddy mill of William Carpenter at Conway Junction, South Berwick, and Mr. Carpenter's house near by, were burned on the evening of June 27th. The furniture was saved, as also was the barn. The mill was only started running the day before, after lying idle all winter.

The First Symptoms

Of all Lung diseases are much the same: feverishness, loss of appetite, sore throat, pains in the chest and back, headache, etc. In a few days you may be well, or, on the other hand, you may be down with Pneumonia or "galloping Consumption." Run no risks, but begin immediately to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Several years ago, James Birchard, of Darien, Conn., was severely ill. The doctors said he was in Consumption, and that they could do nothing for him, but advised him, as a last resort, to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking this medicine, two or three months, he was pronounced a well man. His health remains good to the present day.

J. S. Bradley, Malden, Mass., writes: "Three winters ago I took a severe cold, which rapidly developed into Bronchitis and Consumption. I was so weak that I could not sit up, was much emaciated, and coughed incessantly. I consulted several doctors, but they were powerless, and all agreed that I was in Consumption. At last, a friend brought me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. From the first dose, I found relief. Two bottles cured me, and my health has since been perfect."

CONSOMME AND CUSTARD.

A Caterer's Chat Concerning His Customers—The Dishes Called For.

"The ordinary woman must have a digestive apparatus similar to that supposed to be enjoyed by the ostrich," was the suggestive comment made the other day by the proprietor of a fashionable restaurant in the shopping district up town.

He was checking off the day's orders as he spoke, and a reporter hearing the remark naturally followed it up.

"Why?" repeated the caterer. "Well, I'll just show you. All orders here are written, you know; consequently the ladies have put their testimony in black and white. Here are some of their lunches: 'Bouillon and pistache ice cream.' Fancy a man putting that combination in his stomach to nourish him for a day's tramp. Here's another: 'Strawberry short cake and a cup of chocolate;' that was the first course, followed by 'cream meringue and a lemon ice.' I'd like to bet that woman will be visited by both her ancestral grandmothers to-night."

"Here's an order in swell English handwriting for a goblet of iced milk and an extra porterhouse steak. Nothing else. Enough to kill her? I should say so. This extraordinary female relished a chicken salad and a cup of tea; this one reveled in fried Little Necks and pineapple ice cream, and a third went from shad roe to charlotte russe without stopping at any intermediate stations."

"What's the trouble with the ladies?" asked the reporter; "ignorance or economy?"

"Both," was the emphatic reply. "They come in here and puzzle over the carte for fifteen minutes and then order consomme and frozen custard. Dessert every woman must have, and the consomme, or chop, or bit of fish is a delicate attempt to lead up to the sweets. They have no conception of seasonable food either. They ask for mince pie in June, and iced tea in December. In August, when I have exhausted every resource at hand to reduce the temperature of the place, they rush in flushed and gasping, and call for a fan and a cup of hot chocolate.

"Very few men eat here during the day, but when one does accompany a lady the order shows at once his presence. I can tell, too, nine times out of ten, if the man is a husband or only the fiance. If the latter, the young woman orders in a lavish, generous way that is most agreeable to my professional taste; but when mademoiselle becomes madame she contents herself with a very modest luncheon. That is the time the husband is reckless, and spring lamb, early strawberries, and other expensive delicacies just about fill the bill for him.

"As a rule, however, my patrons during the day are ladies. I had to get used to them. It took me some time, but I've learned the ropes, and I let them run the thing pretty much as they want to now. From before 12 to 3 o'clock every day my place is filled with women, and, by George! they have a good time if I don't.

"They sit forty minutes sometimes over a twenty-five cent order. They meet people whom they know and block the aisles and delay the waiters while they interchange small talk and gossip. They stop on the way out to ask me where I buy my bread (which is my specialty, you know) or if the cook would be willing 'for compensation, of course,' to disclose the receipt of a delicious souffle they have just eaten.

"I blandly reply that every loaf of bread is made upon the premises, and that my cook, who is a chef, creates those souffles without other receipt than his own high art. 'No ordinary cook, madame,' I will conclude sympathetically, 'could produce the same results from the same ingredients.'"

"Which is a lie, of course," put in the reporter.

"Partially, only partially," said the restaurateur with a deprecating gesture; "you know I could not give away my kitchen secrets, and, besides, that woman will come again and again to eat that souffle and tell her friends about it and get them to come, all because of the little mystery I throw about it. Curious lot, these women," finished the caterer, generalizing, broadly.

"Rather a paying lot, too," suggested the reporter, glancing at the prosperous aspect of the place.

The proprietor laughed as he leaned over the desk.

"I have just leased the place for another ten years," he said.—New York Times.

An Englishman's Tour of the World.

"Among the most singular of characters that I have ever met," said a young gentleman who had traveled considerably, "was a young Englishman whom I ran across in San Diego. I was with a friend in that town, who was going down to Ensenada, Lower California, in his yacht. Peyton is the name of my friend, and he owns a huge rancho on that peninsula. Well, we were going down to the yacht when this man of whom I speak came up to Peyton and said: 'I am an Englishman, and I would like to ship with you as a common seaman.' His language and his address were those of a gentleman and we both stared at him. He continued, 'I am, as you can see, somewhat above the ranks of men who follow a seafaring calling. But the truth of my story is: I left London a few months ago, determined to go around the world on nothing. I have reached San Diego, and I intend to travel a good many years without taking a single five cent piece, but by working my way.'

"My friend took him. At Ensenada he left us. He refused money and started to walk across the peninsula with a small supply of bread. We afterward heard that he had successfully accomplished that terrible tramp. You know that country is the most horrible desert. There is probably not a habitation in the interior, and yet that man walked clear across the peninsula when brave hearts have quailed at the attempt when they were mounted."—San Francisco Post.

A Striking Contrast.

The number of persons employed in constructing, equipping, and operating our railways is about two millions.

The combined armies and navies of the world, while on peace footing, will draw from gainful occupations 3,455,000 men.

Those create wealth—these destroy it.—Thomas Curtis Clarke in Scribner's.

German Composition Paint.

For painting walls or other objects exposed to damp, a composition is said to be much used in Germany for very fine iron filings and linseed oil varnish; and when the object to be painted is to undergo frequent changes of temperature, linseed oil and amber varnish are added to the first two coats. This paint may be applied to wood, stone or iron; in the case of the latter it is not necessary to free it first from rust or oily matters.—Boston Budget.

Petition of J. H. Morrison for brick sidewalk on State street was granted.

Committee on petition of Steamer Co. No. 4 for the removal of their engine to its former location on Court street, recommended that the request be granted as soon as a suitable location can be had for the Hook & Ladder Co.

Invitation to participate in the exercises of the 4th of July was accepted.

John J. Laskey was appointed collector of taxes for 1888, Samuel P. Treadwell having declined to serve.

Bids for the deposits of the city for the year ending June 30th, 1889, were opened, and the city business was awarded to the New Hampshire national bank.

The mayor was empowered to make all necessary provision for securing the best possible order on the 4th of July.

Adjourned for two weeks.

In Common Council, concurrence was voted in the bill amending Chap. 24 of the compiled ordinances, concerning the malicious defacement, injury or destruction of city property.

Passed, a resolution appointing on behalf of the council the committee on city lands and buildings, to meet a similar committee on behalf of the aldermen, to take into consideration the location of the telegraph and telephone poles, and report some plan for removing as many of them as possible from the public streets. [The alderman concurred, and the mayor appointed the committee on city lands and buildings on behalf of the board.]

Adjourned.

RATIFICATION MEETING.

A ratification meeting was held on Thursday evening at the republican headquarters. President W. H. Moore of the Republican club presided, and Col. T. E. G. Marvin was chosen secretary. Col. Wm. H. Hackett was introduced and made a half-hour's address, and was followed by Marcellus Bufford, who gave interesting reminiscences of the Harrison campaign and the march of the company of 200 men, on foot, from this city to Concord, to attend a mass meeting in that city on the 17th of June, 1848. Capt. Wm. O. Sides, just from the Chicago convention, was the last speaker.

GREENLAND HIGH SCHOOL.

The graduation exercises of the class of '88, Greenland High school, took place in Greenland town hall on Wednesday evening, June 27th, and drew a large audience, some twenty persons of this city attending. Long before the exercises commenced the hall was packed with the relatives and friends of the pupils, and scores were compelled to stand all through the evening. The stage was handsomely decorated with flowers and bunting, and the Music hall orchestra furnished excellent music. The names of the graduates, and the parts assigned them, are as follows:

Grace A. Furber, salutatory; Josephine Bodge, essay; Mary F. Simpson, class history; Anna N. Lynch, essay; Abbie B. Brackett, address to the undergraduates; Ella E. Haines, recitation; Marcia W. Locke, class prophecies; Lillian A. Odell, recitation; Ruth Simpson, valedictory.

BASE BALL.

The Kittery club played the Ocean House club at York beach on June 23d, and won by a score of twelve to eleven.

Dovers and Portsmouths at the South street grounds (postponed game) this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

PERSONAL.

Capt. Wm. O. Sides arrived home on Thursday, June 28th, from Chicago, reports the enthusiasm everywhere for Harrison and Morton as being unbounded.

Mr. George D. Marcy, son of Hon. Daniel Marcy, resident in Kansas City, Mo., for a year or more, arrived at home on Thursday evening for a visit.

Mr. E. B. Rundlett and wife, of the Commonwealth hotel, Boston, who have been making a visit to Mr. Rundlett's father, Hon. G. H. Rundlett, on Court street, are now on an extended trip to Canada and the western states.

Col. Edwin R. Goodrich of New York paid us a brief call on Thursday. He is making Newcastle his headquarters for the summer.

Mr. Asa S. Parsons, president of the Monumental Bronze company of Bridgeport, Conn., has been in this city several days completing the duties attendant on the proper mounting of the fine monument which his company has furnished as Portsmouth's memorial to the soldiers and sailors of the secession war.

Colonel M. T. Donahue, Col. Wm. H. D. Cochrane, Capt. John S. Patterson and Lieut. Louis F. Hanson will attend the dedication exercises in this city on the 4th of July, as guests of Capt. J. Albert Sanborn.

Mr. Frank Hobbs of Kittery has resigned as night telegraphic operator at the Boston & Maine station in this city, and will take the course of instruction at Eastman's Commercial college, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

CIRCULAR—JULY 4TH.

Headquarters Chief Marshal Dedication Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument July 4th, 1888.

PORTSMOUTH, June 26th.

For the purpose of protecting from possible injury all citizens and visitors, to enable the Fire Department to respond quickly in case of an alarm, and to facilitate promptness in carrying out the programme, the Chief Marshal makes the following announcement:

The commite on route have decided to rope off certain streets as follows:

Vicinity of depots during formation of procession;

Vicinity of Goodwin Park during dedicatory services;

Vicinity of Marginal road during exhibition of fireworks.

From the enclosures thus formed vehicles of all kinds will be excluded during their occupancy by the procession and people. Carriages conveying invited guests, the press, or on errands of public or private necessity, only, may temporarily suspend this rule. Pedestrians can pass the lines at all times, as is the usual custom.

The purpose of the committee being one of public safety, the chief marshal will expect a cheerful compliance on the part of citizens and visitors with the above regulations.

Approved.

GEORGE E. HODGDON, Mayor.

HERBERT A. MARDEN,
Chief Engineer Fire Dept.

EVENING BAND CONCERTS.

By order of

ANDREW P. PRESTON,
Chief Marshal,

Capt. J. A. SANBORN, Chief of Staff.

Persons desiring to secure the services of the decorators for July 4th, can achieve their purpose by sending postal cards to Albert R. Junkins, who will hand them to the decorator, a gentleman who comes highly recommended.

Dr. Gage and Associate Physicians, and Their Great Work.

Probably no physician in New England is better and more favorably known, says a New Hampshire exchange, than is Dr. Gage, the gifted specialist, who has treated more than fifteen thousand patients in this state, the announcement of his visits each month being the signal for a grand rally of a multitude of invalids. His success is indeed phenomenal and the reports of marvellous cures would fill this entire paper, the like of which was never known in the history of medical practice. The following is a fair sample:

Mr. Editor: A few months ago my daughter was laying at the point of death. She had a complication of troubles, a terrible cough, raising an immense quantity, a discharging sore upon her hip which rendered her perfectly helpless. Our family physician gave us no hope, but with a mother's will and determination to save her perishing child if possible, I hastened to consult Dr. Gage. Although he did not see her he nevertheless understood the case and his remedies have wrought a miracle—almost—by restoring my child to perfect health. I thank God that I consulted Dr. Gage.

Mrs. B. F. WILSON,
Derry Depot, N. H.

Mrs. Orrin Webber, Bedford, N. H., a cripple and on crutches 14 years with terrible ulcers on her limbs, soundly cured.—Geo. H. Stevens, North Lyndeboro, N. H., cured of terrible burning and lacking humor which covered the entire body.—Mrs. Wm. E. Russ, North Hartland, Vt., given up by counsel, with a large ovarian tumor, heart disease and dropsy; perfectly cured and tumor disappeared. Doctor did not see her.—Oliver Peirce, Concord, N. H., wife cured of ovarian and female difficulties after she had been made worse by the usual treatment.—C. L. Buffum, Nortis Monroe, helpless with spinal disease, involving liver, kidneys and bladder; perfectly cured and the Doctor did not see him.—Isaac Sutslick, Londonderry, N. H., son cured of discharging ears and deafness.—Mrs. A. L. Colby, West Andover, N. H., given up in the last stage of consumption; is now well.—Mrs. J. A. Sawyer, Keene, N. H., terrible bleeding from lungs; cured.—Amos Young, Derry Depot, N. H., catarrh had eaten a hole through roof of mouth; cured.—Miss Lizzie Williams, 76 Blodgett st., Manchester, N. H., helpless cured.—Dr. Levi R. Dodge, Waterford, Vt., kidney disease with frightful hemorrhages; given up by counsel; cured, and the Doctor did not see him.—Thomas Tuke, Fort Hunt, Littleton, N. H., and hundreds of other cases, cured of nervous debility in its various stages.—Mrs. J. E. Fields, Milford, N. H., cured of a complication of female difficulties after she had doctored 9 years with others.—Son of W. B. Hill, Pittsfield, N. H., was a most terrible case of heart disease, dropsy and epileptic fits; got well, went to work and has not had a fit for two years.—G. Ambrose, We. Londonderry, N. H., cured of cancer.—C. C. Hall, Boscawen, N. H., cured of cancer.—C. B. Marshall, Nashua, N. H., son cured of epileptic fits.

Remember this is an unsolicited testimonial. Examination and advice free at the office, 702 Washington street, Boston, Mass., daily, except Sundays, from 9 to 4. Consultation by letter, $1. Enclose stamp for reply. Address as above.

NOT TO PARADE.

Editor of Chronicle:—A few weeks ago Canton Senter, P. M., I. O. O. F., voted to parade July 4th, by invitation of the Monument Committee, provided they could do so as a regiment, and in order to perfect this arrangement the various cantons comprising the regiment of the Patriarchs Militant of the Department of New Hampshire were invited, there being twelve cantons in the state. But one canton has accepted this invitation (Gen. Stark, No. 4, of Suncook.) The reason for so little interest in this parade, is that the 1st Reg't P. M. has been ordered to report at the Weirs for a two day's muster on or about the 1st of August, and also has been requested to assemble in Grand Centonment at Cincinnati, Ohio, about July 25th. In consequence of the various orders, the several cantons have decided it to be inexpedient to parade as heretofore arranged by Canton Senter. Therefore at a special meeting of Canton Senter held on Tuesday evening, June 26th, it was voted not to parade July 4th. And we trust this item will find space in the various papers of the state as well as those issued in our own city, that those interested in the welfare of the Patriarchs Militant may fully understand the situation.

CAAS. H. CLOUGH, Clerk,
Canton Senter, P. M., No. 12.

The graduation exercises of the Portsmouth High school take place this afternoon at Music hall. The class reception will be held in Franklin hall in the evening.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS. The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture in these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world. $22 TO $900.
Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogues free.
PIANOS Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos, that they are superior to all GRAND & UPRIGHT pianos, others. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN PIANO STRINGER," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.

GLYCEROLE!
A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

"A GREEN OLD AGE."

Few Men or Women Reach It, But Nearly All Might—The Remarkable Experience of an Octogenarian.

"There is only one thing I dread," said the late Charles Sumner, "and that is the coming on of old age."

Mr. Sumner was a brave man, and could face danger unflinchingly but to watch the hairs whiten, the lines of pain and care grow deep in the face, to feel the strength and activity going and death coming on, were more than he could bear. Alas! how many others feel the same today. Pains, loss of sleep, weakness, poor appetite, and feeblenes, all break the spirit. Have you never heard of Mr. Nathan Chase, of New Bedford, Mass.? Aged nearly four-score years old, and hale and hearty as in youth. And yet he was supposed to be dying of heart trouble less than two years ago. Here is what he says:

"A year ago or more I began to lose flesh and strength. I sent for my physician to know the cause. He examined me, and said it was my heart; that the old machinery was wearing out, and I must be careful. Still I grew worse. Finally I got so bad I could scarcely breathe; I could not lie in bed but had to sit up all night with possibly one hour's sleep out of twenty-four. And yet to-day, I am in fine condition; can go up three flights of stairs without inconvenience, and feel as well and about as young as ever in my life before. What accomplished this? Hunt's Remedy—nothing else. It has made a new man of me, and I bless God for it every day."

Such an experience should be a valuable lesson to all readers, both old and young. It shows that a long and happy life is possible. It shows that men or women need not despond. It shows that by care and the use of the right remedy health, happiness and long life may be secured by all.

BILIOUSNESS.

THIS very common complaint, which is caused by a dormant or inactive liver, can be cured in a short time by using Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, as can also the various diseases arising from inactive liver or kidneys. These organs, if inactive, will allow impure blood to enter the heart, causing tightness about that organ and palpitation.

She suffered thirty years.

MRS. DUDLEY CHANDLER, of Melrose, Mass., says: "I had suffered with Palpitation of the Heart more than thirty years before I found anything to give me essential relief. Last fall I tried Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, and, remarkable as it was, this Compound relieved me in two days, so that for several months afterwards I felt not the slightest touch of it, and am perfectly free from it now. Sometimes, before I took this Compound, the pulsations of my heart were so violent as to shake my whole body with rapid agitations, and at times I fainted and became entirely insensible. Now I am perfectly free from all this suffering. Consequently I can most sincerely and earnestly recommend this Compound to all like sufferers, as pre-eminently the best medicine I ever knew for Palpitation of the Heart."

This Compound is purely Vegetable, and strengthens and builds up the system while it eradicates disease.

Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles for $5. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

ADAMSON'S

BOTANIC COUGH BALSAM
More than twenty years ago Adamson's Botanic Balsam was introduced generally throughout New England as a remedy for Coughs, Colds and Pulmonary complaints. Since its introduction it has constantly won its way into public favor, until now it is the universal decision that ADAMSON'S BOTANIC BALSAM is the best remedy for curing Coughs, Colds and Asthma.

OUR GRAVES.

A mound, a stone and violets
A bird song in the air,
A child that gathers flowers and lets
The wind play with its hair;
A field of wheat across the hedge
Rippled by fairy hands,
A silver stream that downward runs
To cheer the lower lands.

No mound, no stone, no violets—
A blue sea overhead,
A sobbing wind that ne'er forgets
Its chanting for the dead;
Beneath the stars on summer nights
That deep, blue grave, how fair,
The while upon the shore the waves
Beat low, as if in prayer.

No mound, no stone, no violets,
No birds, no wave, no star,
A spot where memory forgets
What spring and summer are;
Deeper it lies than deep sea graves,
From land and sea apart,
A grave so sad and desolate!
A grave within the heart!
—Clarence T. Urmy.

Divorce Process in China.

A Chinese husband may divorce his wife for a number of causes—incompatibility, theft, drunkenness, disobedience, adultery or failure in duties toward husband or his parents. The process is very simple. The husband calls together his relatives and presents the case to them in the presence of his wife. The company vote on the question. If the ground for divorce is sufficient in their eyes the man and woman sign papers of separation by dipping their fingers in ink and making a mark at the foot of the agreement. If the divorced wife has parents or near relatives she goes and lives with them; if not, she is sold by the husband to a sort of matrimonial agent, who finds for her another husband or resells her to the keepers of low houses. A second or third wife is sometimes simply turned into the street by her husband without formal process of divorce.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Our Country Schoolhouses.

Are we a civilized people? Of course the answer depends upon the definition that is given to civilization. Judging by our country schoolhouses there is a chance for several degrees of advance before we reach high civilization. Garden and Forest has set out to reform our schoolhouse surrounding. In the west this reform is far less needed than in the east. But if there be anywhere hideous little toad like structures, set out in undrained spots of waste land, it is the old style schoolhouse. It ought in all cases to be placed in a snug little park, surrounded by abundant shade. A child's most important teachers are trees, flowers, brooks, hills and valleys and other objects in nature. These are the real character builders. If you wish the beautiful to grow in your children, surround them with beautiful sights and sounds.—Globe-Democrat.

Principle of Inoculation.

Professor E. Ray Lankester, lecturing on the "Struggle for Life" at the London institution, said that a considerable number of the most fatal diseases in man, oxen and sheep were due to poisonous matter produced in the blood which was known as bacteria. When this poison got into the system, the duty of the corpuscles was to go for it, and they proceeded to eat as much as they could; but sometimes they could not attack it at all. The bacteria was too much for them, with the result that the bacteria grew, and very soon proved fatal to the body in which it existed.

The corpuscles could, however, be educated to deal with the bacteria, and the future of preventive medicines would be the education of the white blood corpuscles. The fact that one man, by constant use, could without injury take a dose of arsenic that would kill six ordinary men was due to the fact that he had by weakened doses been educating and training the white corpuscles. They could be taught to eat and flourish under conditions which, if not commenced gradually, would be destructive to them, and that was the principle at the base of protective inoculation. As a preventive of many fatal disease in sheep and oxen, inoculation had been remarkably successful. The corpuscles first received a weakened breed or disease by inoculation, and thus when a violent attack came they were ready to receive and dispose of it. This education of the corpuscles, it seemed to him, was the explanation of the success of vaccination. They received a weak dose of the poison from the vaccine, and were in that way prepared for a stronger dose in the way of smallpox. He believed the white corpuscles could be trained to receive the most virulent poisons, and he hoped this training would be carried on so as to deal with a great number of diseases.—New York Post.

Steeds Renowned in History.

Beside the mythical horses there were real steeds that are renowned in history. Alexander's charger, Bucephalus, is known to every school boy. He received after death the honor of a mausoleum, and the city of Bucephala was named after him. Celer, the horse of the Emperor Verus, was also honored with a mausoleum in the Vatican after his death, and while living was fed upon almonds and raisins, clothed with royal purple, and stabled in the palace. The horse of Caligula, Incitatus, was still more highly honored while living. He was made priest and counselor, ate from an ivory manger, and drank wine from a golden pail.—F. S. Bassett in Globe-Democrat.

Diamonds from the Sky.

Meteoric stones that sometimes fall to the earth are the objects of special study and thorough examination by scientific men. They are all similar in their combination of material or substance. But occasionally new facts are developed. In one stone were found organic remains showing the former existence of animal life. In another that fell in Siberia Sept. 4, 1886, weighing about four pounds, were found small diamonds. A small fragment of the stone was sent to Mr. George F. Kunz, who is with Tiffany & Co., New York. He found minute diamonds that were real stones, because they would scratch sapphires, diamonds being the only substance that can produce a scratch on the polished surface of a sapphire.—New York Star.

Largest Wooden Ships.

The largest wooden ships in the world are the Komandor Svend Foyne, the latter of 2,459 tons, having been built at Maitland, N. S., in 1874, and called the William D. Lawrence (the name of her builder), and the A. G. Ropes, of 2,343 tons, which was built at Bath, Me., in 1884. There are comparatively few other vessels of above 2,000 tons even.—Detroit Free Press.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, dear, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? O, dear! what shall I do? —and he so loves to study, too What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

Miss Mary M. Wardwell, daughter of Judge Wardwell, of Buffalo, N. Y., is one of the young women who took fellowships at Cornell this year. For thirty years I have been troubled with catarrh—have tried a number of remedies without relief. A druggist here recommended Ely's Cream Balm. I have used only one bottle and I can say that I feel like a new man. My catarrh was chronic and very bad. I make this voluntary statement that others may know of the Balm.—J. W. It Won't Bake Bread.—In other words, Hood's Sarsaparilla will not do impossibilities. Its proprietors tell plainly what it has done, submit proofs from sources of unquestioned reliability, and ask you frankly if you are suffering from any disease or affection caused or promoted by impure blood or low state of the system, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. The experience of others is sufficient assurance that you will not be disappointed in the result.

Chairman Barnum of the democratic national committee has been re-elected, as nobody else would take the job. The choice of secretary, in place of Hon. F. O. Prince, was left to a sub-committe.

W. H. Pattee, salesman for Esterbrook & Eaton, Washington St. Boston, writes: "It gives me real pleasure to say that Adamson's Botanic Balsam cured me of a severe cold, to which I have been subject, especially during the winter months, and I have in many instances recommended it to my friends, and they have all been benefitted by its use. I think it has no equal as a cough mixture."

A Druggist Says.

Marvin C Brown, Druggist, Meredith village, N. H., says: I have sold your Sulpher Bitters for years, and, contrary to most medicines, I never sold a bottle to any one who said it did not help them. They cured me of those terrible sick headaches when every other remedy failed.

Avoid the use of calomel for billious complaints. Ayer's Cathartic Pills, entirely vegetable, have been tested forty years, and are acknowledged to be the best remedy for torpidity of the liver, costiveness, and indigestion.

PROSPEROUS. North Dakota never had better crops than those just harvested. Many opportunities to secure fine Government lands recently surveyed, near excellent coal fields and adjacent to railroad. Maps and full particulars, free, upon application to C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

STOCK IN MINNESOTA.—From an exclusive grain country, Minnesota is being rapidly transformed into the finest stock and dairy state in the Union. Cheap lands still obtainable, convenient to railroad. Particulars free upon application to C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

A LEGEND.

A lovely woman in an eastern land
Once swayed a kingdom with her slender hand;
Her burdens heavy grew and weighed her down,
Upon her brow there pressed a jeweled crown

Too cumbersome for its tender resting place,
The golden weight adorned a weary face;
She cried: "I have grown tired of my power,
It seemeth more unbearable each hour.

"Let some one come that I may crown him king,
Within his hand he must a guerdon bring
That shall by far my boundless wealth exceed.
So, having it, I'll feel no other need."

Her wish was known, and lo! from far and near
There thronged around her poet, prince and peer,
With offerings of dazzling beauty wrought
In wondrous shapes and with deep meanings fraught.

They laid their gifts down humbly at her feet.
She sighed: "Alas! I find them incomplete.
Within these sparkling stones no solace lies;
I dream of wealth revealed in human eyes."

Morn after morn a suppliant went away
Until there came unto her throne one day
A man with empty hands, yet noble face
And form of matchless mold and peerless grace.

The queen looked up and asked: "Whas gift has thou
To tender for the crown upon my brow?"
He gazed within her eyes and naught replied.
She crowned him, saying: "I am satisfied."

No Fun in That.

"Now, Robbie," said his sister, as she put on his best knickerbockers, and cleaned the sand from his finger nails, "you must be a nice boy when Mr. Newsman comes, and perhaps he will have our names printed in the paper when we go to Waybackville,"

"Huh!" remarked Robbie scornfully. "What's the fun in that? I'd rather he'd have my name printed on a new wheelbarrow."—Detroit Free Press.

How to Preserve Ice.

Ice can be so secured that it will not lose 25 per cent. of its weight in six days, even in a room the temperature of which is 80 degs. This can be done by placing the piece of ice in a bag, and then in a box containing enough barley chaff to surround it with a layer five or six inches thick.—Globe-Democrat.

At His Post Day and Night.

The vigilant imp, indigestion, goads us with his many-lashed scourge. Each lash is a diabolic symptom. No comfort in eating, misery afterwards, little or broken rest at night, visitations of the nightmare during fitful intervals of sleep, an uprising unrefreshed and without appetite, sleepiness and yawning during the day, nervousness and irritability of temper, even monomania in extreme cases. Hard to bear, all this. Necessary? No! a thousand times no, so long as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the nation's specific for indigestion, acute or chronic, is procurable. The commencement of a course of this medicine is the commencement of a cure. Prompt relief first, absolute eradication subsequently. The truth of this statement, backed up by irrefragable testimony, is well known to the American people. So are others, viz.: that the Bitters averts and cures fever and ague and billious remittent, and removes nervousness, billiousness, constipation, and kidney and bladder troubles.

Unable to Tell.

Yes, that was so. For years I suffered with scrofula; sores broke all over my body, and I am unable to tell one half that I suffered. I was not able to obtain relief until I used Sulpher Bitters, which completely cured me.—C. B. Dale, 17 Allston street, Boston.

Get rid of that tired feelling as quick as possible. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives strength, a good appetite, and health.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 50c. and $1. Trial size free. At all Druggists.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS — Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue numors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases the tumors. All druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia. oj6eo

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. ANCIENT LAKE BONNEVILLE.

Great Salt Lake the Largest survivor of an Ancient Inland Sea.

The largest of the ancient lakes at present known is Lake Bonneville, the second in size has been named Lake Lahontan. Lake Bonneville was situated on the east border of the Great Basin, principally in Utah, and extended from a few miles north of the Utah-Idaho boundary 350 miles southward. It flooded all the valley of Great Salt lake, together with the Sevier and Escalante deserts in southern Utah. It was 125 miles broad and 1,000 feet deep, where Great Salt lake is now situated. The site of the temple at Salt Lake City was then submerged 850 feet.

Lake Bonneville overflowed northward and became tributary to Snake river, which flows into the Columbia. At various stages its waves and currents formed terraces and gravel bars on the mountain slopes which confined it. These still remain as fresh and perfect as when they were formed, and are in part the records from which the geologist has been able to determine the history of the ancient lake. We know that it rose with many fluctuations until it had a depth of about 900 feet, but did not overflow. Then a change of climate caused it to contract its borders, and possibly to become completely desiccated. In the lower stages of this desiccation it was broken into separate water bodies, which must have been more or less saline.

Another great climatic change caused the basin to be refilled to a higher level than before and to overflow. The water found an outlet at the north end of Cache valley, Idaho, and, as we have said, became tributary to the Columbia. The lake continued to overflow until the waters had cut down their outlet 370 feet. During this period, unless there were some peculiar conditions near the point of discharge, the lake must have been fresh. The discharge of the lake was finally stopped by a climatic change which lowered its surface below the bottom of the outlet, and again the basin became partly if not wholly desiccated. This second low water period has continued to the present day, and Great Salt and Sevier lakes are the representatives of ancient Bonneville.

The largest of these representatives of the ancient sea is Great Salt lake. In 1850 it covered 1,750 and in 1869 2,166 square miles. Its maximum depth is about fifty feet and its mean depth approximately fifteen feet. These recent changes in area are due to small variations in climate, similar in character to the changes which produced the great expansions and contractions of the lake in ancient times. With change in volume there is change in density; that is, the strength of the brine increases with decreased area, and decreases when the lake expands. In 1850 its waters contained about twenty-two parts, by weight, of saline matter in solution to 100 parts of water. In 1869 the saline matter had decreased to a little less than 15 and in 1873 to a little more than 14 per cent. This change in salinity was accompanied by increased area.

The waters of the ocean contain 3-10 per cent. of total salts in solution. Great Salt lake, therefore, in 1850, was six times as saline as the ocean. Like the ocean, too, it holds many substances in solution; the principal ones are common salt, or sodium chloride, and sodium sulphate; besides these there are small percentages of potassium, magnesium, etc.

The influence of temperature on the solubility of certain saline substances is well illustrated by this dead sea of Utah. In summer its waters are clear and transparent, but as cold weather comes on it becomes milky or opalescent, owing to the precipitation of sodium sulphate in an extremely fine condition. In the depth of winter, when the temperature of the atmosphere above the lake falls far below freezing, an immense quantity of sodium sulphate is precipitated and is thrown ashore by the waves until thousands of tons accumulate on the beach. When the temperature rises, the salt thus precipitated is again dissolved. This natural process of fractional crystallization produced by a lowering of temperature, is instructive, and should suggest to those who are attempting to manufacture salt in Utah a practical method of treating the natural brines in order to obtain common salt free from sodium sulphate. Lake Sevier is also highly saline, and during the arid season sometimes evaporates to dryness. —Israel C. Russell in Overland Monthly.

Senator Stanford's $100,000 Tomb.

The architect who planned the magnificent mausoleum of Senator Stanford at San Francisco says that it will be the most elaborate repository for the dead ever built in this country. In style of architecture the simple but effective methods of the ancient Egyptians will be followed. Massive imperishable granite, of a light shade of gray, with an interior lining of the finest Italian marble, will be employed. The item of expense has not been considered, the designers being given carte blanche as to cost and directed to secure the best of material and workmanship to be had.

The total outlay necessary to complete the tomb and prepare the surroundings will reach $100,000, and may considerably exceed that amount. The item of transportation alone will be a large one, as the granite will all be shipped from Vermont and the marble from Italy. The site selected is a beautiful four acre plot in the senator's grounds, just outside of San Francisco. It already contains handsome shrubbery, and occupies an altitude commanding a magnificent view of the bay. A driveway sixty feet wide will be made, circling around a slight elevation, on the brow of which will be the tomb. The art of the landscape gardener will be employed to beautify the approaches and render even more effective the vistas of the park.—New York Mail and Express.

WOMAN'S FIRST APPEARANCE.

"Mother Eve" a Fruitful Subject for Legend Mongers—Various Myths.

Woman's first appearance has been a fruitful subject for the legend mongers of all ages and places. According to S. Baring Gould, there was an extraordinary mystic named Antoinette Bourignon, who held that Adam's stomach contained a clear fluid, like water in a crystal bowl, in which tiny eggs developed themselves like bubbles in wine, and when he strongly desired companions he deposited some of these eggs, which hatched out Eve. The Phœnician myth of creation is found in the story of Pygmalion and Galatea. There the first woman was carved by the first man out of ivory, and then endowed with life by Aphrodite.

The Greek theory of the creation of woman, according to Hesiod, was that Zeno, as a cruel jest, ordered Vulcan to make woman out of clay, and then induced the various gods and goddesses to invest the clay doll with all their worst qualities, the result being a lovely thing, with a witchery of mien, refined craft, eager passion, love of dress, treacherous manners and shameless mind. The old Scandinavians, on the other hand, made their common mother out of nobler stock than man. Their mythology says that as Odin, Vili and Ve, the three sons of Bor, were walking along the sea beach they found two sticks of wood, one of ash and one of elm. Sitting down, the gods shaped man and woman out of these sticks, whittling the woman out of the elm and calling her Emla. Closely allied to this is the Ionian myth, which makes the first pair, Meschia and Meschiane, out of the beldas tree.

One of the strangest stories touching the origin of woman is that told by the Madagascarenes. In so far as the creation of man goes the legend is not unlike that related by Moses, only that fall came before Eve arrived. After the man had eaten of the forbidden fruit he became affected with a boil on the leg, out of which, when it burst, came a beautiful girl. The man's first thought was to throw her to the pigs, but he was commanded by a messenger from heaven to let her play among the diggings until she was of marriageable age; then to make her his wife. He did so, called her Bahoura, and she became the mother of all races of men. The American Indians' myths relative to Adam and Eve are numerous and entertaining. Some traditions trace back our first parents to white and red Maoze, another is that man, searching for a wife, was given the daughter of the king of the muskrats, who, on being dipped into a neighboring lake, became a woman. Poor first mother! For untold centuries she has been twitted for her primal share in the world's cares and punishments. No matter whether a painted Kickapoo or a classic Greek, a bare breecked Madagascarene or long robed rabbi, man looks malevolently backward at his Eve and growls at her as the origin of his woes. But whether the product of a pimple or of a divinely vivified rib, the paradox remains that she who is the truest daughter of Eve has never a lack of admiring slaves.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Where Will Nihilism End?

The question that is always uppermost in the minds of whoever studies the political conditions in Russia is, "Where will the revolutionary movement end?" I asked it of every man I talked with. The answers were various. But most of them seemed to think that Russia would follow in the footsteps of France. Their theory was that sooner or later the great empire would become involved in a disastrous foreign war, with Germany, or Austria, or England, or all three, perhaps, for Russia's only allies in Europe today are France and little Denmark. That the invasion of the country and the destruction of the army would give the liberal element a chance to rise, and that it would be assisted and protected by foreign powers, for the existence of this mighty, aggressive despotism is not only a menace to the rest of Europe, but an impassable barrier to civilization. That Poland would be ultimately restored to independence under the protection of Germany and Austria, and Germanized, and that a liberal government, or at most a limited monarchy, would succeed the despotism at Petersburg. Some think a republic will rise upon the ruins of the empire; that a revolution, with a commune, will follow the defeat of the czar's armies; that the palaces will be stripped of their riches as they were in France, and a reign of anarchy will be succeeded by a democratic government of the people.—William Eleroy Curtis.

How a Zulu Begins Life.

When a Zulu child is first born it is of a light hue and does not get the darker tint of the parents for some years. As soon as it enters the world the "medicine man" is sent for, and contrary to the custom of the civilized "medical man," he takes no notice whatever of the mother, but, devoting himself entirely to the child, makes a number of small gashes in various parts of the poor infant's body, into which he rubs medicine and goes on his way rejoicing, returning next day to make the incisions deeper and rub more medicine into them. This second operation being performed, the child is washed and dried by being moved around in the smoke of a wood fire, eventually being daubed all over with a red paint, which is renewed as fast as it wears off for a period of several months. The child is not allowed any natural food until the visits of the "medicine man" are ended (this formality often causing serious consequences to the offspring), and a few days afterward the mother will be seen about her work as usual, with the little one strapped to her. —Wilf. P. Pond in Drake's Magazine.

The Journalist's Profession.

A famous editor said: "I was first a college graduate, then a reporter, and then an editor; but I ought to have been able to stop after I had been two years in the office and gone back to study international law, history and languages; it would have been worth a large capital to me. A man does not find out what he needs to know until he has been at actual work in journalism for a year or two." Probably no profession at the present time requires a greater combination of native tact, with intense application and wide culture.—M. Maurice, M. D., in Globe-Democrat.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultual, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

Where Were The Senators, and What Were They About ?

It seems that the confirmation of Thomas J. Smith of Dover as solicitor of the bureau of internal revenue, to which place he had been appointed to succeed Chas. Chesley, removed, to whom the president once sent an autograph letter requesting him to remain in office, has been confirmed, and it is alleged, without knowledge of Senator Blair. We have no faith in the rumor now prevalent that Mr. Jones made a trade with the other senator in this Smith affair. At the same time, if Mr. Smith is not the able lawyer and profound jurist which Mr. Cleveland thinks he is, and there was the need of a man well informed as to the designs of the whiskey ring to succeed Mr. Chesley, who has shown a wonderful fitness for the place—a position to properly fill which will put T. Jefferson Smith to his trumps—it will be in order for Mr. Blaine to inform the republican senate that the president has not consented to this confirmation and made no opposition to the vote. If not, why not?

Why Men Drink.

That wonderful humorist, Tom Hood, once remarked "There are five reasons why men drink! Good wine; a friend; because they are dry; or at least they may be bye and bye; or any other reason why." The last is perhaps the most common reason. James Parton once headed an article "will the coming man drink?" but as he failed to answer the query we will express a decided opinion: that, until the coming man learns to prize home, social family ties above all others, will he learn not to abuse his own organism. In March last a writer in the "Medical age" made some practical remarks upon this subject, and offered a timely hint which prohibition advocates would do well to note.

He says: "As long as the imperfections of humanity remain unfitted to its surroundings and conditions, so long evil and misery will continue, and men seek refuge in strong drink. Increase the sum of human happiness by whatever means possible, lessen the burdens and ameliorate the woes of mankind, remove hunger, disease and pain by a better physical and moral education, and you will have plucked out the fangs of that dire monster"—intemperance.

Among the worst morbid conditions resulting from the use of alcoholic liquors, as well as from improper food and customs of eating, are inflammation of the stomach, liver, kidneys and brain.

It matters not in what part of the body inflammation exists, or how severe it may be, whether it takes the form of gastric inflammation, in despepsia, or as in bronchitis, catarrh, hay-fever, pneumonia, rheumatism, or as in common cuts and bruises, Johnson's Anodyne Liniment will conquer it, relieve the pain and prove to you that it is indeed an anodyne of mighty power, and unlike all others, as it is for internal as well as external use.

A good Baptist deacon told us not long since that "he had known Johnson's Liniment for sixty years, and had used it in his family for over forty years." I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass., will send any person an instructive pamphlet free, telling all about this valuable household remedy and how to use it economically. One teaspoonful properly used is worth a whole bottle used as some people use it.

THE HORSE RAILROAD.

To the Honorable Board of Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Portsmouth;

The undersigned, in behalf of the Portsmouth Horse Railroad Company, a corporation duly established by the laws of the State of New Hampshire, respectfully represent that it is necessary for the public accommodation that branches and side tracks of said railroad should be extended throughout the following named streets and highways in said city, viz: Bridge, Water street from its junction with Pleasant street to Newcastle avenue, through Newcastle avenue to the toll bridge of the Proprietors of Newcastle bridge, Islington road from Frenchman's lane at the Creek to the junction of Middle and Islington roads at the Plains, through Middle road from the terminus of the said horse railroad on Middle street to the junction of said road with Islington road at the Plains.

And they further pray you if said track be located in each of the streets and highways hereinbefore mentioned to determine the distance at which said road or tracks may be laid from the sidewalks and footpaths in such streets and highways.

Portsmouth, N. H., June 26th, 1888.

GEO. B. FRENCH, WILLIAM CONN, W. O. SIDES } Directors of the Ports. H. R. Co.

A hearing upon the foregoing petition is hereby appointed at the rooms of the board of aldermen in the city building, in said city, Monday, the sixteenth day of July next at seven and three-quarters o'clock in the afternoon.

And it is ordered that notice of said petition and hearing is hereby given to all land-holders abutting on the streets and highways named in said petition, through which said Railroad is proposed to pass, by publication of the same in the Penny Post, Daily Evening Times and Portsmouth Chronicle, fifteen days before such hearing.

Given under our hands this 28th day of June, 1888.

RAILROAD ITEMS.

The Dover Democrat of June 28th says: "The vestibule train that passes through this city like a whirl wind twice a day makes very rapid time. It leaves Boston at 9:15 A. M., passes here at 10:59 and arrives at Portland at 12:15, making the trip of 115 miles in just three hours, making two stops, at Exeter and Old Orchard. The return trip is made usually in the same time, but one day this week it left Portland twenty-seven minutes late. It had made up seven of them when the train passed this city, twenty-of them when they arrived at South Lawrence, and ran into Boston on time, having made a remarkably quick run."

D. J. Donovan has been promoted from spare conductor on the Concord railroad to be a regular conductor, and F. R. Butterfield takes his place as spare conductor.

MARITIME NOTES

Capt. Cheney, of the gondola Edgar Weston, put in a new stump mast and yard at Water street on Thursday, and loaded with coal for the South Newmarket Manufacturing company from J. Albert Walker. Capt. Cheney sold the gondola Hard Chance last winter.

The schooner Spring Chicken, Capt. Sleaney, arrived on Thursday with 2200 lbs, of cod and haddock to Joseph H. Jameson.

The Richmond, Atlanta, Ossipee, Galena and Yantic of the North Atlantic squadron arrived in New York on Wednesday, June 27th. On the way from Hampton Roads, during target practice, John McIntyre, a pretty officer of the Ossipee, was terribly injured by the premature discharge of a gun, and died shortly after. The gunning pennant was won by the Richmond.

The small pleasure steam yacht Enid was run down near Newburg, N. Y., June 27th, by the steamer James W. Baldwin, and Miss Annie Miller and Mrs. Benjamin B. O'Dell, Jr., were drowned.

Mr. Charles E. Walker, the well known coal merchant of Water street, who has all his lifetime from boyhood been accustomed to active pursuits, is now engaged in the superintendance of the cutting of fifteen large pines on the land of Joseph O. Ham of Peverly Hill road. The logs are being sawed by Daniel Mason, to measure twelve inches square, and will be used in the repairs of Pier wharf.

The Wentworth, Newcastle, opens today for the season.

Mr. Henry R. Billings of Kittery Point, captain of the watch at the navy yard, has been notified that his resignation will be accepted if tendered previous to the 20th of July.

It Will Do.

The official canvas of the vote of Oregon in the recent congressional election resulted as follows: Hermann, republican, 32,820; Gearing, democrat, 25,412; Miller, prohibition, 1,974. Hermann's plurality, 7,470.

George H. Gibson of Boston was engaged to be married on the evening of June 27th to Miss Lillian Chandler of Chelsea, at the home of her uncle, Col. Wm. Long, and a wedding party of 200 waited for him till near midnight, but he did not appear. Next day he was found in his room in Boston, with a bullet in his head. It is thought he will recover. No reason is given for his strange conduct.

The First Symptoms

Of all Lung diseases are much the same: feverishness, loss of appetite, sore throat, pains in the chest and back, headache, etc. In a few days you may be well, or, on the other hand, you may be down with Pneumonia or "galloping Consumption." Run no risks, but begin immediately to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Several years ago, James Birchard, of Darien, Conn., was severely ill. The doctors said he was in Consumption, and that they could do nothing for him, but advised him, as a last resort, to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking this medicine, two or three months, he was pronounced a well man. His health remains good to the present day.

J. S. Bradley, Malden, Mass., writes: "Three winters ago I took a severe cold, which rapidly developed into Bronchitis and Consumption. I was so weak that I could not sit up, was much emaciated, and coughed incessantly. I consulted several doctors, but they were powerless, and all agreed that I was in Consumption. At last, a friend brought me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. From the first dose, I found relief. Two bottles cured me, and my health has since been perfect."

WOMEN IN ANCIENT ROME.

Matrons Who Were Not to Be Trifled With—A Case of Wholesale Poisoning.

The Roman records show that it was not safe to trifle with the feelings of Roman women. They were, like Roman men, possessed of great decision of character, and when provoked could do the most daring deeds, reckless of the consequences. If they were treated kindly and on equal terms, they were the best of wives, and I am convinced that their goodness and firmness were the most effectual causes of the freedom which they attained. But if husbands put into force their traditional power and claimed supreme domination over them they were exactly the women to resist. And the history of Rome throws a lurid light on this aspect of their character; for occasionally they took stern and wild vengeance when husbands went too far in their despotic actions. I will adduce one or two instances of this:

In the year 331 B. C. many of the Roman citizens, and especially many of the Roman nobles, were attacked by an unknown disease, which showed the same symptoms in all, and nearly all perished. The cause was wrapt in obscurity, but at length a maid servant went to a curule ædile and said she could explain the origin of the disease, but would not do so unless security were given her that she would suffer no harm in consequence. The curule ædile brought the matter before the consuls, the consuls consulted the senate, and a resolution was passed guaranteeing safety to the maid servant. Whereupon she declared that the deaths arose from poison; that the matrons were in the habit of compounding drugs, and she could take the officials to a house in which they would come upon the matrons while engaged in the operation.

The officials accepted her offer, followed her and found; as she had said, the matrons compounding drugs. About twenty of them were conveyed to the Forum, and were subjected to an examination on their doings. Two of them, of noble family and with patrician names, Cornelia and Sergia, affirmed that the drugs were perfectly wholesome. That could easily be tested, and the two matrons were requested to prove their truthfulness by drinking the mixture. The two matrons begged for a few moments of private talk with the rest of their associates, but within sight of the people. Permission was granted, a few words were exchanged, and then all of the twenty matrons came back, boldly quaffed the liquor, and died in consequence. Then a search was made for all the matrons who had been engaged in this conspiracy and 170 were found guilty. The men explained the occurrence by asserting that the women were infatuated; but probably they knew well why recourse was had to such violent measures, and that Roman matrons were not likely to be subjected to tyranny without making an effort in one way or another to put an end to it.

An occurrence of a similar nature took place in 180 B. C. In this case there can scarcely be a doubt that a real plague raged, for it lasted for three years and decimated Italy. But the women were enraged with the men for the harsh measures which had been taken against them in connection with the Bacchanalian mysteries, and they seem to have regarded the plague as affording a favorable opportunity for the use of poison. In 180 B. C. the praetor, the consul and many other illustrious men died. A judge was appointed to inquire into these deaths, and especially to examine if poison had been employed. The historians do not relate the results of this investigation, but we are told that the wife of the consul was tried and condemned to death.

Thirty-six years after this two men of consular rank were poisoned by their wives. In subsequent times the use of poison became frequent; and particularly in the early days of the empire the matrons about the court were accused of having constant recourse to it to get out of the way men whom they did not like, husbands and sons and others connected with them, as well as strangers. And one writer remarks that wherever there were irregularities there were poisonings. Some historians have rejected these tales of poisoning as the inventions of credulous annalists, I think, without good reason. But whether the stories are true or false the Romans believed them, and they embody the Roman belief in regard to what women could do. And it seems to me that we must regard them as indicating that the Roman matrons felt sometimes that they were badly treated, that they ought not to endure the bad treatment, and that they ought to take the only means that they possessed of expressing their feelings and wreaking their vengeance by employing poison.—Principal Donaldson, LL. D., in Contemporary Review.

But Not Quite Done For.

Speaking of curious advertising, they tell that a certain fashionable pastor was taken in, but not quite done for, by a manufacturer of a patent medicine. It seems that he does not very carefully examine the requests for announcements sent to him until he stands up to read them in the pulpit. They usually consist of notices of prayer meetings, social gatherings and other matters relating to the congregation, but along with them are always communications from other churches, and these commonly consist of printed circulars. After reading out a number, a few Sundays ago, the minister started with a neatly printed page that began with a scriptural quotation about longevity, and proceeded with an argument in favor of the possibility and duty of attaining old age. He is a good elocutionist, and he delivered a paragraph in good style. Then he furtively glanced down toward the bottom of the page and found that the reading matter led into an advertisement. He made the discovery in time to save himself, although he had to stop awkwardly, and his hearers were at a loss to know why he did not finish.—New York Sun.

Surgeons in Disguise.

The municipal authorities think the crossings are so unsafe in Paris that an English paper says they have employed surgeons disguised as policemen for the purpose of helping the timid people across the perilous parts of the streets and boulevards and to be at hand in case of accidents.—New York Sun.

CIRCULAR—JULY 4TH.

Headquarters Chief Marshal Dedication Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument
July 4th, 1888.

PORTSMOUTH, June 26th.

For the purpose of protecting from possible injury all citizens and visitors, to enable the Fire Department to respond quickly in case of an alarm, and to facilitate promptness in carrying out the programme, the Chief Marshal makes the following announcement:

The committe on route have decided to rope off certain streets as follows:

Vicinity of depots during formation of procession;

Vicinity of Goodwin Park during dedicatory services;

Vicinity of Marginal road during exhibition of fireworks.

From the enclosures thus formed vehicles of all kinds will be excluded during their occupancy by the procession and people. Carriages conveying invited guests, the press, or on errands of public or private necessity, only, may temporarily suspend this rule. Pedestrians can pass the lines at all times, as is the usual custom.

The purpose of the committee being one of public safety, the chief marshal will expect a cheerful compliance on the part of citizens and visitors with the above regulations.

Approved.
GEORGE E. HODGDON, Mayor.
HERBERT A. MARDEN,
Chief Engineer Fire Dept.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS $22 TO $900. The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture in these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.
Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogues free.
PIANOS. Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos, that they are superior to all others. We recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1862, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN PIANO STRINGER," by use of which we secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.
A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and tuners, sent, together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant.

GLYCEROLE!
A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often discussed their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.
It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.
Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.
We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.
Price 25 cents per bottle.

"A GREEN OLD AGE."
Few Men or Women Reach It, But Nearly All Might—The Remarkable Experience of an Octogenarian.
"There is only one thing I dread," said the late Charles Sumner, "and that is the coming on of old age."

Mr. Sumner was a brave man, and could face danger unflinchingly but to watch the hairs whiten, the lines of pain and care grow deep in the face, to feel the strength and activity going and death coming on were more than he could bear. Alas! how many others feel the same today. Pains, loss of sleep, weakness, poor appetite, and feebleness, all break the spirit. Have you never heard of Mr. Nathan Chase, of New Bedford, Mass.? A man nearly four-score years old, and hale and hearty as in youth. And yet he was supposed to be dying of heart trouble less than two years ago. Here is what he says:
"A year ago or more I began to lose flesh and strength. I sent for my physician to know the cause. He examined me, and said it was my heart; that the old machinery was wearing out, and I must be careful. Still I grew worse. Finally I got so bad I could scarcely breathe; I could not lie in bed but had to sit up all night with possibly one hour's sleep out of twenty-four. And yet to-day, I am in fine condition; can go up three flights of stairs without inconvenience, and feel as well and about as young as ever in my life before. What accomplished this? Hunt's Remedy—nothing else. It has made a new man of me, and I bless God for it every day."
Such an experience should be a valuable lesson to all readers, both old and young. It shows that a long and happy life is possible. It shows that men or women need not despond. It shows that by care and the use of the right remedy health, happiness and long life may be secured by all.

BILIOUSNESS.

THIS very common complaint, which is caused by a dormant or inactive liver, can be cured in a short time by using Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, as can also the various diseases arising from inactive liver or kidneys. These organs, if inactive, will allow impure blood to enter the heart, causing tightness about that organ and palpitation.

She suffered thirty years.

MRS. DUDLEY CHANDLER, of Melrose, Mass., says: "I had suffered with Palpitation of the Heart more than thirty years before I found anything to give me essential relief. Last fall I tried Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, and, remarkable as it was, this Compound relieved me in two days, so that for several months afterwards I felt not the slightest touch of it, and am perfectly free from it now. Sometimes, before I took this Compound, the palpitations of my heart were so violent as to shake my whole body with rapid agitations, and at times I fainted and became entirely insensible. Now I am perfectly free from all this suffering. Consequently I can most sincerely and earnestly recommend this Compound to all like sufferers as the most perfect and best medicine I ever knew for Palpitation of the Heart."
This Compound is purely Vegetable, and strengthens and builds up the system while it eradicates disease.
Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles for $5. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

ADAMSON'S BOTANIC COUGH BALSAM
More than twenty years ago Adamson's Botanic Balsam was introduced generally throughout New England as a remedy for Coughs, Colds and Pulmonary complaints. Since its introduction it has constantly won its way into public favor, until now it is the universal decision that ADAMSON'S BOTANIC BALSAM is the best remedy for curing Coughs, Colds and Asthma.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your husband is, Mrs. Jones. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every grace of his person." "Humor, dear, of course, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood; he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do? I want he should go to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

Four members of the family of Daniel McCarthy of Haverhill, Mass., were poisoned by eating ice cream which had remained in a tin dish over night. They will recover.

All who suffer from coughs, colds, irritation of the bronchial tubes, or tendency to consumption, will find in Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry a remedy as agreeable to the palate as effectual in removing disease. The Balsam is a pleasant, safe, powerful and speedy remedy; it is a remedy that cures.

The favorite washing compound of the day is James Pyle's Pearline. It cleanses fabrics without injury and without the laborious scrubbing necessary with ordinary soap. For sale by grocers.

The democrats in Congress propose to push the tariff bill now.

For thirty years I have been troubled with catarrh—have tried a number of remedies without relief. A druggist here recommended Ely's Cream Balm I have used only one bottle and I can say that I feel like a new man. My catarrh was chronic and very bad. I make this voluntary statement that others may know of the Balm.—J. W. Mathewson, (Lawyer), Pawtucket, R. I.
Ely's Cream Balm gives satisfaction to every one using it for catarrhal troubles —G. K. Mellor, druggist, Mass. Apply balm in each nostril.

It Won't Bake Bread.—In other words, Hood's Sarsaparilla will not do impossibilities. Its proprietors tell plainly what it has done, submit proofs from sources of unquestioned reliability, and ask you frankly if you are suffering from any disease or affection caused or promoted by impure blood or low state of the system, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. The experience of others is sufficient assurance that you will not be disappointed in the result.

The house of commons rejected the channel tunnel bill by a vote of 307 to 165.

W. H. Pattee, salesman for Esterbrook & Eaton, Washington St. Boston, writes: "It gives me real pleasure to say that Adamson's Botanic Balsam cured me of a severe cold, to which I have been subject, especially during the winter months, and I have in many instances recommended it to my friends, and they have all been benefitted by its use. I think it has no equal as a cough mixture."

Why not start for yourself? Why not secure at once some of the few-priced but very fertile and well located lands adjacent to railroads now to be obtained by those going to Northern Dakota and Minnesota, where you can make a larger net profit per acre than on the high-priced or worn-out land you now occupy? BIRDS LEARNING TO SING.

A Common but Erroneous Impression. Several Interesting Cases.

Most people probably imagine that birds sing by instinct, that the song of the robin is as natural to him as his red breast, that the blue bird is not more liable to change its note than its color; and that, untaught, the nightingale will always sing the same beautiful song.
This common impression, however, is erroneous. Young birds will never sing the song peculiar to their tribe if they have never heard it, but if associated with some other bird, will learn its song instead. A redstart once built its nest under the eaves of a house where a caged chaffinch hung in a window underneath. The redstart learned the chaffinch's song. Another redstard was noticed to repeat the notes of a blackcap which had its nest close by.
The winchat and wheatear have naturally but little variety of notes, but will become much better songsters if confined with other birds, and the bullfinch can be taught to whistle complete tunes, although its own natural notes are harsh and insignificant. On the other hand, the nightingale in confinement will sometimes exchange its own beautiful song for that of some other bird that it may hear. The Hon. Daines Barrington says that he saw a linnet which had been taken from the nest when only two or three days old, and which, not having any other sounds to imitate, almost learned to articulate, and could repeat the words "pretty boy" and some other short sentences. He educated nestling linnets under the three best singing larks—the skylark, woodlark and titlark—every one of which, instead of the linnet's song, adhered entirely to that of their respective instructors. When the note of the titlark was thoroughly fixed, he hung the linnet which had learned it in a room for three months with two common linnets which were in full song. The educated linnet, however, never borrowed any passage from the other linnets, but adhered steadfastly to that of the titlark which it had learned.
At Knighton, in Radnorshire, he saw a goldfinch which sung exactly like a wren, and uttered no proper note of its species. This bird had been taken from the nest when it was two days old, and was hung in a window opposite a small garden, where it had, no doubt, heard and learned the wren's song, having never had the opportunity to learn that of the goldfinch. Birds taken from the nest two or three weeks old have already learned the call notes of their species. These and many similar facts go to prove that birds do not sing by instinct. They learn their songs from their parents. If they have no opportunity of hearing the song peculiar to their species, they never sing it, but will learn any other instead; just as an American child taken to France when a few weeks old would never speak English if he never heard it, but would learn to speak French.—Popular Science Monthly.

The Baseless Fabric of Dreams.

When a lady begins to dream dreams and see visions, look out for her, for there is no knowing what she will do. I know a young lady who is troubled with a husband and a year-old baby, with curly, golden hair. The other night she had a dream. She dreamt that she was dressing before the looking glass in the back parlor. Looking into the front parlor through the folding doors she beheld her husband in much too earnest conversation with two young ladies. One of the young ladies seemed greatly interested in what he was saying and their chairs gradually drew closer and closer together till it came to pass that the watcher on the other side of the folding doors observed her husband's arm steal round the waist of the young lady.
This was more than the indignant wife could stand, and she crept quietly behind the preoccupied couple and aimed a slap at the girl which would probably have lifted her head from her shoulders. So powerful was it that it knocked the whole scene completely out. The dreamer awoke, and so did her husband, and likewise the baby. The gas was turned up and revealed a very surprised looking group. The baby was the most surprised of all. The slap intended for the dreamer's rival had alighted full on the curly, golden head of her son.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Russian Taste in Colors.

While our steamer was lying at the landing at Kazan I noted a chocolate brown house with yellow window shutters and a green roof; a lavender house with a shining tin roof; a crimson house with an emerald roof; a sky blue house with a red roof, an orange house with an olive roof; a house painted a bright metallic green all over; a house diversified with dark blue, light blue, red green and chocolate brown; and, finally, a most extraordinary building which displayed the whole chromatic scale within the compass of three stories and an attic. What permanent effect, if any, is produced upon the optic nerves of the inhabitants by the habitual contemplation of their brilliantly colored and sharply contrasted dwellings I am unable to say; but I no longer wonder that "prekrasni," the Russian word for "beautiful," means literally "very red."—George Kennan in The Century.

An African tribe is governed by a ruler who has no tongue. He is not only the king, but the king dumb.

Drawbacks to Hygienic Living.

On all sides the habits and customs of civilized life compel us to tolerate, as best we can, a thousand and one drawbacks to strictly hygienic living. Nature has wisely made liberal provision for deviations from an ideal or perfect standard. The climate we inhabit is far from perfect; alternations of heat and cold, excessive humidity and excessive dryness, all contribute to overtax and depress the vital powers. The food we eat is in no sense ideal; the water we drink is frequently anything but the pure and sparkling element of which bucolic poets sing, and the air we breathe is, for the most part, loaded with every conceivable kind of visible and Mud Baths of Las Vegas.

When it comes to genuine cures Las Vegas can show up some pretty tall stories. Most of the cures are effected by the mud baths, which are a novel feature. The patient is plastered over from head to foot with extremely hot mud, made by mixing prairie loam with the hot mineral water. The nose, mouth, eyes and ears are left uncovered. He is then placed in a tub of the mud and left there half an hour, after which his dirty coating is scraped off. A shower bath of the hot water follows, then a plunge in a tank of it; after which comes the massage of a professional; half an hour's siesta—the patient, sleeping, wrapped in a sheet, in a room the temperature of which is about 98 degs.—and after this another rubbing. If rheumatism survives this treatment long the patient's only hope for relief lies in suicide.—Atlanta Constitution.

At His Post Day nd Night,

The vigilant imp, indigestion, goads us with his many-lashed scourge. Each lash is a diabolic symptom. No comfort in eating, misery afterwards, little or broken rest at night, visitations of the nightmare during fitful intervals of sleep, an uprising unrefreshed and without appetite, sleepiness and yawning during the day, nervousness and irritability of temper, even monomania in extreme cases. Hard to bear, all this. Necessary? No! a thousand times no, so long as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the nation's specific for indigestion, acute or chronic, is procurable. The commencement of a course of this medicine is the commencement of a cure. Prompt relief first, absolute eradiction subsequently. The truth of this statement, backed up by irrefragable testimony, is well known to the American people. So are others, viz.: that the Bitters averts and cures fever and ague and billious remittent, and removes nervousness, billiousness, constipation, and kidney and bladder troubles.

F. W. Dana, president of the Lewiston & Auburn horse railroad, and his associates, have been empowered by the railroad commissioners to construct a steam railroad from Auburn to East Auburn, and a narrow-guage road will be built at once.

A Peculiarity of Hood's Sarsaparilla is that while it purifies the blood, it imparts new vigor to every function of the body.

Big Shells in Mindanao.

We got a promising view from our window into a yard below, where a dozen pairs of immense bivalve shells (Tridacna gigas) lay in the sun. A careful measurement of the largest pair showed three feet and five inches in length and two feet five inches across the valves. They must have weighed toward 200 pounds each, or 400 pounds for a single shell. We found a single valve made a good load for two men. The Spanish naval officers, who seem, like other seafaring people, to be given to telling large yarns, tell of one off the south coast of Mindanao which has long been noted for its great size, and that the officers of the steam frigate Salamanca once planned to take it home as a present to Queen Isabella.

They steamed down the coast until they found the shell, dropped their strongest hawser around it and put on all the steam, but after some time found that instead of raising the shell the steamer was gradually sinking, being drawn under by the immense weight. So they cut the hawser and left the shell in its bed, where they declare it may yet be seen. The smaller species are found in the mud at low tide. Their toothed valves lie gaping apart, and must be traps ready set for any inquisite monkey who may pass their way. The larger ones are found in deeper water, and there are stories of divers after pearl oysters being caught in their immense jaws and held to their death.—American Naturalist.

The Famous Traveler's Tree.

One of the greatest wonders of Madagascar, so famous for its luxuriant vegetation, is the traveler's tree (Ravenala Madagascariensis). Its stem resembles that of the plantain, with which it is otherwise allied; but it sends out its wing like leaves only on two opposite sides, which resemble a large expanded fan. In an aged tree the lowest of these leaves will be from twenty to forty feet from the ground, and on a vigorous trunk there will generally be, at least, a score of them with a bright emerald green oblong blade from four to six feet in length.

The fruit grows in bunches, containing forty or fifty members, with three or four such bunches to a tree. Each fruit member contains a quantity of the silkiest fiber imaginable, of a purple tint enclosing thirty to thirty-five seeds. The leaves are used for roof thatching and the leaf stalks twined together serve for the walls of the islanders' huts. But the most remarkable property of this tree, and the one which gives it the distinctive appellation of Traveler's tree, is its petioles, which, even in the dryest seasons, always contain water, and the wayfarer, if he be thirsty, has only to pierce the thick base of a leaf stock, to obtain fully a quart of a pure and refreshing liquid.—Hall's Journal of Health.

New Method of Engraving.

Pyrogravure is a new method of engraving in black, reddish brown, bister, etc., by the use of a redhot metallic point. The engraving is done as easily as is drawing with a pen or pencil. A scraper and some gum serve to suppress or lighten the lines upon wood, just as upon paper.

Mr. Perier obtained his first pyroengraved drawings with redhot pokers and the conical cauteries used in surgery. These burners, which it was necessary to keep continually heating, were replaced by platinum burners heated by an electric current, and then by instruments based upon the principle of gas soldering irons.

Art decoration on a large scale and industrial ornamentation have in pyrogravure a new means of utilizing the talent of the artist and the skill of the workman. By means of it we can just as well draw a portrait or a landscape as decorate a room, piece of furniture or any other object, or mark the handle of a tool. The lines made by pyrogravure have not the sharpness of those given on wood by the graver or gouge. It increases the decorative effect of marqueterie and of objects of wood or leather inlaid with metals, ivory, mother of pearl, etc.—Annales Industrielles.

Power of "Guarantee Companies."

"The guarantee companies wield an enormous power. For instance, we bond every man on the Gould system of railroads. We had to look up the record of every one of them. Our investigation is very searching as to a man's record and habits. We will not bond one who can be called a drinking man. It isn't a question of total abstinence, but if a man is known to get under the influence of liquor he is too bad a risk for us. If he has stolen in one place we will not bond him in another. Once a thief, always a thief is our principle, and though it seems a little severe we cannot escape it. The weeding out process was carried on with vigor, and a man whom we wouldn't bond had to go. It was a great responsibility, and sometimes no doubt we made mistakes. A man's personal enemies would sometimes traduce him and deceive us. When we found that such an injustice had been done we bestirred ourselves in earnest, and you can be sure that the injured man got a place on the road at least as good as the one he had lost. Through this investigation the percentage of stealing has been greatly reduced."—New York Mail and Express.

Red the Favorite Color.

It is a curious circumstance that red, the unseen color of so many, is the favorite color, and may be called the king color, of the normal eye. It was especially so in ancient times. If we examine the Bible we shall find that the Hebrews scarcely ever use color as an epithet, as we do when we say "the blue sky," "the purple hills." They say, indeed, "the Red sea;" but blue is scarcely mentioned as seen in nature, only in the "blue and purple and scarlet" of the tabernacle hangings, or the high priest's robes, or the pavement of the king's palace of "red and blue and black and white marble," in the Book of Esther. Yellow, excepting as a sign of disease, is mentioned but once or twice; "her feathers like yellow gold." But red is largely spoken of as in later times, and perhaps as incorrectly, for we did not invent, we only inherit, the expressions, "red gold," "red wine," one of these being merely orange, and the other a ruddy purple. "Red hair" is a modern, or rather mediæval, inaccuracy; "red cow" we got from the ancients. These epithets all appear to show a certain fancy for calling things red as the more kingly and costly color.—Good Words.

HYDROPHOBIA AND FRIGHT.

Deaths Attributed to the Former Really Caused by the Latter.

The principal event in the convention of the State Medical association was the discussion over the existence of hydrophobia. The debate was interesting and valuable, and while there was a great difference of opinion on certain points, all agreed that the public were unnecessarily scared over hydrophobia; that even alleged cases were of great rarity, and that in the majority of cases in which death resulted from a dog's bite hydrophobia was not the cause of death. All the popular symptoms of hydrophobia were shown to be common to many forms of convulsions tetanic and convulsions resulting from hysteria.

Dr. C. W. Dulles, who had been appointed by the society to investigate hydrophobia, read his report for the year. Pasteur's methods, he said, were not attracting the same attention they did a year or so ago, and are in a fair way to die out. Pasteur had only treated 906 cases the previous year, he said, where he had formerly treated 300 a month. Pasteur's method had no effect in decreasing the mortality of those who fall into terror over hydrophobia. Pasteur knew nothing of hydrophobia. In the last year there had been fifteen cases in this country of alleged hydrophobia. He specified several cases, one being the case of a man who dreamed he died of hydrophobia, and on awakening was taken with convulsions through fright and died.

"The fear is worse than the bite," said Dr. Dulles, "for not one of the animals in the cases mentioned gave evidence that they had the rabies. The living in dread of death from hydrophobia is often the cause of death. Too often the diagnosis of the case is made by the laity and confirmed by the doctor. There is nothing more senseless, more cruel, more calculated to cause death than the senseless test of water." Dr. Dulles spoke of the exaggeration of forcible restraint supposed to be necessary in hydrophobia cases, and denounced the use of narcotics. "Hydrophobia is a misnomer," he said, "and is not a specific inoculable disease. I do not deny people fall into a certain state after being bitten by a mad dog, but I do deny that the state is produced by canine virus. Fright and other factors throw the patient into a 'condition,' not [illegible] disease. Wherever there is little talk there is little disease. Hydrophobia was unknown in Pennsylvania this last year, and belief in it will follow the fate of the belief in witchcraft."

Dr. Shakspeare, of this city, dissented from the opinions of Dr. Dulles, and said he spoke only from the standpoint of a medical antiquarian and a clinician, and did not speak from laboratory knowledge. Dr. Shakspeare held that the teachings of laboratory experiments were in favor of belief in hydrophobia beyond the power of controversy. He said the work there proved the existence of rabies as an infectious disease in the animal kingdom, and the strong probability was that it was infectious in man as well as in the lower animals, for the same symptoms were observed in both. The assumption that man is an exception to the rule that hydrophobia is infectious, he said, was arrant nonsense.

Dr. Traill Green, who is almost 80 years old, made a strong speech, treating hydrophobia as a myth. "This state is not so prevalent as people believe," he said. "Mad dogs are rare, very rare. In all my experience I have never had a case, and those I heard of and inquired into turned out to be humbugs. I want to see the people delivered from this scare. It's a wonder we live at all; we're so afraid of everything. People die of the fright, and it is a doctor's business to keep his patients from being scared."

Dr. Rahter, of Harrisburg, gave the case of a young girl which he considered a real case of hydrophobia. Dr. C. K. Mills said the so called hydrophobia symptoms could be explained in other ways as a resultant from other diseases. The convulsions might result from the searing by a sharp instrument, and would be of the nature of lockjaw. He said: "We ought to do all we can to relieve the public of fear." Dr. Frank Woodbury said he considered it a settled thing that hydrophobia and rabies did exist, but that they were rare diseases. Most people die of fright, he said, especially young women.

Dr. Green said that Dr. Dulles was doing a good work. "The fear is broadcast," he said, "in every one's mind. Even councils show their fear by passing ordinances to muzzle dogs in the summer time when there are fewer cases of alleged rabies than at any other time. I don't want the people to be scared, and I say such action is nonsense."

Dr. Dulles concluded the debate. He said that there was too much dictation from the laboratory. He did not deny that rabies may be propagated, but said such propagation was wholly artificial. "I do not deny that there is such a disease as rabies, but that disease is marked by a desire for quiet, rest, repose and water, while the alleged symptoms of hydrophobia in man are just the opposite."—Philadelphia Press.

Gen. Phil Sheridan's Manuscript.

S. L. Clemens, better known as Mark Twain, of the publishing firm of Charles L. Webster & Co., gives the following interesting facts regarding Gen. Sheridan's Memoirs, soon to be given to the public: "Mr. Webster and I called on Gen. Sheridan at his office in the war department a couple of years ago and made a contract with him for his autobiography, upon terms satisfactory to both parties. This was not long after we had published the second volume of Gen. Grant's 'Personal Memoirs.' Gen. Sheridan was as reluctant to try the untried field of authorship as had been Gen. Grant before him, but the desire to secure a comfortable provision for their families prevailed with both. Gen. Sheridan's procedure, after he had once made up his mind, was characteristic of him. He went at his task with all his might, and never called a halt until it was finished. One can see by his manuscript that he, like Gen. Grant, found authorship easy after he once got started. Authorship is always easy when one has something to say."—New York World.

PURIFY YOUR BLOOD.

Impurities in the blood produce diseases. Bodily and mental health depend upon a healthy condition of the blood. The blood, particularly in the spring and during the hot summer months, becomes clogged with impurities, which poison it and generate disease. A harmless blood purifier, without a particle of mineral poison in it, such as mercury or potash, is necessary to remove these impurities and to restore the healthy tone of mind and body. The best purifier and tonic known to the world is Swift's Specific (S.S.S.). In regard to its wonderful purifying and tonic powers we give a few testimonials as follows:

Mr. Wm. A. Siebold, with Geo. P. Rowell & Co., 10 Spruce Street, New York, writes March 29th, 1887: "I feel it my duty, for the benefit of others who may be afflicted as I was, to write you this letter, which you can use as my testimony in any way you choose. I will answer any inquiry from others in relation to the facts herewith stated. In February last I suffered great pain and inconvenience from boils, all over my neck; I could not turn my head without acute pain and my blood was in poor condition. After trying all the usual remedies in such cases, and finding no relief, by the persuasion of Mr. J. W. Fears, Manager of your New York Office, I used one bottle S. S. S., and I improved rapidly and very soon I was entirely relieved of my "Job's Comforters." Now not a sign of my affliction can be seen. I feel strong and cheerful. S. S. S. is a fine tonic as proved in my case. I sleep soundly and my appetite is good.

Dr. J. N. Cheney, a well-known physician writes from Ellaville, Georgia: "I use S. S. S. in convalescent fever cases with the best results. It will, in my judgment, prevent summer dysentery, if one will take a few bottles in the spring, thus preparing the bowels for the strains of summer."

Mrs. Scott Liston, 116 Zane street (Island), Wheeling, West Virginia, writes: "Having used S. S. S. for the blood, I can safely say that it beats anything I have used to cleanse the blood and make a new being out of a person."

Mr. M. S. Hamlin, Winston, N. C., writes: "I use it every spring. It always builds me up, giving me appetite and digestion, and enabling me to stand the long, trying, enervating hot summer days. On using it I soon become strong of body and easy of mind."

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

The Monroe chapter in Wide Awake's presidential series, "Children of the White House" (July number,) gives an account of Madame Campan's famous school in France, which Eliza Monroe attended, where she was the intimate schoolmate of Hortense Beauharnais, the future queen of Holland. The portraits which the queen sent over to the daughter of her old school friend have been engraved for this article, comprising Hortense as a schoolgirl, Hortense as queen, and Madame Campan. A spirited picture is drawn of Eliza in after life, as Mrs. Hay in the White House, where she inaugurated many of the social perplexities and questions of etiquette which vex Washington to-day.

Some time ago the London Times remarked: "The only time that England can use an Irishman is when he emigrates to America and votes for free trade, which he invariably does." When the ballots are counted next November it will be discovered that all Irish Americans are not serving English interests in that way this year.

in Newburyport on Saturday last, and was equally surprised and pleased to meet on the street, apparently alive, Mr. John Russell, otherwise known as "Black Jack," the fisherman whom it was feared was drowned on Saturday, June 23d, somewhere between the Isles of Shoals and Whale's-back. On being informed of the apprehensions concerning him, Mr. Russell stated that he had not been drowned, nor even cast away. Having taken a fine fare of mackerel he ran into Newburyport with his boat, sold his fare to good advantage, and had since been to Boston and purchased nets to be used in the mackerel fishery.

On Sunday night, after the above was in type, we were informed that Capt. Jameson did not meet John Henry Russell (as his name is reported to us now) in Newburyport, but learned that he had been there, and had sent his mackerel to Boston. It was reported at the Shoals on Sunday, the 1st inst., that Russell had been seen in Ipswich bay, and the schooner Gertie Freeman, Johnson master, went in search for him, and found him in his disabled boat, the rudder being gone and he endeavoring to steer with an oar. The Gertie Freeman took Russell on board, and towed his boat to the Shoals, where it was left, the owner, Mr. Lolley, being notified to look after it. Russell has not been in his right mind for some time, and his mental derangement is now so serious that he must be cared for by his friends.

BASE BALL.

The Nashua club defeated the Portsmouths in Nashua on Saturday, by a score of seventeen to eleven. Householder, of the Nashuas, made two base hits, a two baser, a three baser and a home run.

The Salem club, of the New England league, defeated the Dover club, eight to two, in Dover on Saturday. The Portsmouth club will play the Salems in Salem to-day.

OBITUARY.

William S. Willey, one of our elder citizens, was found dead in bed at the Cottage Hospital on the morning of June 28th. He had been failing for some time; during the past year, very rapidly. Several months ago he injured himself severely at Goodwin park, where he was at work with a team on the grading, sustaining a bad rupture through attempting too heavy a lift for a man of his age; and a few weeks since he had a leg broken while at work on the Sagamore road improvements, by the falling upon him of a quantity of earth and rock, when he was taken to the hospital where he died. He was all his life a hard-working, honest man, and at the time of his death, the immediate cause of which was probably apoplexy, was in the 75th year of his age. Mr. Willey was a firm believer in the doctrine of Christ's personal reappearance on the earth at a near date, and at different times has given in this paper his reasons for so believing and the approximate date on which he looked for Christ's second advent, based on Scriptural prophecies and what he regarded as their historical fulfillment. The last of these communications was published near the end of April, fixed the probable time of the second advent in 1889, and ended with "This is most likely the last time you will hear from me through the press."

MATRIMONIAL.

A notable society event was the marriage in Exeter on the evening of June 29th, of Professor F. E. Taussig of Harvard college and Miss Edith Guild, daughter of Mrs. W. H. Gorham, in the Unitarian church, in the presence of 250 invited guests. Many were present from St. Louis, New York, Boston and other places. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Edward Hale, the colleague of Rev. Edward E. Hale. The couple will take an extended tour abroad, returning in the fall to their new home in Cambridge.

Another social event in the same town on the same date, was the marriage of Professor William Hamilton Foster of St. Paul's school, Concord, and Miss Alcina Gordon, youngest daughter of Hon. Nathaniel Gordon of Exeter. The marriage was solemnized at the residence of the bride on Pine street, by Rev. George E. Street of the Second Congregational church. The presents were numerous and costly and the attendance large, many being present from abroad. The couple left on the evening train for the west on a wedding tour.

Gen. Sheridan was removed from his house in Washington to the U. S. S. Swatara on Saturday, June 23d, and bore the removal without fatigue. The Swatara sailed for New Bedford shortly after one o'clock Saturday afternoon.

The Opening of the Campaign.

To open the campaign with any hopes of speedy success, attack the enemy, malaria, before it has a chance to intrench. An obstinate foe, 'twill prove if you don't go right at it. If you are prudent, too, you will have fortified, upon the first intimation of its presence in your neighborhood. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the medicinal ammunition that you require. Every form of malarial fever yields to this fine preventive and remedy. For constipation, liver complaint, dyspepsia, nervousness and kidney troubles it is no less effective. Residents of malarial localities, and persons sojourning in or bound for the great west, should select this medicine as a means of defence against the frequent visitation of miasma. Those in delicate health, the aged and the enfeebled, should in every instance restore to this signal invigorant. It is for weak nerves.

drinking ice water is copious, when a person is overheated is injurious, not to say dangerous, is also undeniable. But that the free drinking of water in some form in hot weather must be avoided, is deniable, and is one of the greatest popular errors extent. When perspiring freely from every pore, a vast amount of water is drawn from the body, which must be re-supplied, or great injury is being done to the physical health, and the foundation of some of the worst forms of kidney disease is being slowly but surely laid. Why! Someone will exclaim, that just causes kidney troubles, drinking water freely which contains so much lime. Wrong again! so long as the water drank is freely carried through the system, and converted in its passage to its naturally acid reaction of the urine and prespiration, no danger can occur, by deposits of urea or lime in the kidneys and bladder; because they remain perfectively in solution, and are carried out of the body instead of remaining in it. Literally they are washed out of the body, by the copious draughts of water, (that most perfect of all known solvents,) same as a series of pipes are "flushed" with water to clean them.

Do not drink ice cold water, but pure cool water, a little lemon juice will improve its effectiveness. Plain soda with a little acid is also excellent.

If from drinking too much ice-water you have stomach cramps, or are "water logged" as it is called, or are attacked with cholera morbus, summer complaints, diarrhoea or dysentery, do not resort to alcoholic stimulating drinks, which irritate rather than soothe and allay the inflammation which has caused the trouble; but adopt the practice of taking daily just before retiring, during July and August, one teaspoonful of Johnson's Anyodyne Liniment in a little sweetened water, which will prevent all such attacks and ill effects from ice water. In fact a little pamphlet sent free to anyone, by I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass., contains a vast amount of information, about treating those summer troubles, with Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. It is marvelous how many complaints this old-fashioned remedy will prevent or cure.

MARITIME NOTES.

The new harbor steamer Undine, owned and commanded by Capt. Duncan, made a run nearly out to the Shoals on Saturday afternoon with a party of invited guests, starting at about half-past three o'clock and arriving back about five. The new boat runs well, tows well, seems to be a good seaboat and safe carrier, and fully answers the anticipations of Capt. Duncan, so far. She starts this (Monday) morning on the route between this city, Newcastle, Kittery Point and the Pocahontas hotel, for the season.

The United States training ship Portsmouth arrived in the lower harbor on Sunday morning.

The schooner Agnes E. Downs, Capt. Levi Downs, arrived at this port on Sunday. Since she has been out she has taken about forty barrels of mackerel; she reports immense shoals of "tinkers," and could have filled with them, but did not consider that there would be any market for them.

The yacht Starlight, Capt. Fred Frisbee of York beach commanding, will commence to-day her trips from Concordville, taking out fishing and sailing parties on excursions. The Starlight is well found in all the gear needed on such excursions.

A party of prominent citizens of Dover, including the mayor, city officials, members of the city councils, Agent Holland of the Cocheco company, Superintendent Anderton of the Cocheco Print works, and others, last week made arrangements for a trip down river and out to the Boon island fishing grounds this (Monday) morning in the steamer Cocheco, providing the weather should be favorable, and a landing at the Shoals af-

A number of [illegible] boats came in on Sunday morning with good fares of mackerel, which were sold at the wharves at retail early in the forenoon at eight cents a piece. The fish were quite large and fat.

The Sunday school of the Middle street church will have a picnic at York beach on Wednesday, July 11th, travelling both ways in the cars. Tickets for the round trip will be seventy-five cents each for adults, thirty-five cents for children.

The Mystic Cricket club of Medford, Mass., will play a game with the Portsmouth club on the grounds at Freeman's lane July 4th; wickets pitched at eleven o'clock A. M.

Seven candidates for admission to the high school were examined at the school building Saturday morning.

About one hundred scholars, under charge of Mr. Brown of the Haven school, went on a picnic to Jenness' beach, Rye, Saturday forenoon.

The members of the Eliot Library Association are making extensive arrangements for holding a great fair on Tuesday and Wednesday, August 21st and 22d, in aid of the library fund. And not only the members of the association, but the ladies of the town generally, and many others in other places, are working to make the affair a great success. The fair will be held in a large tent pitched in a field opposite the residence of Prof. Farmer; a good band will be employed, and a great amount and variety of useful and ornamental articles offered for sale at reasonable prices.

Hon. Edwin C. Burleigh has resigned as state treasurer of Maine, being the republican candidate for governor.

A new French torpedo boat is said to have a speed of twenty-six miles an hour. These extra fast boats are always away off somewhere.

The large strawberries are not put on the top of the box this year. Nor at the bottom, either.

A Famous Doctor

Says that the secret of good health consisted in keeping the head cool, the feet warm, and the bowels open. Had this eminent physician lived in our day, and known the merits of Ayer's Pills as an aperient, he would certainly have recommended them, as so many of his distinguished successors are doing.

The celebrated Dr. Farnsworth, of Norwich, Conn., recommends Ayer's Pills as the best of all remedies for "Intermittent Fevers."

Dr. I. E. Fowler, of Bridgeport, Conn., says: "Ayer's Pills are highly and universally spoken of by the people about here. I make daily use of them in my practice."

Dr. Mayhew, of New Bedford, Mass., says: "Having prescribed many thousands of Ayer's Pills, in my practice, I can unhesitatingly pronounce them the best cathartic in use."

The Massachusetts State Assayer, Dr. A. A. Hayes, certifies: "I have made a careful analysis of Ayer's Pills. They contain the active principles of well-known drugs, isolated from inert matter, which plan is, chemically speaking, of great importance to their usefulness. It insures activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. Ayer's Pills contain no metallic or mineral substance, but the virtues of vegetable remedies in skillful combination."

Upstairs and Down

From Garret to Cellar, in the Laundry, Kitchen, Butler's Pantry, and Bath Room—JAMES PYLE'S PEARLINE has its place. There's nothing too coarse—nothing too fine for it.

With the aid of PEARLINE a delicate woman can clean house and wash clothes. It virtually takes the place of hard work, and is perfectly harmless; in fact, your things last longer, because you do not have to rub them to pieces to get them clean. PEARLINE is for sale everywhere, but beware of the numerous imitations which are peddled from door to door—they are dangerous.

PROPOSALS FOR HEADSTONES.—New York Depot of the Quartermaster's Department, Houston St., corner Greene, New York city, June 20, 1888.—Sealed proposals, in triplicate, subject to usual conditions, will be received at this office until 12 o'clock M., July 23, 1888, at which time and place they will be opened in the presence of bidders, for furnishing, subject to an appropriation by Congress, about 20,000 American white marble Headstones, in slabs. The government reserves the right to reject any or all proposals or to accept as will be most advantageous to the Department. Preference given to articles of domestic production and manufacture, conditions of price and quality being equal, and such preference given to articles of American production and manufacture produced on the Pacific coast to the extent of the consumption required by the service there. Specifications, blanks and information as to bidding, &c., will be furnished at this office on application. Envelopes containing proposals should be marked "Proposals for Headstones," and be addressed to the undersigned. J. G. Selection, Highland Band.

Address, by Hon. Charles Levi Woodbury.

Chorus, "America," school children.

Closing exercises.

Benediction by J. K. Ewer, Dept. Chaplain.

The 1st Regt Band of Manchester will give a concert on the Parade on the evening of the 3rd at 7:30 o'clock, and the Highland Band of Lake Village at 7:00 o'clock on the evening of the 4th.

The display of fireworks will take place at or near Langdon Park at 9:00 P. M. on the evening of the Fourth. Programme for the above will be announced later.

At the Collation tent the parade will be dismissed. The several organizations are then to be considered in charge of their commanding officers.

By order of
ANDREW P. PRESTON,
Chief Marshal.

Capt. JAMES A. SANBORN,
Chief of Staff.

TO THE PUBLIC.

PORTSMOUTH, June 30th.

At a meeting of the programme committee on Fourth of July parade, held last evening, a petition was received signed by Hon. Daniel Marcy and others, asking that the route of the procession "be so changed that it would pass through Water street and the lower part of State street." After due consideration the committee decided not to make the change asked for, for the following reasons:

That it would materially lengthen the route, and the stone paving in Water street is very hard to march over, together with the fact that most of the marching men in the procession will be veterans advanced in years, who in accepting the invitation to parade have quite generally requested that the route be made as short as practicable, and many of whom have been notified of the route as previously laid out by the committee and have expressed their satisfaction therewith.

NOTICE TO VETERANS.

Headquarters Storer Post, No. 1, G. A. R., Department of New Hampshire.
PORTSMOUTH, N. H., June 29, 1888.

At a meeting of this Post held on the evening of the 27th instant it was voted to invite all Veterans to join in the procession and be present at the dedication of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, on the 4th of July.

M. M. COLLIS, Adjutant.

ASHES AND RUBBISH.

The street commissioner, in order to clear the streets of rubbish set out by the citizens on Tuesday, July 3d, will put on extra teams that day; no rubbish will be removed after twelve o'clock, noon, so it is important that it should be put out before seven o'clock in the morning.

THE AWARD OF MEDALS.

The award of Haven medals at the high school exhibition last Friday was announced as follows:

Ullie Akerstrom finished her engagement at the Boston theater last week, and now goes to Bar Harbor.

The following will be of interest to Portsmouth people: "The sum of $9,000 has been raised toward a monument to the late Rev. T. Starr King in San Francisco, and as soon as the figure is increased to $12,000 they will proceed to erect a memorial to one of the gentlest spirits and noblest men who ever went from the east to the Pacific slope," and one who did more than any other man to keep California true to the Union during the early days of the secession war.

Boxes 53, 43, 7, 14 and 19 will be pulled in during the regular monthly trial of the fire alarm this forenoon.

WHAT IS SCROFULA

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or the many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. Some of these cures are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, sores breaking out on them in various places. My little boy, three years old, has been a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. I was advised to use Hood's Sarsaparilla, and we have all taken it. The result is that all have been cured of the scrofula, my little boy being entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy." W. B. ATHERTON, Passaic City, N. J.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS.

$22 TO $900.

The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture of these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.

Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogues free.

PIANOS. Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos, that they are superior to all others. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority, as they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN PIANO SCHROOM," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.

A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and tuners, sent, together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant.

Pianos and Organs sold for cash or easy payments; also rented.

GLYCEROLA
A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

"IT WILL NOT INHERITED."
The Fearful Effect of Heredity Upon the Lives of Men and Women—A Striking Case.

"The man or woman does not live who is free from hereditary influences." This remark was made by the celebrated Dr. Vanderville, of New York, to the Rev. Dr. Brooks, at a recent convention of scientists. "I agree with you, doctor," said the divine.

"Pure blood," continued the doctor, "is the great cause of health; impaired blood the source of most diseases. It may even go back to the grand or great grand parents."

"I have in mind a prominent man," said the reverend gentleman, "General Alfred C. Monroe, of No. 1 Pemberton Square, Boston. He inherited kidney troubles from both parents, one of whom died with it. He suffered terribly from pains in the back and head, and at times when walking the dizziness became so bad that he was compelled to lay hold of some convenient post for support. He was in a most desperate condition."

"And is he so still?" asked the doctor.

"No, he is in perfect health. Dr. McGregor, I believe of Maine, who had amputated an arm for the general, cured him."

"Do you know what medicine he used?"

"I understand it was Hunt's Remedy."

"Oh, Hunt's Remedy. I know it very well," said Dr. Vanderville. "I consider it the best remedy for kidney, liver, heart troubles, and female difficulties in the world. It is in no sense a patent medicine, but a standard remedy, which deserves to be used by all intelligent people. The fact is, no blood-taint can exist when the kidneys are in perfect order, and there is where Hunt's Remedy shows its marvelous superiority."

"I only wish," said Rev. Dr. Brooks, "that all people who inherit a tendency to disease could know of this remedy of which you speak so highly and use it. I am positive it would greatly lessen suffering and death."

OH, WHAT A COLD!
THIS is the season for sudden changes in the weather, and a great many "take cold" either in their Head or on their Lungs, causing Coughs, Hoarseness, and Sore Throat. These troubles can be soon relieved and cured by taking Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs, entirely removing these difficulties.

Cured his boy of Croup.
C. M. BROOKS, Lowell, Mass., says: "I take great pleasure in recommending Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific as a cure for Coughs, Colds, and Croup. I used it in my family last winter with the best results. Two or three doses cured my little boy of Croup, for which I am very thankful."

You can cure that Cough in a short time. You can cure your Catarrh if you persist in its use, as it will stop the secretion of Catarrhal matter in the head; it will relieve Croup in from three to five minutes.

The best he ever saw.
"The best medicine for Coughs and Consumptive Complaints that ever I saw is Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific," so says JOHN MCLAUGHLIN, of Boston.

Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific is sold by all Druggists. Price 50 cents and $1. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

AS A HAIR GROOMER.
How One Woman Earns a Livelihood. Care of the Hair—Trimming.

The names of the occupations which refined women in reduced circumstances are seeking nowadays are legion. The field of type writing, stenography and telegraphy has long been crowded by women who have to earn their own living and the living of families, and who cannot do manual labor. Places as private secretaries, all sorts of clerkships in shops and business offices, "traveling agencies," editorships, employments by the score have been added to that which twenty-five years ago was almost the only occupation in which a refined woman thrown upon her own resources could engage—that of teaching children. There are women now who even write for the papers, and have attained fame as reporters, tramping about town at all hours and in all sorts of weather. A reporter was introduced to a friend, the other day, to a lady who was earning a very comfortable livelihood as a hair groomer.

"I'm not a hairdresser," she said, "I'm a hair groomer. I don't do up hair at all. I only comb the hair and give it that general attention which every woman's hair demands two or three times a week. There are lots of women in the city who are in this business and who would scorn to call themselves professional hairdressers."

She was an elderly lady, tall and slender, and dressed neatly and with excellent taste in black. Her manners were gentle and refined. Her face had that dark, quiet look seen on the faces of invalids or of women who had a good deal of suffering. She was living in a respectable boarding house.

"I was cornered and I had to do it," she said. "I had to earn my living suddenly, and the only way I could think of to do so at my age was to care for women's hair. My mother was for years an invalid. She had beautiful hair, and it used to soothe and quiet her to have me comb her hair and stroke it softly. In this way I learned to care for the hair, especially that of nervous women. There are a great many women, of course, of the so called upper classes who can't afford to keep maids and yet who want their hair cared for regularly. They don't like to have professional hairdressers around them, either. It is to such women I look for my patronage.

"What do I do to the hair? Well, first I rub it dry with a soft and then with a hard brush. I don't put a lot of water and 'cleaning stuff' upon the hair at first as some do, but after I have the dandruff all out, I wet the hair with a simple solution which I know to be effective and not deleterious; then I rub and brush the hair dry again. Next comes the trimming. I pull out the gray hairs one by one, taking care to pull them so that the scalp is not lacerated, and the hair cells themselves destroyed. There is a great art in pulling out hairs. You must pull them in the direction in which they lie in the scalp just as you would a sliver of wood from your hand, in the direction in which it entered. Men or women can't pull out their gray hairs themselves, for it is utterly impossible for them to see that they are pulling the hairs out on the proper slant. Of course, you know that people are very touchy on the subject of gray hairs in their heads. It makes a woman have the blues for a week when her first gray hairs come. Now, when gray hairs are the result of age I never meddle with them; the only thing to do is to let them come. But they are often the result of sickness or some other little trouble, and it is then often possible to prevent their coming. Baldness is to be doctored in just the same way. I can never cure, though, and nobody can cure the baldness of people, like accountants and others, accustomed to work all day with the glare and heat of gaslights or electric lights beating down upon their heads. In their cases the hair cells have been literally burnt out.

"Well, finally, I trim the hair. I cut each individual hair separately so as to make it even with the others. When the hair is gathered up in the hand and cut square across in a lump, as it were, with the scissors, the straggling hairs are not reached. The result is only to make the hair shorter and quite as uneven as before. Then I part the hair simply and do it up plainly. As I told you, if women want their hair done up in any of the fancy styles they mustn't come to me.

"How much does it pay me? Well, I generally think I ought to get $1, at least, each time I visit a lady's house. If a lady lives a great way up town and it takes me all the afternoon or morning to go up and see her, I want more money, of course. And, on the contrary, when two or three patrons live near each other, why, I can moderate the price a little to each one. It is a huffable way of getting a living, I know, but it is respectable, and I shall stick to it."—New York Sun.

A Tank for Drinking Water.
Many methods are suggested to keep drinking water cool, but I think the following will be found to possess advantages over the box system. Procure a ten gallon jar and an empty salt barrel, which can be had for the asking, put sufficient dry, well tamped sawdust in the barrel, so that when the jar is placed therein it will protrude about one inch above the barrel. Fill in around the jar with sawdust and tamp as before, leaving a space of about two inches to be filled out with cement nicely smoothed off and sloped, in order that any dripping water will be carried over the edge of the barrel, and your cooler is completed in about one-twentieth of the time required to make a box, and far more handy.—Cor. Boston Budget.

Petroleum Deposits of Peru.
Behind Tumbez are the petroleum deposits of Peru, which have been known to the natives ever since the times of the Incas, but they were ignorant of the character or value of the oil. A Yankee by the name of Larkin, from western New York, went down there to sell kerosene, and recognized in the material which the Indians used for lubricating and coloring purposes the same article he was peddling. Attempts have been made to utilize the deposits, which are very extensive, but so far they have not been successful in producing a burning fluid that is either safe or agreeable.—Wm. Eleroy Curtis in American Magazine.

A Plea of Toothache.
A Chicago bank clerk obtained a leave of absence on the plea of toothache. When he failed to return the bank officials went to the root of the matter, and found that his plea was tooth in, to speak, and his accounts too short.—Norristown Herald.

Rice at Weddings.
The throwing of rice at weddings is evidently a heathen custom, as in India and some other countries to this day rice is showered on the expectant youth when he goes to the house to get his bride. Rice is the emblem of fruitfulness.—Chicago Herald.

A Scrofulous Taint.
"What is your humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. What an humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood; he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

The quartermasters and commissary's stores, with their contents, at Fort Apache, Arizona, were burned June 27th; loss $100,000

All who suffer from coughs, colds, irritation of the bronchial tubes, or tendency to consumption, will find in Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry a remedy as agreeable to the palate as effectual in removing disease. The Balsam is a pleasant, safe, powerful and speedy remedy; it is a remedy that cures.

George M. Marston of Malden, Mass., a letter carrier's sorter in the Boston postoffice, has been held in $1,000 for stealing letters.

The favorite washing compound of the day is James Pyle's Pearline. It cleanses fabrics without injury and without the laborious scrubbing necessary with ordinary soap. For sale by grocers.

The Tasker Iron Works at Newcastle, Del., were damaged $150,000 by fire, June 27th.

For thirty years I have been troubled with catarrh—have tried a number of remedies without relief. A druggist here recommended Ely's Cream Balm. I have used only one bottle and I can say that I feel like a new man. My catarrh was chronic and very bad. I make this voluntary statement that others may know of the Balm.—J. W. Mathewson, (Lawyer), Pawtucket, R. I.

Ely's Cream Balm gives satisfaction to every one using it for catarrhal troubles.—G. K. Mellor, druggist, Mass. Apply balm in each nostril.

Latter Day Saints had a row among themselves at Glenn Easton, W. Va., June 27, in which two saints were fatally injured, and six or seven stabbed or otherwise hurt.

A Good Appetite
Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

A Druggist Says.
Marvin C Brown, Druggist, Meredith village, N. H., says: I have sold your Sulpher Bitters for years, and, contrary to most medicines, I never sold a bottle to any one who said it did not help them. They cured me of those terrible sick headaches when every other remedy failed.

Republican ratification meetings are reported from all quarters.

Avoid the use of calomel for billious complaints. Ayer's Cathartic Pills, entirely vegetable, have been tested forty years, and are acknowledged to be the best remedy for torpidity of the liver, costiveness, and indigestion.

The republicans of Manchester ratified the national nominations on the evening of June 27th, and ran out seven campaign flags.

It is common sense for any one to see that they use soaps that are not adulterated. Beach's World Soap is pure. Use no other.

FAILURE OF CROPS is an unknown experience in Central and Northern Dakota and Minnesota. Maps and full particulars regarding lands, prices, etc., sent free. Address C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

WHY WORK FOR ANOTHER, or on small salary? Why continue working on a worn-out farm? Why try to secure a living from such high-priced or heavily-mortgaged farms? Why work on rented land? Why not start for yourself? Why not secure at once some of the low-priced but very fertile and well located lands adjacent to railroads now to be obtained by those going to Northern Dakota and Minnesota, where you can make a larger net profit per acre than on the high-priced or worn-out land you now occupy? Why not go and look the situation over, and see for yourself, or at least obtain further information, which will be sent free, if you will address C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn. ?

GO WEST. 18,000,000 acres of the Montana Indian Reservation just opened for settlement near Great Falls, Ft. Benton, Assiniboine and Glasgow, consisting of rich mineral and coal districts, grazing and farm lands of the very highest quality. Cases of Smokers' Vertigo.

Dr. Decaisne is reported as having recently investigated a number of cases of vertigo in smokers. Out of 63 patients, 49 were between 50 and 66 years of age. More than half of them suffered, in addition, from digestive troubles, with constipation alternating with diarrhœa, insomnia, palpitations, dyspnœa and diuresis. In a third of the number there was marked intermittence of the pulse, and granular pharyngitis, while others suffered from aphthæ, amblyopia, etc. Thirty-seven were persons who smoked habitually on an empty stomach; and these suffered from vertigo, principally in the morning. The vertigo generally coincided with suppression of perspiration and diminished excretion of the urine. The treatment consisted mainly in regulating or suppressing the cause, but 33 out of 37 patients ceased to suffer on merely refraining from smoking on an empty stomach.—New York Medical Record.

The Opening of the Campaign.

To open the campaign with any hopes of speedy success, attack the enemy, malaria, before it has a chance to intrench. An obstinate foe, 'twill prove if you don't go right at it. If you are prudent, too, you will have fortified, upon the first intimation of its presence in your neighborhood. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the medicinal ammunition that you require. Every form of malarial fever yields to this fine preventive and remedy. For constipation, liver complaint, dyspepsia, nervousness and kidney troubles it is no less effective. Residents of malarial localities, and persons sojourning in or bound for the great west, should select this medicine as a means of defence against the frequent visitation of miasma. Those in delicate health, the aged and the enfeebled, should in every instance restore to this signal invigorant. Use it for weak nerves.

Arthur Craven of Providence, R. I., while walking with a girl named Jowitt, was fatally shot by her father, who charged him with having wronged the girl. In his ante-mortem statement Craven denied the charge.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla operates radically upon the blood, thoroughly cleansing and invigorating. As a safe and absolute cure for the various disorders caused by constitutional taint of infection, this remedy has no equal. Take it this month.

George M. Gibson, the young fellow who shot himself in Boston on what was to have been his wedding night, told his intended's uncle that he did it because his wedding suit did not arrive in time from the tailor's.

W. H. Pattee, salesman for Esterbrook & Eaton, Washington St. Boston, writes: "It gives me real pleasure to say that Adamson's Botanic Balsam cured me of a severe cold, to which I have been subject, especially during the winter months, and I have in many instances recommended it to my friends, and they have all been benefitted by its use. I think it has no equal as a cough mixture."

Gen. Sheridan's family arrived at New Bedford on June 29th, to await the general's arrival by water.

We take much pleasure in recommending the use of Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer as safe and reliable for estoring gray hair to its natural color.

The peanut crop this year was very large, but dealers cannot get a full supply.

Unable to Tell.

Yes, that was so. For years I suffered with scrofula; sores broke all over my body, and I am unable to tell one half that I suffered. I was not able to obtain relief until I used Sulpher Bitters, which completely cured me.—C. B. Dale, 17 Allston street, Boston.

The deckhouse of the Anchor line steamer Assyria has been picked up at sea. She sailed from St. John, N. B., for Liverpool, some days ago, with deals.

A Peculiarity of Hood's Sarsaparilla is that while it purifies the blood, it imparts new vigor to every function of the body.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 50c. and $1. Trial size free. At all Druggists.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. OUR BREAD IN DANGER.

The United States Government Chemists, in their examinations of articles of food offered for Government use, have developed the fact that almost all the baking powders upon the market are made from alum or phosphates, or contain large quantities of lime or other adulterants. As a matter of fact, of the samples analyzed, the Royal was the only baking powder found free from all of these deleterious ingredients, and absolutely pure.

Alum is used as a substitute for cream of tartar to produce a cheap baking powder. The effect of alum upon the system has been ascertained to be poisonous, and overdoses have been attended with fatal results. The phosphate are next to the alum powders in cheapness. They contain a large amount of lime. The baking powders sold with a gift are of the alum or phosphate class.

Lime when subjected to heat gives off a certain amount of carbonic acid gas, but a quicklime is left, one of the most powerful caustics known. Chemists have found twelve per cent., or one-eighth of the weight, of some of the baking powders advertised as pure to be lime.

The absolute purity and wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder—now affirmed by every chemist and food analyst of prominence, and conceded by all manufacturers of other brands—arise from the exclusive use of cream of tartar which is specially refined by patent processes that totally remove the lime and all other impurities.

In his report, the United States Government Chemist says: "The Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure, for I have so found it in many tests made for the United States Government. I will go still further and state that it is undoubtedly the purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public."

Known by Their Oddities.

If you have ever visited an asylum for the deaf and dumb you have noticed that the patients at once name all visitors by some peculiarity. If there be a slight facial contortion or a peculiarity of motion it is instantly caught by the crowd, represented in sign language, and so you are henceforth designated by them. Their names are much like those given by Indians to children—"The Man with One Eye Glass," "The Man Who Has a Mole Under His Eye," "The Man Who Squints." They know you by your differences. We are working on the same plan when we describe our great men and leaders. We know them by their oddities. Grant is, in history, the man who smoked and who kept silence. A man with no designative points will never be accepted as a leader.—M. Maurice, M. D.

Mongolian Beauty in American Dress.

A Chinese lady in approved modern fashionable dress attracted a great deal of interested attention in Broadway the other morning. To any one overtaking her the figure was that of a medium sized girl dressed with exceptional elegance and taste. She wore a silk dress of a dainty green tint cut and slashed and trimmed after the latest Parisian ideas, and a heavy black beaded passementerie cape over her shapely shoulder gave a wonderful appearance of neatness to her unquestionably slim waist. Her coiffure was stylish and becoming, and she wore a chip straw hat of the latest shape and of a delicate gray color, elaborately and effectively trimmed.—New York World.

Taking Too Much Quinine.

The quinine habit is gaining strength every day. Dizziness, that you hear innumerable people complaining of in these days, can be traced to excess in the use of quinine. The good effects, that it is nearly always certain of, are lost by excessive doses. Too much quinine will also produce congestion of the ear and vibration of the auditory nerve. The growing habit of taking quinine for neuralgia and other like ailments, without consulting a physician, is altogether reprehensible, and may lead to very serious results. Many cases of deafness are produced by overdoses and long continued use of the drug.—Physician in Globe-Democrat.

The Herb of Prophecy.

A plant grows in Mixteca, Mex., which the natives call the "herb of prophecy." A dose of it produces sleep similar in all respects to the hypnotic state. The subject answers with closed eyes questions that are put to him, and is completely insensible. The pathologic state brings with it a kind of prophetic gift and double sight. Furthermore he loses his will and is completely under the control of another. On returning to himself he remembers nothing of what he has done. —Chicago Times.

Making Fireproof Scenery.

Tepper, of Berlin, is credited with the invention of a material for scenery which is incombustible, with none of the disadvantages of processes heretofore tried. He applies to very fine wire cloth a fireproof insoluble yellow plaster, quite fluid at first, but it soon becomes firm. To this the painters apply their pigments. The plaster is not heavy, and is so tough and flexible that drop scenes coated with it can be rolled upon small poles without cracking.—Boston Transcript.

Diamond Setting by Machinery.

"Ten years ago," said a manufacturing jeweler, "there was but one diamond cutter in the city. When he got sick there was nobody to cut a diamond. Now there are plenty of cutters, and they use improved machinery, by the use of which they can cut diamonds better and more cheaply that it can be done anywhere in the world. Our diamond cutters can take many imported stones and add 25 per cent. to their value by improved cutting. The obvious increase in the number of diamonds worn has compelled the education of workmen to meet the demand.

"Another thing has been done. This is an invention of the American manufacturer, and consists of the application of machinery to diamond setting. The old time workman would have considered with horror the idea of putting anything but hand work on a piece of diamond jewelry. Everything about it had to be done by slow and laborious hand work. But a shrewd workman got the idea that a good deal of the setting of a diamond may be done quite as well by machinery as by hand, and a good deal quicker and more cheaply. The fact is that where many diamonds are set they resolve themselves into sizes about as regular as the sizes of any other commodity. It is easy enough to prepare settings to suit any size of diamonds that are sold in the market.

"It may seem a trifling thing to estimate the cost of a setting—or at least the difference between a hand made setting and a machine made setting; but the inevitable result of competition has been to get the cost of manufacturing even diamond jewelry down to the lowest rate. As to the value of the diamond itself, the experts have become able to fix that to a nicety."—New York Sun.

Illusions and Hallucinations.

Morbid psychology is a rubric of paramount importance to the full and clear comprehension of the phenomena of mind. The genesis of illusions and hallucinations, the perversion of the natural channels of the emotions, the disintegration of the elements of personality, the dissolution of the logical powers—all these problems transform the apparently wild and chaotic picture of the madhouse into a sad but interesting record of the process of character and of mind building. This interest is heightened by remembering that here lies the key to the understanding of the psychic epidemics that in the past have upset the rationality of mankind, and transformed the incoherent babbling of some demented soul into the mysterious utterances of a revealed spirit. It is furthermore heightened by the notice that the phenomena conveniently grouped as "psychic research" are attracting, and always will attract. Hypnotism, after an adventurous and uncertain existence in the hands of charlatans, has been admitted into science; and although the literature of the topic, at least in France, is increasing out of all proportion to our insight into the nature of the phenomena, yet enough has been established to recognize in this semi-morbid condition the key to the solution of many otherwise barely accessible problems. With regard to those borderland phenomena—"telepathy," "clairvoyance," and the like—they illustrate the subtleness of the process by which false systems gain success, and demonstrate the advisability of having men who can speak on such topics
